'U' Experiment Station Officer Cites Value of Research to State Farms

Declaring the best measure of the value of scientific farm research to be the extent to which the results of this research are put into practice by farmers, Dr. Andrew Boss, vice director of the Minnesota Agricultural Experiment Station, told some of the outstanding achievements of the station at the fiftieth anniversary celebration held recently at University Farm.

The degree to which research results are practiced by farmers to reduce toil and risk and to increase the comfort and satisfaction of farm living, indicate far better the station's value than the number of experiments conducted, the staff members employed, or the size of our laboratories, said Dr. Boss. Measured in such terms, he went on, the Minnesota station has contributed largely to the agricultural industry and to advancement of the associated biological and social sciences.

Among many outstanding achievements made by the Minnesota station during its 50 years of existence, Dr. Boss cited the development of many improved varieties of crops for Minnesota farmers, including hybrid corn, smooth-awned barley, rust-resistant wheat, and other crops that meet more satisfactorily the diverse soil, climatic and disease conditions found in our state. The station's fruit breeding work has given Minnesota growers more than 30 fine varieties of apples, plums, berries and other fruits, several of which have attained nationwide popularity.

The Haecker feeding standards for cattle and the discovery of the cause and prevention of mineral deficiencies in livestock are two signal contributions of the station to animal husbandry and dairying. To Haecker, McGuire and their successors on the station staff, Dr. Boss also attributed credit for spreading the doctrine of farm cooperation which led to the great Land O'Lakes Creameries organization, livestock shipping associations and the cooperative movement in general in which Minnesota is a national leader.

Some of the most fundamental and practical findings in relation to the control of tuberculosis and Bang's disease in cattle, have also been made in Minnesota's farm research center. Here it was that the science of farm management had its beginnings; that some of the most important researches in agricultural chemistry have been made; and that the renowned studies of Minnesota's soils, so vital to farming success, have been carried out.

A more complete and detailed report of the station's work is contained in Minnesota Bulletin 319, a special edition printed to commemorate the semi-centennial of the institution's founding. Anyone wanting a copy may have it free by writing the Bulletin Office, University Farm, St. Paul.

LET'S GET THE FACTS STRAIGHT

From the community's leading source of misinformation comes word that the city council has committed another series of blunders in proceeding with the engine purchase bond issue as authorized by the voters in the recent special election. As a matter of keeping the record straight perhaps it would be well to review a few of the fundamental facts involved in the controversy. In the first place the present council, as a council, had nothing to do with the injunction proceedings of two years ago when the court decided that the group in power at that time had assumed too much authority in contracting a debt for the city without submitting the question to the voters. In the election that followed the voters passed judgment on that transaction by electing by a very one-sided majority an entirely new council. In other words, as far as the voters were concerned, that deal was definitely shelved. The issues were clear cut and the result of the election was decisive. By the will of the voters, that chapter of the city's history was ended.

It seems strange that those who were then so enthusiastic about the city giving a bonus of three thousand dollars for the privilege of borrowing money at the rate of six per cent should now find fault with a four per cent interest rate, if that is what the bonds sell for at the coming letting. And on this point the chief oracle of misinformation should consult with someone better informed than he before he criticises the council's present procedure in offering four per cent bonds. In offering bonds it is customary to specify the rate of interest they will draw. Bidders may ask a bonus or pay a premium. In this case no bonus will be paid. Local investors, bidding for small lots, have already subscribed practically the entire amount. If a substantial premium is offered for the entire issue at the time of the letting then the city will pay less interest. Just why the council should be criticised for proceding in the regular way is more than we can understand.

On the question of a federal grant, and whether or not the council should have delayed further in making a purchase in order to get action on its application for federal funds, there is justification for a reasonable difference of opinion. The council did entertain hopes of securing such a grant and waited patiently for the federal government to get its program outlined so that an application could be filed. The fact that the first appliction blank to be released from the federal government's Minnesota office under the new program was issued to Thief River Falls for this purpose is proof that the city administration was eager to secure whatever federal aid might be available. On the insistance of federal authorities an engineer was hired to make the survey necessary to such an application. It was then that the council was confronted with the difficult time factor. If an engine were to be installed in time to meet the heavy load of the winter months then quick action would be necessary. Further delay, waiting for the action of government officials who were themselves hopelessly snarled up in red tape and uncertain authority, would mean that we would either be in darkness next winter or dependent on outside sources for our power. The council decided to buy. We believe they decided wisely. Others may properly believe that they should have waited. But there is no justification for the criticism of this council because the purchase of an engine by a preceding council was blocked by a group of private citizens, exercising their proper rights as citizens.

On this question of a federal grant there is room for a reasonable difference of opinion. On any reasonable question there is always justification for reasonable differences of opinion. But it is unfortunate that in recent years this community has been subjected to so many unreasonable opinions — so much carping criticism — the vicious type of constant complaining that accomplishes no good and merely tends to create discord and bitterness among people who are neighbors and who should be friends.

Work has been resumed on the post office and in fairness to Fred Gardner, superintendent of construction, it perhaps would be no more than fair to say that the delays have been due to causes beyond his control. For instance out of a carload of ornamental stone received here a month or so ago, forty pieces were broken. They had to be reordered and it took time for the stone hatchery to replace the pieces that were damaged. But alas, when the forty pieces arrived, eight of them were cracked, and this meant another delay. This last order is due to arrive today and if they reach here in good condition then — well then Fred Gardner will be surprised. The difficulty in getting materials is only one of several manifestations of a jinx that has confounded the contractors and retarded progress in the construction of the new building. But now that we know the delays are not due to the funny ideas of the college professors down in Washington we are practically certain that the building will be completed according to schedule.

A sign by the side of the road as you enter a western town reads "4,076 people died last year of gas: 29 inhaled it; 37 put a lighted match to it and 4,000 stepped on it."—Hanley Falls Press.

In exchanging four per cent notes for six per cent bonds the creamery has taken advantage of the present low interest rates and materially improved its financial status. With its indebtedness reduced to six thousand dollars this institution is now in a very healthy condition.

There apparently is no reason for a community such as ours to get excited about the government's rural electrification program. Not less than four good customers to the mile are necessary to the successful operation of a rural line, according to late reports from this bureau, which means that such lines out of Thief River Falls would not be practical. The whole proposition looks like just another thing for the politicians to talk about. Private companies have experimented for many years with rural electrification but even in the heavily populated communities of southern Minnesota they haven't been able to make it pay.

WHAT WOULD HAPPEN WITHOUT RAILROADS?

(St. Cloud Times)

Every sensible person knows the country needs railroads and that fact is being more and more appreciated, as they realize what would happen if railroads were so hampered they could not successfully operate.

Here is food for thought in an editorial in the Mason City Globe Gazette:

What happens when railroad facilities are lost to a community or region is being well illustrated just now over in northeastern Nebraska.

About two years ago, on the showing of unprofitable operation, the Omaha railroad was permitted by the interstate commerce commission to abandon a 50-mile branch line between Sioux City and Wynot, Nebraska. Much of its business had been lost to truckers and it was reasoned that the remainder could be handled in this manner without great sacrifice by shippers. The year of grace allowed by the I. C. C. was allowed to expire by the communities served by that branch line and the tracks were torn up.

Here we take up the story as it was presented to the Grain and Feed Review of Minneapolis:

"The truckers assured the townspeople and the farmers that they would be entirely able to fill their transportation needs. They pointed out that the bulk of the transportation service was already in their hands and that they could handle what little remained.

"Now let us see what has happened in this Sioux City-Wynot territory. First of all the grain rate by rail to Sioux City and the east was three cents per hundred from the farthest point on the line. Now the rate is 10 cents a bushel to Sioux City. Coal was laid down in the furthest town for 20 cents a ton, while at present truckers are offering to deliver coal to close-in points at two dollars a ton. Farm values have depreciated from 50 percent to 75 percent. Some farmers are 50 miles from a railroad. Homes in the towns erected at a cost of $4,000 are begging for buyers at levels as low as $500 and there are no buyers. Lastly the Omaha road paid $28,000 each year in taxes and this sum has been shifted over to the remaining taxpayers.

"This is not a nice picture, yet if the rural merchants and the rural community does not awaken, it is a scene that is going to be enacted in scores of towns that are today thriving trading points."

The moral of this little tale is that America must begin to give greater recognition to the important role played by railroads in its business structure, as a direct servant and as a stabilizer and check on transportation rates in competing agencies.

A VICTORY FOR FREE SPEECH

(Detroit Lakes Record)

All citizens who believe in the American principle of "free speech" will rejoice in the court decision which granted Father Chas. A. Coughlin, of Detroit, Michigan, the right to hold a meeting in Soldier Field at Chicago, originally denied him by a biased board of commissioners.

Whether one agrees with Father Coughlin's philosophy is not so important as is the fact that the court which rendered the decision had read a number of addresses which the priest had given and in his commentary of the testimony submitted, made this observation:

> The court has been unable to find anything in them (the talks) subversive of the Constitution or advocating the overthrow of the government by force, or anything intending to disturb the public peace or the good of society.

And after all, that is an excellent gauge to be applied in every similar instance. The free and open discussion of governmental principles and policies should ever be kept distinct and separate from an opposition to his philosophy of a form of self-government such as has made this nation a leader in world's affairs, and instances of unjustifiable suppression such as was attempted in Chicago are within themselves an indirect attempt to overthrow and disregard one of the basic fundamentals drafted into the Constitution.

Father Coughlin may never deliver an address at Soldier Field, as the board of commissioners have appealed the case. And mayhap the priest may now be indifferent as to his appearance in the Windy City, but we felicitate those who took the issue into court—and the jurist who rendered the decision referred to.

Let the principles of "free speech" and "freedom of the press" be always given serious consideration, for they are indeed two of the corner stones on which this government of our was erected.

E. G. HALL RETIRES

(Minneapolis Journal)

E. G. Hall, who retires after twenty-four years of service as President of the Minnesota Federation of Labor, leaves a worthy record as a servant of the public. He was a sturdy, watchful protagonist of the cause of organized labor. His efforts have been sincere, along practical, realistic lines, and he has not believed in promoting a fight merely for the sake of fighting, but only when necessary to achieve a proper end. By these methods he has been more effective in getting results than if he had been a constant fomenter of "class conflict." Antagonists have respected him and listened to him.

In his policy as chief director of the labor movement in this State for almost a quarter of a century, Mr. Hall has followed closely the traditions of such labor statesmen as Samuel Gompers. As a representative of labor, he has given much valuable service in civic movements for the welfare of Minnesota.

Sibley county has the lowest tax rate in the state, 41.9 mills. From the standpoint of some bureaucrats, this makes a pariah out of old Sibley—puts it beyond the pale, so to speak. To our way of thinking, Sibley county is to be sincerely congratulated.—Jordan Independent.

Checking of drivers' licenses, auto brakes and lights are always interesting and useful. The newspapers are continually reminding the drivers that they should take every precaution in the matter of driving, but it takes the highway officials to get action in the matter. We believe that a checkup more often would lead to good results.—Detroit Lakes Tribune.

MAYBE DUMB BUT NOT DEAF ARREST OF 'MUTE' REVEALS

Red Wing.—Beer ruined the career of a peddler of pencils in Red Wing. A transient, in a soiled white cap, heavy overcoat, his sockless feet in shabby shoes made the rounds of the beer parlors selling pencils. Apparently deaf and dumb, he chattered in sign language or wrote out his wants on pad and pencil. His condition aroused sympathy and business was fairly brisk. However, as he went from bar to bar, he drank up his profits in beer and the close of the day found him in such a sorry state that the police were summoned and the intoxicated mute was put in a cell. It was then a minor "miracle" occurred for when the "deaf and dumb" peddler found himself in jail, his lost voice and hearing returned with a rush and he raved loud and clear against the Red Wing police and their ancestry. A police car escorted him to the outskirts of town and the "mute" was sent on his way.

SERA Relief Projects Supplied Employment to Over 100,000 Persons

Referring to the SERA as "Minnesota's greatest employment producing industry", L. P. Zimmerman administrator, reported to the state executive council that between March 15, 1934, and Aug. 1, employment was provided for 110,000 persons on work projects costing $33,711,101.

Of the total expenditures $28,556,695 went for labor, $3,899,288 to livestock relief clients and $1,683,865 to non-relief clients.

The report was prepared by Mr. Zimmerman to give both the executive council and the federal government a detailed accounting of SERA activities, all work projects having been halted Aug. 1, to make way for WPA which has as its goal the elimination of the federal dole system.

The SERA program included a variation of work projects ranging from digging wells and sewers to public building construction, flood control development, highway improvements and other similar activities. During the period 6,437 projects were approved and work started on 5,937. Of these 2,350 employing about 60,000 persons were active when the shut-down order came.

Mr. Zimmerman pointed out that the relief work on this state-wide program was divided among 70,000 relief and 40,000 livestock relief clients with an estimated total number of 44,731,383 relief man-hours.

Is Pheasant Economic Asset or Liability?

Definite information will be assembled by the Division of Game and Fish working in conjunction with the University of Minnesota as to whether the ringnecked pheasant is an economic asset or liability to farm operations in the state. Numerous complaints about pheasants—damaging sprouting corn this year caused this action designed to "get more data concerning the food habits of this specie of upland game bird.

Eight birds sent in by Warden William F. Munch from the Jackson vicinity contained only waste grain, cut worms, beetles, alfalfa leaves and in one instance several kernels of seed corn from which the germs had already been eaten presumably by squirrels.

"These birds had been accused of doing damage and some of them were actually shot in cornfields but in place of actually causing any damage, an examination revealed that these birds were performing a valuable service to the farmer in the ridding of insect pests," Erling Swenson, director of the division, said.

Mercury Drops Here to Near the Freezing Point

Rains Friday night and Saturday morning further delayed threshing operations which have been progressing slowly in this section. The weather turned colder early this week, the mercury dropping Tuesday and Wednesday morning to near the freezing point, and causing reports of light frost in scattered low places. Another light shower fell early this morning.

DAMAGE BY BEARS PROVE TO BE EXAGGERATED

Admitting that bears have done some damage to cattle and sheep in northern Minnesota but stating that much of the damage has been greatly exaggerated "like Mark Twain's reported death," Martin J. O'Toole, chief state game warden, is back in St. Paul following a personal investigation.

Most of the damage alleged to have been done by bears occurred in Koochiching county, west from International Falls to Birchdale. In Mr. O'Toole's opinion considerable of the losses could readily be traced to wolves although "bears have taken a few sheep but not in the numbers reported by county agricultural officials".

Proclamation

WHEREAS in recent preceding years traffic accident injuries and deaths occurring in the month of September have exceded those occurring in other months, and

WHEREAS it has been conclusively demonstrated, through the conduction of the Minnesota Public Safety Educational Program by the Minnesota Public Safety Committee and cooperating organizations, and otherwise, that traffic accident injuries and fatalities can be reduced by united effort.

I, THEREFORE, as Governor of the State of Minnesota, hereby proclaim that the Month of September, next following, shall be and hereby is designated as the one particular month of the present year in which outstanding and especial effort should be made upon the part of all citizens for the voluntary and complete observance of traffic regulations with the objective of reducing accident injuries and deaths to the absolute minimum; and,

FURTHERMORE, I hereby urge upon all courts of jurisdiction, upon all traffic law enforcement officers, and upon others in authority, that for the whole and entire month of September extraordinary measures be taken to achieve full and complete conformance with all traffic laws and regulations which have bearing toward the prevention of accidents upon the streets and highways of Minnesota, and I further ask all traffic law enforcement agencies of the State of Minnesota to make report to me on or after October tenth by which is shown, first, the efforts made to effect voluntary observance of traffic regulations and the apparent effects of the same and, second, the punitive measure taken to require the strict observance of such laws and regulations.

Given under my hand, and the Great Seal of the State of Minnesota, this nineteenth day of August, nineteen hundred and thirty-five, A. D.

FLOYD B. OLSON,
Governor.

Attest:
MIKE HOLM,

Teachers College at Moorhead Opens Fall Term Tuesday, Sept. 3

Nearing the half-century mark, the State Teachers College at Moorhead will open for its 48th year on Tuesday, September 3, which is conference and registration day. Classes begin on Thursday of the same week. Reservations in the men's and women's dormitories are coming in daily at a rate that indicates an enrollment above normal. Those who have decided to attend should send their high school credits and dormitory reservations in advance of registration day if possible.

The faculty of the Teachers College has been strengthened by the addition of Dr. Victor S. Webster in physical science and Miss Aileen Schoeppe, who will be instructor of English in the College high school. They hold advanced degrees from Iowa and Northwestern universities respectively.

The Chorus

Among the early Greeks the chorus was a festal dance accompanied by music. Through the development of the attic theater the word came to mean the group of dancing singers who took part in the rendering of a play.

When Patriarch of Rangoon Dies

Death comes (as it must come to every man) with dramatic beauty to a patriarch of Rangoon, notes a writer in the Detroit News. To let the world know that a great man has fallen, his best pals and critics get together and build an effigy that is an effigy, stopping nothing short of 80 feet. After the figure has been fitted with glasses, a mustache, a sight stick and a suit of inflammable underwear, the patriarch is gathered to his bosom, somebody passes a light, and all the folk gather round to enjoy the nice fire.

IF AND WHEN

"An' phwat's a tin widdin', Pat?"
"Sure, it's whin you bin married tin years."

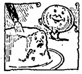
SOFT PEDAL BOY

"Has Jack told you that you must economize on the table?"
"Yes. But he never says a word about it till after meals."

TOUGH BREAK

"I beg your pardon, are you engaged this evening?"
"Oh, yes, I'm even married."

NOT THE COFFEE



Onion—I'm the strongest guy in the world.
Boardinghouse Butter — Don't overlook me.

IN OTHER WORDS—

"Did you say that I was a liar?"
"I said that you gave the truth absent treatment."

IN THE SWIM

"There are two types of wives."
"Those who make him wear rubbers and those who make him wear evening clothes."

THAT'S SOMETHING

"You always let your wife have the last word."
"Yes, that's better than having her so angry she won't speak to me at all."

Take care of the pennies and the dollars will take care of themselves. Don't take care of either and the government will take care of you.—Judge.

Capitol News Review

By A. L. Harris

The Northwest Fire College was in session last week at the University of Minnesota under the joint sponsorship of the state fire marshal department and the Minnesota League of Municipalities. About 300 chiefs were in daily attendance for five days, attending lectures and getting practical advice and experience in fire evolution subjects, fire tactics and strategy by J. W. Just of Chicago; Commissioner of Insurance Frank Yetka; J. E. Florin, superintendent of fire prevention, Madison, Wisconsin; Sanford Herberg, National Board of Underwriters Engineers; Theodore Hayes, Manager of Public Theaters, and Dewey W. Johnson, deputy commissioner of insurance.

Governor Olson was in Washington last week on a number of matters of interest to the state. He sought information on the federal youth program for Minnesota. The youth program had its origin here and this is one of the social projects in which the Governor is deeply interested.

The Governor also inquired as to the status of Minnesota under existing old age pension laws to benefit from the federal old age pension picture. It is extremely likely that a special session of the legislature may be called.

The Governor, in Washington, likewise made an appeal for approval of the extensive water and other conservation projects submitted by the Minnesota Conservation Commission; presented 15 projects prepared by the state planning commission, including projects for rural electrification.

During the fiscal year of 1929 the department of oil inspection was allowed $189,000 for all expenses. That year it collected $3,611,151 in gasoline taxes. For the fiscal year of 1936 the department has only $146,000 to spend for office expenses yet will collect revenue in excess of $13,000,000 at its present rate of income, according to George Griffith, chief inspector.

The Minnesota highway department has no jurisdiction over the bridge across the Mississippi river at LaCrosse, which was re-opened to traffic last week after a collapse of parts of the structure. Under an agreement between Minnesota and Wisconsin this bridge is maintained entirely by Wisconsin, according to highway department officials.

At present there are 47 municipally-owned electricity and power plants in Minnesota. Most of these have extended power lines into rural districts for farm use. Litchfield, for example, has 70 miles of "hi line" outside its city limits. At the same time there are six cooperatively owned farmer lines supplying rural power exclusively to farms, according to John Hay, deputy commissioner of agriculture. No other state in the union has this number of farmer-owned rural power companies, he pointed out. Only 12 per cent of the farms in Minnesota are supplied with electric current, Mr. Hay said. The average for the United States is 10 per cent. With federal funds now available for the establishment of farmer-owned electric plants, Mr. Hay's office is swamped with demands for aid in organizing co-operatives to take advantage of the federal aid.

Minnesota's SERA work program extended from Mar. 15, 1934 to August 1, 1935 provided employment for 110,000 persons at a cost of $33,711,101, it was reported to the state executive council by L. P. Zimmerman, SERA administrator.

Of the total expenditures $28,556,695 went for labor; $3,899,288 to livestock relief clients, and $1,683,865 to non-relief clients. During the period, according to the report, 6,437 projects were approved and work was in progress on 2,350 when SERA activities were halted to make way for the WPA program. This resulted in laying off about 60,000 persons Mr. Zimmerman states.

The works program included projects ranging from digging wells and sewers to public building construction, flood control development, highway improvements, construction, flood control development, highway improvements, construction of playgrounds, parks, airports, canning of meats and vegetables, etc.

The Minnesota Railroad and Warehouse commission has completed an investigation into the status of low weight wheat so prevalent this year due to the black rust. The investigation was made as numerous complaints have come from farmers to the effect that their wheat is not commanding the price it deserves.

Knud Wefald, member of the commission, admits that low weight wheat this year is high in protein content but that does not necessarily mean that this makes it a valuable milling wheat, although such an idea seems to be widespread in the wheat country. According to tests made at the state mill recently, wheat of 58 pounds weight gives 71.7 per cent flour; wheat of 59 pounds, 72.99 per cent of flour and wheat of 60 pounds 74.15 per cent of flour. Low weight wheat from 41.5 pounds to 49.8 pounds gave flour percentages of from 51.60 to 58.97. These analysis Mr. Wefald advances as proof that wheat high in protein content will not for that reason alone command a high price. He also pointed out that the processing tax of 30 cents a bushel is another factor which tends to cut the price on low grade wheat.

S. Paul Skahen, commissioner of securities has from time to time issued warnings to the general public to make inquiry of his office or of a reputable dealer concerning the value of gold mining stocks, oil royalties and whiskey warehouse receipts. To these securities should be added church and hospital bonds or notes, issued by a church or hospital operated by a religious society and sold quite generally throughout the state some years ago. Under the law, such securities are exempt from procuring a license and as a consequence the securities division has no power to pass upon their validity nor control their sale. Many of these securities are purchased because of religious convictions and the belief that there is a moral obligation to prevent them from ever defaulting.

HIGHWAY PATROL JOINS IN WAR ON SPEEDING DRIVERS

Speed to be Judged According to Traffic Conditions, Says Chief

The state highway patrol, which for years was prohibited by law from making arrests for speeding, has now joined forces with other safety agencies in an effort to reduce dangerous speed on the highways.

N. W. Elsberg, state highway commissioner, announced today that after a study of legal points involved, he has ordered the patrol to treat excessive speed in the same manner as other traffic law violations.

John P. Arnoldy, chief of the patrol, is working out detailed plans for his men to follow in combatting the speeders who menace other traffic upon the trunk system.

The state legislature of 1929, in creating the highway patrol, expressly prohibited the patrol from enforcing speed laws. Succeeding legislatures followed the same policy. This year, however, when the legislature gave added police powers to the patrol, it omitted from the law the words which previously protected speeders.

"The way is open for the patrol to prosecute speeders, and we have determined to exercise that authority", Chief Arnoldy said. "Modern motor cars are capable of such tremendous speeds that greater regulation is imperative to reduce the traffic killings on our public highways."

On the open highway, outside of built up sections, school zones and other special situations, the state law provides that any speed over 45 miles an hour constitutes prima facie evidence of driving faster than is reasonable. That is, a person arrested for speeding on the open road, if going faster than 45 miles an hour, would have to prove to the court that his speed was reasonable and not endangering other users of the highway.

"We are not going to set 45 miles an hour as a speed limit," said Mr. Arnoldy. "The patrolmen will be instructed to exercise their judgement and make arrests for high speeds in accordance with traffic conditions and other surrounding circumstances."

A conviction for speeding will make the motorist liable to imprisonment for up to 90 days, or to a fine of up to $100.

Catches 8½ Pound Pike in River Below City Dam

The thrill that seldom comes to an angler in Red Lake river was experienced Wednesday morning by Edward Snelling, son of Mr. and Mrs. D. V. Snelling, when, after a half-hour struggle he pulled out of the river below the dam a Northern pike 33 inches long and weighing eight and one-half pounds. Edward entered his catch in the fishing contest being conducted by the Oen Mercantile company.

Help! . . . Police

"Yes sir, Phillips 66 helps the police. The radiators on our radio squad cars were boiling over like teakettles . . . and mileage per gallon was as low as a racketeer's forehead. But we found the culprit—gasoline that just wasn't suited for hot weather driving. Now, with Phillips 66 we're getting cool running, plenty power, and plenty more mileage. For real performance at low cost, this gas sure rates a gold star."

REPORTS SHOW MANY RISES IN LOCAL BUDGETS

Other Sections Fighting to Keep Economical Local Government

Preliminary examination of local budgets, based on reports from many sections of the state, shows a tendency in a good many cases to increase expenditures next year. This means but one thing to the taxpayers and that is higher taxes. The time to prevent these increases is when the budgets and levies are going through the mill and not afterward. Where levies have been boosted abnormally there may be time for a reconsideration when taxpayers deem such action necessary, a statement from the Minnesota Taxpayers Association points out.

"Where levy boards have resorted to every means to keep levies down these officials are entitled to the commendation of every taxpayer. If levies have been unjustifiably increased, then the taxpayers who will be called upon to meet the higher cost in taxes owe it to themselves to fight for their own interests," James P. McDonnell, president of the association, stated.

"A recent report shows that automotive and gas taxes in the United States now produce over a billion dollars to federal, state and local units. Here is an example that shows how very many small transactions, when added together, yield great sums—in this case a billion dollars.

"But if these small sums total into unbelievable figures, it is equally true that small debts contracted here, there, and everywhere, result in unbelievably large debts. When little levies keep growing in 10,000 state units the aggregate increase is so tremendous that they result eventually in consternation to the great body of taxpayers," McDonnell pointed out.

"Small sums from many transactions combine to bring large tax yields; likewise, small levies pyramided on top of each other make taxes so high they grow beyond the reach of the taxpayer. The little things count—even in taxes," McDonnell said.

New Hats for Woman and Man Are Found in Street

A mystery of the deepest dye manifested itself at the Times office Wednesday when a local resident brought in a lady's new fall hat of a dark red color, together with a man's gray hat that was much too good to throw away. Both had been found lying on one of the city streets, and the question "How come?" will remain unsolved until the owners claim their missing headgear.

OPENING OF "U" SWIFTLY NEARING FOR SOME 12,000

Freshman Week Activities Scheduled to Open on Campus Sept. 23

Minnesota's great, annual pageant of youth, the return of some 12,000 students to the pursuit of knowledge at the University of Minnesota, is now only a month away, with Freshman Week set for September 23 to 28 and the first classes scheduled to open on September 30. Principal autumnal by product of the university, football, it to start Saturday, September 28 when North Dakota State will trip into the Stadium.

Minnesota's campus will be little changed when the students return, there having been no major additions to plant, and the faculty will be approximately the same as last year, with only four or five noteworthy changes out of a group of nearly 1,000.

All students who plan to enter the University of Minnesota as freshmen will be required to appear Monday or Tuesday, September 23 and 24, for Freshman Week registration. The tests, conferences, program making and the like, will occupy the other four days of the preparatory week.

Minnesota began its career as a university in the autumn of 1869 and this will be the beginning of its sixty-seventh year of uninterrupted service to the state. During that period, first following and then gradually coming more and more to lead the development of the state, the university has grown from a small educational outpost to be one of the ten leading educational institutions, rating among the first five in numbers attending.

President L. D. Coffman, under whose leadership such notable progress has been made during the past decade and a half, will begin his sixteenth year at the helm of the University of Minnesota. He will address the entire student body at an opening convocation on Thursday, October 3rd.

Bang's Disease Test Giving Good Results

That the Bang's disease eradication program is accomplishing splendid results in helping Minnesota cattle owners to clean up their herds, is evident from a recent retest of about 5,000 infected herds. Nearly 60 per cent of these herds showed no reactors on the retest, according to Dr. C. P. Fitch, University Farm veterinary chief, who said in a recent address that this fact should prove very encouraging to all cattle owners.

Up to July 1, 1935, more than 50,000 animals, or about 10 per cent, were found to be infected among the 485,000 tested in 30,874 herds, said Dr. Fitch. These 50,000 have been condemned and most of them slaughtered, with their owners receiving federal indemnity payments. Nearly 60 per cent of all herds tested were found free of infected animals. During the signing of new contracts required by the AAA, testing was stopped for two weeks, but is again in full swing. The new contract requires four tests and provides higher maximum indemnities on grade animals.

VILLAGE OF 1800 HAS NO VOLUNTEERS FOR MAYOR

Long Prairie—Who wants to be mayor of Long Prairie? Apparently there is no one in this village of over 1800 people who desires the honor, and as a result the office left vacant by the resignation of H. C. Wolfarth remains unoccupied with nothing to indicate it will be filled immediately. It is rumored that the council has approached several citizens requesting them to assume the duties of mayor at least until such time as the village elections are held, but thus far the invitation on the part of the village dads has been kindly, but none the less firmly declined. Recorder R. E. Beach has made a public proclamation: "If there is anyone in the village who desires to become mayor, he or she should make application at once." Former Mayor Wolfarth resigned last week, saying the pressure of his private business and the condition of his health would no longer permit him to continue as head of the council. At the present time M. E. Scow is serving as acting mayor.

MINNESOTA STATE FAIR OPENS DOORS SATURDAY, AUG. 31

Varied Program of Instruction and Entertainment Is Arranged

Thousands of exhibitors and concessionaires are working overtime getting exhibits in place for the opening of the Minnesota State Fair, Saturday.

The $25,000,000 exposition with record entries in all departments, and the finest educational and entertainment programs in history, is all set for the largest attendance in the past decade.

Key Day, Saturday, has resulted in thousands of bargain tickets being sold. Key Day tickets sell for 50 cents and are good for admission to the grounds; good for an automobile or admission to the Indian village; good for the afternoon automobile races and two rides on the midway. These tickets have a value of $1.20, the purchases saving 70 cents. Tickets can be bought at the gates Saturday.

More than 30 famous pilots are entered in the American dirt track championship races scheduled for the opening day. I. M. C. A. officials, under whose jurisdiction the races will be staged, will install an electric timing device, announces Leo M. Shell, president of the fair.

Sunday has been designated Music Day. The state band tournament sponsored by daily newspapers outside of the Twin City metropolitan area in cooperation with the fair management, will be staged in front of the grandstand in the afternoon. There will be no grandstand charge Sunday afternoon.

Two new sensational thrillers have been added to the entertainment program. Miss Faye Balm of New York will be shot from a cannon 60 feet through the air and caught by her two partners, Jack Eddy and Rudy Mason, as a climax to their nerve-tingling adagio dance. Capt. F. F. Frakes, movie stunt man, will crash his plane in flames as an added feature on the thrill day program, Friday, September 6.

WRONG GUESS LEADS TO $10 FISHING FINE

Waconia—Eddie Cotton, New York master of ceremonies, guessed wrong on the number of wards in Minneapolis and it cost him $10 in a game and fish violation fine in Justice Court. Cotton applied for a resident fishing license at Waconia and gave his address at a Minneapolis hotel. When asked what ward he lived in, he thought a moment and then said "the fourteenth." The license was issued to Eddie Cotton, fourteenth ward, Minneapolis. But when game wardens inspected the license on the lake at Waconia, Cotton ran into difficulties. One of the wardens knew the correct count on Minneapolis' wards. Cotton was brought before Justice Ray W. Meeker and fined $10 for angling without a license. Cotton said he came to be master of ceremonies at a walkathon.

187 JULY GAME AND FISH ARRESTS MADE

During the month of July, state game wardens arrested 187 persons for violation of game and fish laws. One hundred and six seizures were made with the arrests, according to a report by Martin J. O'Toole, chief warden. Illegal fishing was the principal offense in bringing about fine levies amounting to $3,062.40. A number of state game wardens were engaged in game bird egg rescue work during the month and some took part in pheasant chick distribution, Mr. O'Toole reported.

GOODRIDGE

GOODRIDGE SCHOOL TO OPEN MONDAY, SEPT. 9th

The regular nine month term of our local school will commence on Monday, September 9th, Supt. T. A. Dierud announces. Five school buses will travel the usual routes with one or two minor changes. A new and larger bus is being constructed for use on the long "south" route. During the summer the school building has been improved by varnishing the first floors and part of the second story floors; also some of the seats and desks in the high school assembly have been refinished. Various repairs have likewise been made in the boiler room and science laboratory.

New pupils in the primary grade should be six years of age by the following April 1st according to the new rule recently adopted by the Board of Education. However, as a matter of general advise or recommendation, it is better for most pupils not to attend regular school classes before they are six years of age.

The Goodridge High School again welcomes non-resident pupils. Text books will in most courses be the same as before. Thus students should avail themselves of the opportunity to buy texts from pupils who completed their courses previously. New text books may be purchased from the school office at cost.

Following is a tentative list of the courses to be offered in the Goodridge High School during the school year 1935-1936:

First Year—English I, General Mathematics, Business Relations, General Science.

Second Year—English II, Modern History, Latin I, Biology.

Fourth Year—English IV, Social Science, Geometry, Physics.

Latin is being introduced as a new subject in our curriculum. According to state requirements, a pupil must take two years of Latin or other foreign language to get high school credit for such foreign language. However, if pupils wish to take Latin merely for the language or cultural value they may do so by special arrangement with the school office.

Final plans have been completed and formal application has been made to the U. S. Government for a project to build a community hall or gymnasium for general community and school use. Thus we also hope to have a schedule of basket ball games along with other extra-curricular activities such as declamation or debate.

Following is a list of the teachers and their subject fields: T. A. Dierud, Supt. History and Social Science— Theodore E. Stall, Principal, Natural Sciences and Latin—Anita C. Erickson, English and History—Elizabeth Holappa, 7th and 8th grades—Anne Mandt, 4th, 5th and 6th grades—Alice D. Brapall, Primary grades.

PLUMMER

HIGH SCHOOL OFFERS AGRICULTURE COURSE

This year Plummer high school will have it's first course in Vocational Agriculture. According to Supt. A. M. Ripple it is planned to have two classes; first, Agriculture I, which will be general agriculture for all ninth year students. Agriculture One A is the second course to be offered and is of a more specialized nature for boys in the 10, 11, and 12th grades, who are interested in making agriculture their vocation.

The teaching of this vocational agriculture is not new, as the first Smith Hughes law was passed by Congress more than 20 years ago. This law provides for funds for this work; (teachers are thus sometimes called Smith Hughes instructors). At the present time the federal government provides one half, the state one-fourth and the local school district one-fourth of the wages for the instructor. This leaves the instructor under supervision of the state and federal government as well as the local superintendent. The state of Minnesota has 118 such schools at the present time.

Smiths Hughes work is of a four fold nature. First, the teaching of agriculture in high school has been mentioned. Second, the supervised farm practice of the students taking Vocational Agriculture. Each student is expected to have a farm practice of his own, putting in some of the improved methods studied and keeping a record of this. Third is the part time program for the boys from 17 to 25 who are on farms of this community, but not farming for themselves. Fourth, is the evening school program which is for the farmers of the community to get together and study and discuss the problems they are interested in. While this is the required work, the instructor will also take an active part in other school and community activities.

The Agriculture teacher is paid on a 12 month basis. The summer work consists mostly of supervising the farm practice, making collections of the materials used for class work and making and improving equipment. This helps to make the VoAg. teacher more permanent and a long time program may be carried out. This summer being the first in Plummer there has been no farm supervision. The instructor has spent the time in making tables, collecting materials and taking a survey of the farm conditions in the community.

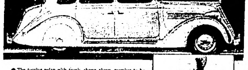
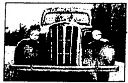
NEW NASH "400" REVOLUTIONARY IN DESIGN



● The touring sedan with trunk, shown above, promises to be one of the most popular of the six models offered in the new Nash "400," an addition to the company's present line of cars. Wheelbase is 117 inches and the Aeroform bodies, of all steel construction with seamless steel top, are built for six passenger comfort.

● Practical, as well as convenient, is the "service door," concealed under the hinged radiator ornament, which provides easy access to water and oil filler caps. With the oil gauge mounted on the dash, hood-lifting by service station attendants is no longer necessary.



● From the front the "400" presents a striking view of aerodynamic efficiency. Hood and radiator are mounted as a unit, the grille bars blending without a break into the speed lines on the hood. Massive fenders and large headlamps of tear-drop design complete the ensemble. Concealed spare tire, on all models, also contributes to the car's effective streamlined design.

Imagine doing a Big Farm Washing

IT'S EASY WITH A

● It washes big tubfuls in two to seven minutes... grimy work clothes clean without hand rubbing... and it is easier on the clothes. The one-piece, heat-retaining, cast-aluminum tub is in itself enough reason for choosing the Maytag, but there are a score of other reasons. That's why the Maytag is first choice in both farm and city homes.

The in-built Maytag Gasoline Multi-Motor gives dependable power. A step on the pedal starts it. ● Write or call on the Maytag dealer now. Prices still down— terms very easy.

PLYMOUTH OWNERS: Take a tip from the men who demonstrate your car—they favor Standard Red Crown gasoline

Live Power is first choice of Plymouth Salesmen

BOX SCORE

In a recent survey by a nationally-known research organization, automobile salesmen in 126 middle west towns and cities were asked this question by impartial investigators:

What gasoline do you usually use when you demonstrate your cars?

STANDARD'S LIVE POWER GASOLINE	167
Second Brand	117
Third Brand	108
Fourth Brand	87
Fifth Brand	67
Sixth Brand	54

"We have examined the data on which the above tabulation is based and certify that figures, as shown, are correct."

● The men who make their living selling automobiles know what it takes to put a car on its best behavior. So the fact that a big majority of them go for Standard's Live Power gasoline should be a good tip for you. After all, it stands to reason that a motor fuel which delivers more live, fast-working power to an engine is the gasoline that will get out of a car the maximum performance that the car makers built into it. You'll find that's true no matter what make or age of car you drive —when you take on a tankful of real Live Power—

Typhoid Vaccination Is Advised by State Medical Association

The epidemic of typhoid fever which broke out in Minneapolis this summer recalls to an older generation a time when a typhoid fever was no novelty in Minnesota.

Once typhoid fever was a part of every summer's disease hazards all over the country. Nowadays, except for a rare epidemic such as broke out in Minneapolis this summer, typhoid is almost negligible among the common communicable diseases, the Public Health Education Committee of the Minnesota State Medical Association points out in a bulletin issued today.

"The current epidemic also shows that typhoid has not disappeared of its own accord" says the bulletin. "It is always in the background waiting to take advantage of some defect or carelessness in the sanitary procedure that protect water, milk or food supplies; or the appearance of some unknown carrier who has escaped the vigilance of state or city health departments."

The source of the Minneapolis epidemic which has resulted, so far, in 164 cases has not yet been discovered although health officers are making a thorough investigation.

The distribution of cases has pointed to contaminated water supply in the opinion of some officials. To date, however, there is no bacteriological proof that contaminated water is the cause.

Physicians recommend, however, that anybody who is likely to come in contact with the Minneapolis cases of typhoid at any time be vaccinated immediately against the disease.

Among the 164 cases there are quite likely to be a few carriers of the disease; that is, persons who harbor disease germs in their bodies long after they have recovered from the illness. Sometimes these people go undetected in spite of the best efforts of everybody concerned and they are capable of spreading the disease unless special precautions are taken to avoid it.

It is inaccurate to say that the national debt has reached a new peak of 29,000,000,000. Peak nothing; it's a new stratosphere.—Indianapolis Star.

MINNESOTA HAS SECOND HIGHEST STATE TAX LEVY

Exceeds All but One State in Burden on General Property

Minnesota imposes the highest per capita state tax levy on general property in the United States with one exception, officials of the Minnesota Federation of Associations for Tax Reform pointed out today in an initial report on a study that is being made of property tax burdens throughout the country.

The state levy on general property in Minnesota for 1934 amounted to $6.41 for each man, woman and child in the state, Constant Larson of Alexandria, president of the federation, said. Only one other state had a levy as high, and this was Utah, with a small and scattered population.

Twelve states in the union now place no levy whatever on general property for state purposes, the study disclosed, and a number of others have only very small levies, reflecting a general tendency of the states to turn to other sources of revenue to relieve the load on general property.

The Minnesota Institute of Governmental Research gathered the data upon which the announcement was made today and in doing so revealed definitely for the first time Minnesota's unenviable position in the matter of state property taxes.

Most of the neighboring states have abandoned the general property levy for states purposes or ceased to make any great use of it. South Dakota, Iowa and Illinois all have quit making a state levy against general property, and the levies for state purposes in Wisconsin and Michigan for 1934 were almost negligible.

California, Delaware, New York, North Carolina, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Vermont and Virginia made no levy on general property for state purposes in 1934.

Compared to Minnesota's state general property levy of $6.41 per capita for 1934, Wisconsin levied only 13 cents per capita for 1934, and Michigan only 69 cents. Levies in other mid-western and northwestern states were: Missouri, $1.43; Indiana, $1.47; Kansas, $2.62; Nebraska, $2.90; Montana, $3.86 and North Dakota, $4.39. Utah, the one state with a higher levy than Minnesota, had a total of $8.09 per capita, due in large part to assumption by the state of an increased share of local school expenditures.

N. W. School to Offer Many Courses in Farm Mechanics This Year

In recognition of the importance of machinery and efficient buildings on the farms of the Red River Valley, the Northwest School of Agriculture will offer a wide variety of courses in gas motors, farm mechanics, blacksmithing, carpentry, field machinery, and mechanical drawing, during the coming school year which opens September 30.

Three experienced instructors will devote full time to the agricultural engineering work. A. M. Foker will present the work in blacksmithing, carpentry and mechanical drawing; H. M. Woolery, gas motors and tractors, and V. C. Kallal, field machinery and farm mechanics.

Work in gas motors will include principles of construction and handling of stationary and traction gasoline engines including timing, ignition, starting and lighting systems, carburetion, cooling and lubrication. Practical work will also be given in overhauling and repairing automobiles and tractors. Students in blacksmithing, will be required to familiarize themselves with operations necessary for blacksmith repair work on the farm. Carpentry work will include training in the construction of the foundation, framing, stair and rafter cutting and selection of materials, together with practical concrete work.

As a result of a recent state law boys and girls, who have completed the eight grade in organized districts where accredited high school instruction is not offered, may attend the Northwest School with all necessary tuition, laboratory and equipment fees paid from state funds. The only expense for qualifying students will be for board and room which are charged at the rate of $19.00 per month. For additional information, write Superintendent A. A. Dowell, Northwest School, Crookston.

Sailing by Dead Reckoning

Sailing by dead reckoning is a computation of a ship's position from her movements as recorded in the log. The chief items that enter into it are: Latitude and longitude of starting point or last known point, course or direction sailed as ascertained from compass, rate of sailing and time elapsed.

SPORTS FANS FOLLOW THE AMERICAN BOY

Boys and young men of this city who wish to improve their tennis service, their basket-shooting eyes, their forward passing talent, or their crawl stroke, can enlist the aid of the nation's foremost coaches and players by subscribing to THE AMERICAN BOY magazine and following the sports interviews and fiction stories that appear each month.

"When I was in high school," says a famous decathlon champion, "I read a track article in THE AMERICAN BOY that gave me my first clear-cut idea of the western style of high jumping. At practice I laid the open magazine on the grass and studied it as I worked out. That afternoon I increased the height of my jump three inches."

That was a long time ago, but today thousands of future champions just as eagerly follow THE AMERICAN BOY.

"This year," states Griffith Ogden Ellis, editor, "our staff writers have gone to the two greatest football teams of the country — Minnesota and Pittsburgh — for first-hand tips on strategy, blocking, tackling, passing, and the fine points of play. They have interviewed Jack Medica, the world's fastest swimmer, and his coach, Ray Daughters. Gone to Eastern High School of Washington, D. C., Eastern Interscholastic basketball champion. In the past they have followed the Grapefruit Circuit of the major leagues in Florida, sat on the bench at the Rose Bowl, sought out the famous runners, divers, All-American ends, tackles and backfield men, to bring their story of how to play the game to the young men of America.

"In addition to our fiction, adventure, exploration, hobby counsel, and vocational help, we shall continue to encourage young men to improve their game in every line of sport."

Send your subscription to THE AMERICAN BOY, 7430 Second Blvd., Detroit, Mich. Enclose with your name and address $1 for a year's subscription, $2 for three years, and add 50 cents a year if you want the subscription to go to a foreign address. On newsstands, 10c a copy.

Red River Valley History

By Wm V. Werking

A Pioneer Resident

By way of variety today we offer a sketch of Lyman Clark which was published in 1902 in a work by Geo. A. Ogle &Co. of Chicago. When the sketch was published Pennington county did not exist (it will be recalled it was created in 1910). But Pennington county was carved from Red Lake county and Mr. Clark, listed as a resident of Red Lake county lived in what is now Pennington county. His story contributes to the local historical record and, the writer believes, deserves for this reason a wider circulation than it has received in book form. The sketch follows:

Lyman Clark, one of the earliest pioneers of Red Lake county, resides on section 6, in Roxbury township, amid comforts and even luxuries of life, which were denied him for some years after making Minnesota his home. He passed through experiences which are not easily forgotten and he has worked persistently and made the best of his opportunities and is now one one of the substantial farmers of his locality.

Mr. Clark, was born in Ontario, Canada, January 12, 1842, and was the oldest of a family of eight children, two sons and six daughters, born to Charles and Harriet (Davis) Clark, both of whom were natives of the state of New York. Lyman Clark remained at home until he was nineteen years of age, and then worked at farm labor and in the woods for five years. At the close of the Civil war he went to Gratiot county, Michigan where he purchased a farm of forty acres and there lived for many years. He built up a cosy home for himself and family, with the assistance of his esteemable wife, and continued to reside there until 1882. Owing to his poor health he was induced to try a change of climate to northern Minnesota, and after selling on a week's notice he went to Crookston, arriving there May 28. His wife was not prepared for the difference of conditions which she found from those which had been her lot, and she was truly homesick. The settlers of the locality in which they settled were mostly foreigners and many lonely hours were spent before she became reconciled to the great change. Of the original settlers of that locality but one or two now remain on their first farms. Mr. Clark has resided on this tract continuously since locating there and now has a valuable farm, well improved, and under high cultivation and is surrounded by all the comforts of life. Mr. Clark was married in Gratiot county, Michigan, to Miss Mary J. Eckert. Six children have blessed this union, namely: Mary, now Mrs. Geo Turville; Amanda, now Mrs. A. Weaver; Charles, married and employed in Thief River Falls; Archie; Vernie and Nina. Mr. Clark served as chairman of the township board for three years and during his term of office he succeeded in doing much toward the improvements of the public roads of the locality. He is a man of much push and energy and is actively interested in the advancement and improvement of his community and has spent much time and money to this end, urging all public improvements in the way of roads, drainage, schools, etc., and his labors in this direction will be felt in the futre, as well as the past. One of the hardships of his early life in Red Lake county was going to and from Crookston, forty miles distant, their nearest market. This trip was made by ox-team going across the country without roads, and a most treacherous place was the old Muskog, near St. Hilaire, now drained by the railroad company. On one trip he and a companion helped ten loads out of the mud at that place and then, as they had broken all their chains, had to leave others there, the women and children crying and the men swearing at the dismal prospect of being out in the swamp over night. These conditions have now disappeared and in stead good roads, well tilled fields and comfortable residences and thriving villages greet the vistor to that region.

The year of Mr. Clark's advent antedates by several years records of pioneer life obtained by the writer from the state historical society, but it is worthy of note that he came three years after the group of settlers in the Thief River Falls community listed in Henry A. Castle's. By the way, the following paragraph seems worthy of reproduction here since Mr. Clark's sketch mentions the St. Hilaire neighborhood:

"Previous to 1879 that section of Northwestern Minnesota, east of the Pembina trail, the old tote road between St. Paul and Winnipeg, and north of the present Duluth-Grand Forks line of the Great Northern R. R., with the exception of a short triangular strip which terminted at St. Hilaire and extended from Red Lake Falls to the Trail, was a wild, uninhabited section known only to the Red Lake reservation band of Chippewas. From St. Hilaire, running in a northeasterly direction toward the Great Lakes was an Indain Trail, which connected the lumber camps of the North woods with their supply station at Crookston."

Evidently the section referred to hadn't changed much in the first years of Mr. Clark's reidence in the county.— Northwestern Feature Service.

WPA PROJECTS FROM COUNTY GET STATE O. K.

All Requests Must be Filed in Washington by Sept. 12

30-HOUR WEEK FOR WORKERS APPROVED

Big Project in Local Parks Approved by State Agency

Driving full speed ahead in an effort to beat the September 12 deadline when all projects from the state must be in the hands of Washington authorities, major developments this week in the Works Progress administration program to provide jobs for needy unemployed include:

Announcement of a state-wide 30-hour, five-day week immediately effective for all workers assigned to WPA jobs;

Approval by state headquarters of another group of 235 projects to cost an estimated $4,254,952;

Selection of six district supervisors of women's projects and the first allocation of $391,851 for the women's program.

Acceptance of applications for student aid at all of the state's 32 colleges and the state university.

In announcing the 30-hour week, which will supersede the previous order of a 140-hour month, Victor Christgau, state WPA administrator, said "this arrangement will give employment to a larger number of persons on each project and will enable the work to be carried on efficiently and economically without interruptions and lay-offs. It also gives the WPA worker an oportunity to devote all of his energy and ability to the task while he is on the job."

The applications for $4,254,952 which received the state administrator's approval during the week swelled the total submitted to Washington from the state to $32,104,125. The 1,148 projects, it is estimated, will provide 35,753 persons with jobs for a year.

The following Pennington county projects have been approved to date by the state office: Thief River Falls: construction curb, federal funds $14,461, sponsor $4,193; park improvements, federal funds $8,916, sponsor $1,551; construct curbs and gutters, federal funds $14,472, sponsor $4,193; construct side-walk, federal funds $19,509, sponsor $5,510. River Falls Twp.: brush, grub, improve cemetery, federal funds $530, sponsor $150.

With practically every county in the state represented in the program to date, Christgau pointed out that some are still behind in submitting sufficient projects to take care of their relief loads.

"November 1 is the date on which federal authorities have announced that funds for direct relief no longer will be available," Christgau said. "To insure funds that will provide jobs for the needy unemployed, there is less than two weeks left in which to get projects into Washington."

The part women on relief will have in the state WPA program took definite shape this week as the announcement of the first allocation of $391,551 by Washington for women's projects was followed by the appointment of district supervisors. For the Detroit Lakes district of which Pennington county is a part, Miss Evelyn Stapf was named.

Christgau disclosed that 126 projects to provide jobs for 4,230 women have been approved and submitted to Washington. The applications, from 54 counties, include cleaning, sewing, library, statistical survey, clerical, cooking, nursery school, visiting nurse and canning projects.

The week also saw the Youth program of the Works Progress administration in full swing as George A. Selke, state director, president of St. Cloud Teachers College, authorized executives of the state's 32 colleges and the state university to proceed immediately with the plans to give needy students jobs which will pay an average of $15 a month. The students, to be selected on the basis of need and character and ability to do college work, will be offered part-time employment on "socially desirable" projects to be sponsored by the institutions they attend.

COUNTY OPTION ELECTION SET FOR OCTOBER 14

Auditor Calls for Vote After Filing of Required Petition

TOTAL OF 1,296 ASK VOTE ON LIQUOR SALE

Number of Signatures Eliminated for Various Reasons

Following the filing last week with County Auditor A. M. Senstad of a petition meeting legal requirements, Mr. Senstad, acting in accordance with the state law governing the matter, issued an order Friday for a special election to be held thruout Pennington county Monday, October 14, at which time voters will be given an opportunity to register their wishes in favor of or against the sale of intoxicating liquors within the county.

The petition complies with the law by being signed by more than 25 per cent of the total number of votes cast in the county for the office of governor at the last general election. It bears 1,296 signatures, while the vote for governor in 1934 was an even 5,000. A few of the signatures were counted out because of duplications or failure to give addresses, but not enough to bring the total of qualified voters below the required 1,250.

The regular polling places will be used for the election, and the township boards in the rural area will serve as judges unless other arrangements are made, Mr. Senstad stated. The question to be voted on will be phrased: Shall the sale of liquor be prohibited?

Pennington county has been dry territory since before the adoption of the national prohibition amendment, now repealed. In the event that the vote in the coming election should favor the sale of liquor, each community in the county would have the power to decide whether or not liquor shall be offered for sale within its limits, and, if so, whether it should be dispensed thru a municipal liquor store or by licensed private dealers.

ONLY 13 CASES OF HORSE DISEASE IN COUNTY, IS REPORT

Livestock Sanitary Board Representative Makes Survey Here

That the prevalence in this section of the horse disease encephalomyelitis has been overestimated is indicated in a survey made by Dr. I. E. Jenkins, field veterinarian of the state livestock sanitary board, who reported Tuesday that there are only thirteen cases of the disease in Pennington county and a smaller number in Red Lake county.

Dr. Jenkins stated that the disease, which is carried chiefly by mosquitoes, rarely affects more than one or two animals in a herd and he advised treating sick horses with serum and vaccinating the more valuable animals as a preventive measure, the vaccination being effective for ten to twenty days.

While all horses in infected herds are quarantined, said Dr. Jenkins, the restrictions may be modified to permit the owner to care for his crops, with the condition that all horses on the farm must be kept from contact thru water troughs or otherwise with animals from other farms.

DANNY OVERHEARS SOME TALK

LITTLE by little the shakes left Danny Meadow Mouse. Not that Danny was no longer afraid. No, indeed! He was very much afraid. He still couldn't see anything for him but to starve or else furnish Billy Mink with a dinner, and of course he didn't want to do either of these things. Certainly not. But having had time to think a little he realized that for the time being he was quite safe. Billy Mink couldn't get at him because that knothole through which he had squeezed into that hollow log was too small for Billy to get even his head in. Had it been Shadow the Weasel instead of Billy Mink—well, it isn't pleasant to think what might have happened in that case. You know, Shadow is much smaller than Billy Mink.

So after awhile Danny stopped shaking. He began to wonder just where Billy Mink was. Billy hadn't made a sound for some time. He could shut his eyes and picture Billy hiding just within good jumping distance of that knothole. That ought to have been enough. But it wasn't. He wanted to know where Billy was. He stole a little nearer the knothole so as to peek out. He was very quiet about it. Yes, indeed, he was very quiet about it. He didn't make the tiniest sound.

Just as he got near enough to see out in the moonlight a little he heard a voice. It set that poor little heart of his to going pit-a-pat. It was the voice of Hooty the Owl, and you know there is no one of whom Danny has greater fear than Hooty the Owl. From the sound Danny knew that Hooty was in the top of a tree very close by.

"Now, how did he know that I am here?" thought Danny. "Seems as if everybody I fear knows I am somewhere around and is looking for me."

Of course this wasn't so, but it is no wonder Danny felt so after all he had been through. Hooty was talking in a low tone. He was talking to Mrs. Hooty. It didn't take Danny long to find that out. Danny listened. He listened with all his might.

"I've been all over the Green Meadows and didn't see a sign of Danny Meadow Mouse," said Hooty. Danny would have laughed at that had it not been for the memory of Billy Mink hiding somewhere just outside.

"Sh!" warned Mrs. Hooty. "It may be true that no one lives around here but unless my eyes are crossed and my ears are no longer to be trusted, I both caught a glimpse of and heard some one over near that old log just as I arrived a few minutes ago. When eyes and ears tell me the same thing I take notice. Some one is hiding right down there and I'm going to stay right here, until I find out who it is."

"What Are You Watching for Here?" Continued Hooty.

Vale of Paradise

Valparaiso, Spanish for Vale of Paradise, is the chief seaport of Chile, dating back to 1535. Immediately behind the shore the hills begin to rise, reaching a height of 1,000 feet. The city, containing a quarter of a million people, is built on the hillsides. On clear days Mount Aconcagua, the highest point on the hemisphere, can be seen towering above its Andean brothers.

Official Paper of Pennington County and City of Thief River Falls

It is fairly safe to predict that by the end of next summer all of the streets in town will be oiled. The few blocks that have been completed have proven that this form of dust prevention can be applied at a reasonable cost and residents along other streets are demanding similar relief. It is too late in the season now to start an extensive oiling program but plans should be made for a city-wide project next summer.

On October 12 the Junior Civic & Commerce Association will formally introduce to the world four young ladies to be officially known as Miss Thief River Falls, Miss Pennington County, Miss Marshall County and Miss Red Lake County. This coming contest ought to be a little more interesting than the average vote campaign. And while this is a popularity event, and in no sense a beauty contest, we're willing to wager right now that the four queens will make a mighty attractive group.

Governor Olson has properly called attention to the steadily increasing number of traffic accidents by urging the "voluntary and complete observance of traffic regulations with the objective of reducing accident injuries and deaths to the absolute minimum", and asking all traffic law enforcement officers to make a special effort during the month of September to secure complete conformance with all traffic laws and regulations on the part of the public. No one will disput the statement that most automobile accidents are due to careless driving and therefore could be avoided. Apparently the only solution to this problem is to inflict heavy penalties on reckless drivers and unless such a campaign is conducted on a state-wide scale it would not be effective. Mayor Hinkel states that local police have been instructed to co-operate to the fullest extent in this safety drive. If every community in Minnesota will do its part then drivers will soon be made caution concious.

AND ONE MAN CRACKS THE WHIP

We have heard many politicians view with alarm the concentration of wealth in this country which has given a few individuals much power. We have been told that it isn't right that one man or a small group of men should control a great corporation with the power such control gives them to influence the lives of thousands of employees. And maybe some of these fears of the politicians are justified. It isn't our purpose here or now to question such statements. The thing that makes us uncomfortably warm under the collar right now is the fact that these same politicians who are so fearful of the abuses of the power of wealth, lend their support to a concentration of political power that is a far more serious threat to the liberties of the American people.

Another session of Congress has now ended. Under the behest of one man, wielding an autocratic power over its actions, that Congress has appropriated another ten billion dollars to be spent practically as this one man wills it to be spent. But in this concentration of power the politicians see no evil. And why should they? This is their own domain. This is their bread and butter. Why should they who wallow in the public trough complain about the power of him who maketh their trough runneth over. We will wait in vain for the curb on political power to come from politicians.

It may be true that we need more protection from the abuses of power that accumulated wealth makes possible. But an immediate and more serious problem is the growing power of politicians. The world today is dominated by political dictators. Other nations, some of them highly intelligent, have permitted themselves to be governed by dictators to such an extent that personal liberty has ceased to exist. Such a dictatorship in this country is more than a remote possibility. Recent developments indicate that we are moving definitely in that direction.

WOULD RETAIN BALANCES
(Morris Tribune)

If a constitutional convention were to be called today to adopt a fundamental framework of government, is there any reason to suppose that the convention would adopt anything other than an instrument which would set up a federal government for general affairs and state government for local affairs; that would divide the functions of government between the executive, legislative and judiciary; and that would safeguard the citizens against the tyranny of too much government? Certainly that would be the outcome. Thus our present Constitution would be readopted. That balance of powers has provided the best form of government the world has ever seen, and will continue to do so. Monarchies, dictatorship and governments founded on classes have come and gone, but the American government has lasted because it is founded on balance. Balance is an eternal truth.

WHEN YOU STOP TO THINK OF IT—
(Warren Sheaf)

The AAA publicity department has announced that 37,500,000 acres have been taken out of cultivation for the production of basic crops under the AAA contracts. At the same time the Works Program administration issued a statement that President Roosevelt had alloted $22,000,000 to Professor Tugwell to buy up land and take it out of cultivation altogether. The program that far may be alright, but the part that we cannot see is the further allotment of $18,250,000 to the Bureau of Reclamation for the purpose of irrigating additional land in order to bring it into cultivation within one or two years. When you stop to think of it, don't you often wonder if this type of program can make any sense at all.

THE HUMAN ELEMENT
(Red Wing Republican)

Basically, the parole system is an intelligent and humane part of enlightened criminology. It seeks to recognize the fact that the punishment ought to fit the criminal rather than the crime. Of two house-breakers, for instance, one may be a desperate thug who deserves to stay in prison for life, while the other may be a man whom society can safely release after a brief period. The parole system is simply an attempt to adapt the penal machinery to such divergent cases. But any social instrument is, in the long run, just as strong as the society which tries to make use of it—and no stronger. If society, for instance, fills its chief offices—its governorships, its mayoralities, and so on—with self-seeking politicians who are in public life solely for what they can get out of it, then no one need be surprised if the instruments which these men handle are debased and perverted.

THE FARMER'S BURDEN
(Murray County Herald)

The thoughtless folk who so readily decry the farmer because he demands relief from his burdens, seldom understand or cares about the farmer's problem. Apart from all other things, just consider what nature puts the farmer up against. Last year he saw his profits wiped out by the drouth. This year, just as all looks well, along comes the rust to threaten his possibility of a decent income. The fact is that the farmer is, of all men, the world's chief gambler. He puts 365 days of toil against wind and rain and cold. One day of tornado can undo his whole year's work. In a week the grasshoppers can eat him out of all his profits. But he goes on fighting the forces of nature, and the world depends on him and his fidelity to his trust. When the farmer fails we all fail. Therefore when the farmer in the throes of failure, begs for a decent aid from all of us, we should remember that in helping him we are saving ourselves.

TAUGHT TO BE HONEST
(Princeton Union)

An elderly man commenting upon the efficiency and dependability of a young girl the other day made a brief comment that said volumes—"She was taught to be honest."

Just weigh those words for a minute and note what a multitude of virtues they cover. Taught to be honest—honest with the members of her family, not demanding or wanting more than her fair share of comfort and leisure in the home, not more than her fair share of clothes and money for amusement purposes or even for education—in the latter instance not asking the other members of the family to sacrifice for her advancement alone. In the school and the community it means standing ready to do her part, not asking for more than she gives.

And in the marts of trade, in the field of business, what a host of desirable qualities that phrase covers—a sense of honor in giving her employer full value for the wages received, an appreciation of her responsibility to meet obligations incurred. She does not use the money due others for her own pleasure; she pays bills when they are due.

And finally in her own home—honesty with the wage earner, not asking for more than he can give and using her talents and energy to make the money do honest service there. If the earnings are modest, she is not wasteful nor extravagant.

How much joy and peace could be brought into the world if the boys and girls could be taught to be fundamentally honest in all things. It is a simple, old-fashioned virtue but priceless.

WILL ROGERS' TRIBUTE TO COUNTRY PRESS
(Northfield News)

Some of the late Will Rogers' philosophic and humorous paragraphs will go down in literary history as masterpieces. And perhaps one of the finest of these is his tribute to the "home town paper," one of his last writings.

"Take away my ham, take away my eggs, even chili," said Will, "but leave me my newspaper. Even if it has such purely local news as 'Jim Jones came home last night unexpectedly, and bloodshed ensued,' or 'Jesse Bushyhead, our local M. D., is having one of the best years of his career, practically speaking—but they just won't pay him when they get well.' 'The county seat was packed yesterday with prominent people from out of town, attempting to renew their notes,' and 'Election ain't far off and everybody is up for office that can sign an application blank.'

"Now all that don't seem much news to you. But it is news to you, especially when you know the people and they are your own folks. So no matter how punk you may think your local newspaper is getting, why just take it away from you and see how you feel. The old newspaper, I think, is just about our biggest blessing.

"So let's all read and be merry, for tomorrow the paper may not have enough ads to come out."

When Will Rogers died something fine and clean and wholesome went out of America's life, and yet his words, and the good they did, will live to keep his memory fresh in the hearts of millions of his countrymen.

"RAIDING" IN AFRICA
Allan Nevins in Current History

There is an absurd disproportion between Italian grievances against Abyssinia and the Italian thunder of speeches, newspaper broadsides and warlike preparations. Most grievances have to do with border clashes between Italian and Ethiopian levies like that at Walwal. These are pinpricks. The French have peaceably endured much worse marauding raids on the Moroccan and other frontiers for many years. The British authorities in the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan, to use a more forcible comparison, have for decades suffered in far greater degree from uncontrolled Ethiopian tribes and have spent huge sums in patrolling their frontier without losing their temper.

They have done so because they recognized that the Abyssinian government has honestly done its best to control the turbulent raiders.

THE MORTGAGE ON YOUR HOME
(Long Prairie Leader)

We were talking to a man the other day who was feeling happy because as he said, "my home is free of debt, I owe nothing on it and come what may, I have a place to live."

We ventured the suggestion he was mistaken and that as a matter of fact there was a pretty heavy mortgage against his home. He thought the suggestion a joke until we asked him about his taxes. Then, too, he had never thought of the debt his school district owes or the bonds outstanding that have been issued by his village, his county, and his state. These bonds run into the tens of millions of dollars and they are not only a lien on his home but they are a first mortgage—because taxes to pay bonds come ahead even of a recorded mortgage.

We did not want to give him too big a headache so we did not mention the almost incomprehensible federal debt that is piling up, a debt that is now in excess of 32 billion dollars and growing rapidly. This all has to be paid and sooner or later will plaster his home with some kind of a tax demand. It should never be overlooked or forgotten that public spending has to be paid some time and that it can be paid in only one way—taxes.

"There is far more danger in public monopoly than there is in private monopoly, for when the government goes into business it can always shift its losses to the taxpayers. If it goes into the power business it can always pretend to sell cheap power and then cover up its losses. The government never really goes into business for it never makes ends meet, and that is the first requisite of business. It just mixes a little business with a lot of politics and no one ever gets a chance to find out what is actually going on."—Thomas A. Edison

Folks on farms up this way observed the Labor day holiday by working only 16 hours.

Congress before adjourning passed a law declaring that in the event of a war in Europe this country will remain neutral. Efforts in the same direction didn't work out so well in 1917.

A New Dealer, it is explained, is one who is willing to try desperate experiments with other people's money.

The sad thing in connection with the adjournment of Congress is that that body will meet again as soon as next January.

Editor George Christie of Red Lake Falls, who last week-end entertained Colonel and Mrs. Charles Lindbergh in his home, this week has a chance to scoop the other papers on some of the details of the visit.

A new premier was elected in Alberta last week on his promise to pay a dividend of at least $25 a month to every citizen. That sounds more promising than Minnesota's cooperative commonwealth.

The old congressional pork-barrel, we are reminded, has been graduated under the title of a flood control bill.

Commenting on the death of Rogers and Post, the Fergus Falls Journal laments the fact that it wasn't Rudy Vallee and Bing Crosby that flew to Alaska.

Huey Long further endeared himself to the public last week by killing the bill designed to supply funds to put the federal old age pension law into effect.

News of 10 Years Ago

John Lettres, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jens Lettres of Silverton, was awarded the state championship in the Ayrshire class at the Minnesota state fair this week.—Rev. Charles Gerlinger gave his farewell sermon at the Presbyterian church Sunday previous to leaving to accept a call at Fergus Falls.—The record number of 308 carloads of grain were checked at the local Soo Line Yards Labor Day, P. J. Keating, grain inspector here, announced. Funeral rites were held in Minneapolis for Mrs. H. M. Hicks, who died August 31.—Mrs. F. M. Mousley and son and daughter left on a motor trip to Detroit, Michigan.—Miss Jennie Skewis of Storm Lake, Iowa, is visiting at the W. W. Prichard, Sr., home.—D. P. O'Neill arrived from Minneapolis to spend a few weeks in this city.—Miss Evangeline Burns left for Seattle, Washington, to resume her teaching duties in the schools of that city.

Feather-Producing Geese

As feather producers all breeds of geese are good, though the lordly Africans are much harder to pluck either alive or dead. As for eggs, the various breeds stand in about the following order: White Chinese, Toulouse, African and Embden. These four breeds are the ones largely kept in this country for various purposes and all of them are excellent and serve their purpose well. There is a great difference in the strains of geese kept, and some of the Africans now seem to hold all leads in egg production; though as with all others it is more of a matter concerning the man who carries the feed pail than it is in breed alone.—Rural New Yorker.

Shade for Young Pullets

Shade is of prime importance for all poultry, especially during the summer months. Where houses are crowded and shade is not available on the range there will be a high mortality. A cheap and adequate shelter may be constructed by driving 2 by 4 supports in the ground and thatching these over with bagging or green branches. These shelters, however, should be cleaned of droppings at regular intervals.

Poultry Jottings

On the average, about 40 out of every 100 eggs set fail to hatch.

* * *

A cap about 3 or 4 inches above the brooder stove pipe prevents back drafts.

* * *

After the first ten or twelve weeks, both mash and grain should be available at all times to pullets.

* * *

At least an acre of land should be provided for each 500 pullets, or enough to supply green food all season.

* * *

The range shelter is a recent addition to the development of practical poultry production and, as the name implies, supplies shelter for the birds during the developing age.

State Laws Strict on Open Water Shooting, Says Erling Swenson

Duck hunters must bear in mind that Minnesota laws relating to open water shooting are more stringent than federal regulations of Biological Survey, Erling Swenson, Director of the Division of Game and Fish, warned.

Open water shooting is defined by the state statute as follows: "Waterfowl and rails may be taken during the open season from any place on land from a stationary or permanent artificial blind used to conceal the hunter when located on land but not from a permanent artificial blind placed anywhere in public waters, and may also be taken from a temporary but stationary blind or from boat or canoe propelled by paddle, oar, or pole (other than a sail or power boat) when the same is within a natural growth of weeds, rushes, flags or other vegetation sufficient to partially conceal the hunter."

Director Swenson said that federal duck stamps purchasable for $1 each and required in addition to a state small game hunting license may be obtained now at all first and second class postoffices. All persons over 16 years old must have a federal duck stamp in order to legally hunt migratory waterfowl.

Revised federal regulations do not require the stamps be affixed to the state hunting license as last year. It is now only necessary for the hunter to sign his or her name across the face of the stamp and have it in possession at the time of the taking of migratory waterfowl.

Abyssinians Inhabited Present Home for Ages

The Abyssinians, the Ethiopians of the ancient world, have inhabited their present mountainous tableland surrounding the headwaters of the blue Nile since before the dawn of history. In early times, says a correspondent in the New York Herald Tribune, they were more or less connected with the Egyptians of the upper Nile and afterward assimilated incursions of the Hebrews at the time of the Egyptian captivity; the Phenicians, from whom they are said to have derived their alphabet, and the Greeks who had planted colonies along their seacoast. Christianity was introduced in the Fourth century and gradually spread throughout the land. This primitive faith, mixed with many customs of Judaism, is the principal religion there today.

In the Seventh century the Mohammedans conquered all of Egypt and the Abyssian coastal possessions. The Abyssinians were driven into the interior mountain fastnesses, there to remain nearly a thousand years until their very existence was almost forgotten. About 1500 a Portuguese expedition seeking a mythical eastern Christian kingdom penetrated the country and entered into a relationship sufficiently friendly to permit the establishment of missions. To these Portuguese belong the credit for many churches, bridges and other public works constructed at the time and also to the fanatical zeal of their priests must be attributed the destruction of the ancient literature the Abyssinians are said to have had. This domination of the missionaries lasted nearly a century and a half, when religious disputes arose and the Portuguese were driven out, the Abyssinians again retiring to remain in seclusion until about the middle of the last century.

Capitol News Review

One of the popular features of the State Fair now in progress is the theater in the conservation building where George Bradley, tourist bureau director, is showing moving picture scenes of Minnesota, not only of the recreational variety but also of Minnesota industry. You see sheep from the field to the davenport and iron ore from the mines to the mills.

Minnesota extended an official welcome to the Concordia college band last week on its return to Moorhead from a good will tour of the Scandinavian countries. The young musicians played before King Haakon and Queen Maud of Norway in the course of their trip abroad. Elmer A. Benson, state bank commissioner, welcoming the band in behalf of the state, told the travelers they would perform an important task if they would impart to Americans the lessons in social progress which they learned in the Scandinavian countries.

State printing amounting to $500,000 was distributed among 135 business concerns in the last two years, according to a report prepared by an advisory group and made public by Jean E. Spielman, state printer. On this printing, the state of Minnesota saved approximately $15,000, due to changes made in the specifications and make-up, without lessening the quality of the jobs, according to the report. Members of the advisory group, appointed by Comptroller E. J. Pearlove, were H. E. Berry, A. H. Verket and Miss Dorothy Breen.

Careless smoking habits lead the parade in Minnesota as the greatest cause of fires, according to Dewey W. Johnson, deputy state fire marshal. Forty-five fires in July were caused by careless wooers of Lady Nicotine. Next in order in causes for fires were defective wires, starting 25 fires. Third was gasoline and illuminating gas explosions, numbering 17. Twelve fires were caused by sparks from chimneys, nine by overheated stoves, eight by lightning, eight by spontaneous combustion. Two fires were of incendiary origin and 25 came from miscellaneous causes. Mr. Johnson deduces from these figures that in July 95 per cent of the fires in the state were preventable. "Save lives and property by cautious use of fire," is Mr. Johnson's advice.

A state wide check of drivers licenses is also under way and will continue indefinitely according to John P. Arnoldy, chief patrol officer. In a recent 4-day drive through southern Minnesota 3,300 were checked for licenses, resulting in 64 arrests and 83 corrections of addresses.

Determined to take advantage of the federal aid appropriated for rural electrification, over 70 members of various co-operative and farm organizations met with Governor Olson the first part of the week and laid plans for procedure throughout the state for creation of power and electric plants for farmers' use. The federal government has about $100,000,000 available for this type of industrial building.

The commerce commission upheld the rating publication order issued by Frank Yetka, Minnesota insurance commissioner, last week. Mr. Yetka's order directed Minnesota agents to refrain from use of private rating publications, pamphlets or comparisons with a view of converting policies or confusing the standing of insurance companies in the public's mind. Mr. Yetka's order is the first of its kind issued in the United States and is a confirmation of a resolution recently passed by the National Convention of Insurance commissioners. It is in line with the state insurance department's policy of raising the ethical plane of insurance sales and thus protecting the insuring public of the state.

Whatever may be the cause, Minnesotans are drinking less of the so-called "strong" beer and more of the 3.2 variety, according to comparative figures compiled by Liquor Control Commissioner David R. Arundel for the first seven months in 1934 and 1935. For that period in 1934 688,469 barrels of 3.2 beer was drunk in the state. For the same length of time in 1935 this figure jumped to 791,416. On the other hand for the first seven months in 1934, 172,492 barrels of "strong" beer was consumed. For the same period in 1935, 114,293 barrels was enough to satisfy Minnesota's thirst.

That Minnesota takes care of its citizens and tourists on the state highways is revealed in the July report of the highway department just announced by the highway department. In July the state patrolmen aided 284,032 motorists in one way or another, acts including the giving of directions, delivery of gasoline to stalled motorists, minor adjustments and repairs, tires changed, cars started, taking cars out of ditches, aiding children across highways, giving first aid to injured and removing obstacles from highways. There were 14,057 motorists warned for various traffic violations, 4,419 tagged for driving with illegal equipment, 554 tagged for improper licenses. The patrol was instrumental in collecting $10,921 in license fee collections. 136 drivers were arrested and paid fines of $1,561 during the month.

Only Independent Republic

The only independent republic that has existed within the present boundaries of the United States was Texas. Until 1836 it was part of Mexico, and in that year declared its independence as a republic, which existed until December 29, 1845, when it was formally annexed to the United States. An attempt by Gen. John C. Fremont and others to establish an independent republican government in California in 1845 was not successful, and in 1846 it was officially made a territory of the United States.

Local Units Reduce Debts by 34 Million in Past Seven Years

That tax levies have been slashed in local government in Minnesota since the tax-reduction program started is quite generally known; however, it is not so well known that the local units have also reduced their bonded indebtedness, a statement from the Minnesota Taxpayers Association points out.

The debt reductions of local units have amounted to nearly $34,000,000 since Jan. 1, 1928. In the same period state bond obligations have been increased by $29,009,829 to the first of this year.

Debt reductions by counties from Jan. 1, 1928 to Jan. 1, 1935, were $12,294,390. Townships reduced debts by $1,190,503; cities and villages by $9,351,399; and school districts by $11,036,683, the report shows.

Auto Taxes Now Bring in Billion Each Year

Although but 16 years old, automotive taxes offer a good example of how small sums flowing into gas stations run into sizable streams when they reach the public treasury.

With nearly 25 million motor vehicles in the United States, gasoline and auto taxes last year brought in more than one billion dollars to be divided among federal, state, and local units, a report by the Minnesota Taxpayers Association states.

License fees paid by car owners alone amounted to $304,000,000.

"Small sums when combined bring large tax yields; likewise many tax levies pyramided on top of each other create unbelievable tax totals. The little things count —even in taxes," James P. McDonnell, president of the State Association, stated in comment.

Oldest, Least Populous

Newfoundland, the oldest British colony and the nearest to it in the New world, is the least populous of the overseas dominions, the stream of migration having passed it by, and after three centuries Newfoundland, almost as large as England, has a population of only 280,000.

City "Lost" 1,000 Years Once Capital of Arabia

Somewhat to the south of the pipe line from the oil fields of Iraq to Haifa and Tripoli, on the Mediterranean sea, lies a city of the forgotten past called Petra.

Not far removed from the Gulf of Akaba on the Red sea was once the veritable crossroads of the Old world, notes a writer in the New York Times. In the year 100 A. D. Petra was made the capital of Arabia. Its population was then about 50,000, and goods were brought from Africa, Arabia and India for storage before being transported by caravan to the Valley of the Nile, Palestine, Phoenicia and the Euphrates-Tigris valley. Of such importance was the city that the Romans built two roads to tap its wealth. With the fall of Rome, however, its doom was sealed.

The metropolis of Arabia was then abandoned except for a small number of desert tribesmen. The Arabs considered it sacred ground and danger menaced any one encroaching upon it. But in 1812 the intrepid Swiss adventurer, John Lewis Burckhardt, reached the city in the disguise of a Bedouin sheik and returned to tell of its mysteries.

A comparative handful of Arabian faithfuls still inhabit the city, and to this day it is only under the protection of British guards that visitors are admitted into its historical and almost mythical confines.

Christ of the Andes Is Most Unusual Monument

The Christ of the Andes is one of the most unusual monuments in the world. It stands at Cumbre pass, the highest accessible point on the Chile-Argentina boundary in the Andes mountains in South America. In 1902 Chile and Argentina had a dispute over their boundary line. Through the efforts of the clergy and the women of the two countries involved the dispute was settled by arbitration and the money which was on hand to use for preparations for the war was used for internal improvements.

Under the leadership of Senora Angela de Costa of Argetina the women of the two countries raised the money for the erection of a large statue of the Christ in 1904. The bronze used was that of old cannon which had been taken from Spain in time of war. The statue is 26 feet high and is mounted on a granite pillar. A tablet on the base is inscribed: "Sooner shall these mountains crumble into dust than Argentines and Chileans break the peace to which they have pledged themselves at the feet of Christ the Redeemer."

Detective, Investigator

A detective, in the proper sense of the word, traces crime or obtains secret information for the detection of crime. His occupation is directly in connection with infractions of law. On the other hand, an investigator, as the term is ordinarily employed, is one who is occupied in the field of research, generally scientific; one who is engaged in seeking facts. A legislative inquiry into certain facts may be conducted by an investigator, and the inquiry may lead to the detection of infractions of law. In such an instance the work of an investigator and that of a detective might be along identical channels, but it is an incidental channel for the investigator, and the occupational channel for the detective.—Literary Digest.

Japanese Chronology Confusing

Early Japanese chronology is confusing and, to say the least, inexact, says a writer in the New York Herald Tribune. This is sufficiently proved by the earliest histories which give the average age of the first emperors as something over a hundred years. Most confusing of all, up to about 400 A. D. is the mixture of legend and fact, of fairy tales and truth. Actually mythology is so mixed with history that no mortal man can separate the two, no one can say just where the supernatural ends and the natural begins.

POULTRY

PEN ROOSTER WHEN NEEDED NO LONGER

Poultrymen Should Consider Breeding Stock.

By Roy S. Dearstyne, North Carolina State College Poultry Department.—WNU Service.

When the hatching season is over, the flock is changed from a breeding flock to a laying flock, and only fresh, infertile eggs are desired by the trade.

This means that the male birds should be moved to separate quarters. In doing this, however, the poultryman will consider his prospects for breeding work next season. All those male birds which do not measure up to the owners' standard of type, color and breeding ability should be discarded. If the birds are below standard they will be a dead expense during the period they are producing no returns to the owner. Sometimes, it is necessary to remove the males because inbreeding has begun. In such a case new blood will be needed.

If the owner does possess some desirable roosters, however, and no adequate place to keep them, it might be well to build summer range houses. These are constructed at low cost and will answer the purpose very well.

In removing the male birds, it is well to keep in mind that eggs from some of the hens will be fertile 21 days after the male bird has been removed. A fertile egg will start incubation at a temperature of 70 degrees and in a few days the embryo chick will begin development. Such eggs are objectionable.

Another economic measure to put into practice after the hatching season is over, is that of culling. Every economy is needed to make the flock pay in summer.

Turkeys, Like Chickens, Good and Poor Producers

People often ask how many eggs a turkey hen will lay, and it is the general impression among those inexperienced with turkeys that they lay very few eggs, 20 or so during the spring, after which they go broody and from then on loaf. This is a fallacy, states a writer in the Missouri Farmer. The egg production of turkey hens is comparable to the production of chicken hens in that there is a variation in number of eggs among the individuals, and if not allowed to go broody, some of them lay all summer and fall and they have made production records in excess of 150 eggs per year. Some of them lay every day for a week, then pause. Others lay every day for a month and more without a pause. Generally speaking, turkey hens, not having had the broodiness bred out of them, will lay 20 or 30 eggs and go broody. If broken up, they will soon resume laying until 15 or 20 eggs are laid and go broody again, and if repeatedly broken up will continue laying throughout the summer if they are good producers.

IMPROVEMENTS ARE MADE ON N.W. SCHOOL CAMPUS

Install Sound Motion Picture Equipment in Auditorium

The installation of modern sound picture equipment and the opening of the auditorium balcony are regarded as the most important of the many improvements made on the Northwest School campus during the past summer. The former includes complete De-Luxe Ultraphone Jewell Wide Range-on-Film equipment with two Simplex projectors, are control lamps and a 10x14 regulation sound screen. According to A. M. Foker, Superintendent of Buildings and Grounds, the opening of the balcony will increase the capacity of the auditorium from 500 to approximately 850, thus providing ample accommodation for special meetings which have for some time been overflowing the main auditorium.

The dining hall building has also received considerable attention during the summer. Painters have redecorated the whole interior in pleasing shades of ivory, creams and tans. Additional equipment has also been added, including a Sani-Speed ice cream freezer, an electric cooling cabinet for the storage of ice cream, an electric refrigerator and electric toaster. A new cement walk has been laid from the Kiehle building to Robertson Hall and the walk from Home Economics in front of Stephens Hall, Dining Hall, Hill Building to the entrance of Owen Hall has also been relaid. Plans are also under way to pave the tennis court east of the Physical Educational building before the opening of school. On the inside of the Physical Education building a new hair drier has been added for the use of the girls following the swimming classes. The air in this new machine is heated by a steam coil and forced out by an electric blower to the various outlets. Eight people can be accommodated at one time.

Based upon the number of advance room reservations and large number of inquiries, school officials are making plans to accommodate the largest attendance in years. Superintendent A. A. Dowell states that registration will take place on September 30.

MILLIONS OF TOADS DESCEND ON MORRIS

Morris—There is need for a Pied Piper of some sort in Morris. Literally millions of small toads appeared as though by magic after a big rain recently, covering the streets and making themselves generally obnoxious. The superstitious will assure you that they came down with the rain, but those who scoff at the "raining toads" idea favor the theory that the hundreds of miniature rivers formed by the rain might have carried them from their breeding places and deposited them in the city. The sidewalks, streets and gutters in many places throughout the city were literally covered with the toads. They gradually thinned out in the next few days, although there are still hundreds of them hopping around the streets. Since mosquitoes which had caused a great deal of discomfort with their hungry hordes disappeared at the same time the toads appeared, there is little sentiment against the latter.

Height of Hurdles

The average height of the hurdles used in the jumping classes of the better horse shows is between 3½ feet and 4 feet. They are, of course, graduated.

Man Foiled

With all the suggestion for ways of rain-making, man has yet to develop a practical device for starting or stopping rain, says a weather bureau expert.

THATCHER WHEAT YIELDS WELL IN VALLEY THIS YEAR

5,000 Acres Harvested This Year; Seed Is Now Available

According to R. S. Dunham, Northwest School and Station agronomist, there has been a tremendous amount of interest shown in rust resistant varieties of small grain this year. Of particular interest has been Thatcher, a rust resistant wheat developed by the Minnesota Experiment station from a double cross. A single cross of Marquis and Iumillo (durum) and another single cross of Marquis and Kanred (winter wheat) were the parents of Thatcher, states Professor Dunham. Prior to its distribution in 1934, it was grown in plot trials at the Northwest Experiment Station for seven years. As a result the following information had been obtained before this variety was recommended to the farmers.

The average yield for Thatcher was 28.2 bu. an acre; for Ceres, 26.8 bu., and for Marquis, 22.7 bu. The average weight per bushel for Thatcher was 59.4 lbs.; for Ceres, 60.7 lbs., and for Marquis, 58.6 lbs. The average time required for maturity of Thatcher was 97 days; Ceres, 99 days, and Marquis, 100 days. The average percentage of loose smut in Thatcher was 0; in Ceres 1.5, and Marquis, 0.8. The average percentage of stem rust on Thatcher was only a trace; on Ceres, 18.0, and Marquis, 35.2. As an average of four years the protein content of Thatcher was 14.4 per cent; Ceres 13.8 per cent; and Marquis, 13.9 per cent. As an average of four years the percentage of dead spikes due to the wheat stem maggot in Thatcher was 8.8; in Ceres, 5.7; and Marquis, 6.8.

Thatcher is a beardless, stiff-strawed, common or bread wheat acceptable for milling. Approximately 5000 acres of this variety were harvested by Minnesota Red River Valley pure seed growers this year. A list of these growers will be mailed upon request. In accordance with the customary plan at the Northwest Station, no orders for station seed will be accepted until the annual pure seed announcement is sent out. This announcement will be sent to any who desire it after the seed is cleaned and ready for market.

Although Thatcher wheat has been the object of most comment, states Professor Dunham, Anthony, Rusota, and Minrus oats proved just as rust resistant this summer and Peatland was outstanding in this respect among barley varieties. Certain other varieties of wheat, oats, and barley were unhurt by rust in some instances but for the most part they escaped because of early maturity rather than any rust resistance.

Only Few in County Seek Hunting Permits to Date

With the prairie chicken hunting season not opening in this county until Saturday, September 21, only a few hunters to date have made application for licenses, County Auditor A. M. Senstad said today. He added that he expects to have full information relating to the various small game hunting seasons by the end of the week.

CAPTURED SKUNK HAS FINAL INNING

Olivia.—Two Henryville men, with the spirit of bravery predominant only in the rugged pioneers, captured bare handed an untamed, healthy and full grown skunk recently, and for awhile at least had things pretty much their own way. A quick grab resulted in the animal being lifted by the tail, totally disarmed. He was placed in a sack and later dumped into a barrel for the merriment of the spectators. Upon being lifted from the barrel, however, Mr. Skunk got ahold of the side of the barrel with his front feet and had a chance to straighten out long enough to enter a protest to the treatment. It has been officially reported that neither George Wacek or Frank Werish slept in the house that night, and that the course in skunk handling has been definitely postponed.

Use for African Elephants

Circus trainers usually regarded the African elephant as not being susceptible to training, but in recent years large numbers have been trained in the Kongo, where they are successfully used, not as trick performers, but as beasts of burden, felling trees, carrying loads, and the like, as in India and Ceylon.

$2,500,000 STATE ROAD LETTING SET FOR SEPTEMBER 20

Includes 11 Miles of Paving on Highway 59 Near Calloway

Bids on $2,500,000 of road construction projects in seventeen counties will be opened by the state highway department September 20, N. W. Elsberg, highway commissioner, announced today.

This is the largest letting of state highway work in three years and comprises the first group of jobs in the state's $7,500,000 regular federal aid program for the current fiscal year. The federal government pays approximately one-half the cost. Highway bonds will be sold to finance the state's share, as authorized by the last legislature.

Included in the first letting will be nearly 85 miles of concrete paving on which the cost estimate is approximately $2,350,000. Bids also will be taken on six bridges to cost about $80,000 and on eighteen miles of grading to cost about $100,000.

Mr. Elsberg estimated that about one-third of the work included in the September 20 group can be completed before the winter freeze-up. The remainder will be done early next summer. Projects are located in the following counties.

Blue Earth, Winona, Redwood, Martin, Freeborn, Norman, St. Louis, Becker, Grant, Faribault, Crow Wing, Chippewa, Pine, Pope, Stearns, Roseau and Goodhue. Included is the paving of 11.2 miles on T. H. 59 from Ogema to a point two miles south of Calloway.

Pelan Band to Sponsor Homecoming Festival at Pelan Park Sunday

The Pelan Band, sponsors of the Pelan Homecoming celebration to be held at Pelan Park next Sunday, Sept. 8th, has announced that numerous prizes will be given away to those attending. In addition, each old timer attending this celebration, who settled in Roseau, Kittson or Marshall Counties by 1905 or earlier, will be given an Old Timer's Badge by the Pelan Band. A Registration Booth will be set up on the grounds where all old timers can register and receive their badges. Senator Wm. L. Peterson of Lancaster will be the speaker of the day on a well varied and interesting program. J. W. Durham of Roseau, first sheriff of Roseau county, and M. J. Hegland of Roseau, first editor of the Pelan Advocate will also speak on the program and tell of early days. The Pelan band will give two concerts during the day, and a kittenball game will be played between teams from Roseau and Kittson counties following the program.

'MAN ON FLYING TRAPEZE' LANDS IN MERRY-GO-ROUND

Waseca.—The man on the flying trapeze swung through the air—but not with the greatest of ease—at the Waseca county fair last week, leaving a whirling glider swing at the height of 30 feet to land among the horses on a merry-go-round. Don Campbell, Morristown, visiting at the fair, found the glider swing, which suspends miniature airplanes in the air around a revolving post, not quite exciting enough. It is believed that he unsnapped the chain which holds the occupant in the swing seat and fell out when the swings reached a height of 30 feet, landing in the merry-go-round. The merry-go-round suffered casualties of one horse with a broken leg, and Campbell had a broken nose, a broken arm, an injured hip, and many body bruises.

Introduction of Guillotine

The guillotine was introduced into France at the time of the revolution, but similar instruments of capital punishment had previously been in use in Scotland, England and various parts of the continent. Its use in France was suggested by Doctor Guillotin and the first guillotine was erected in Paris in 1792.

Red Lake Falls Child Killed Sunday When Hit by Passing Automobile

Richard, four-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Cyr of Red Lake Falls, died Sunday from injuries he sustained when struck down by an automobile.

The mishap occurred at Red Lake Falls, in front of the Cyr home, when the child stepped from behind the Cyr car into the path of an automobile driven by William Halberg.

Halberg was enroute to Red Lake Falls after visiting the Kirschman field where the Col. Charles Lindbergh plane was parked. The Cyr's had returned to their home on the west edge of the city and the family was getting out of the car when Mr. Halberg's car passed. Mrs. Cyr called to the child as he darted into the road, but her call was unheeded.

Hallock Boy Does Well With Thatcher Wheat

Marvin Ecklund, Hallock, a junior in the Northwest School of Agriculture, obtained eighty pounds of Thatcher wheat in the spring of 1934 for a home project in pure seed production. This seed, planted on one acre, produced a yield of 35 bushels. In the spring of 1935 he planted 22 acres for further increase of this rust-resistant variety. The crop, now in the shock, again promises a yield of at least 30 bushels to an acre, in which case he will have nearly 800 bushels of wheat this fall. With Thatcher seed selling at $1.50 to $1.75 a bushel directly from the thresher, Marvin feels that his one acre project of last year was a profitable venture. He paid $1.50 a bushel or a total of two dollars for the foundation seed.

Marvin's success with his Thatcher wheat is further evidence of the practical value of home project work as required of all students during the summer months. These projects supplement the theoretical classroom work offered by the school specialists during the six months school year, and serve as demonstration centers throughout the Valley counties.

DON'T BLAME HORSE; ADVERTISING DID IT!

Tracy.—Everyone knows that it pays to advertise, but even the most ardent space salesmen have up to this time not realized that even horses are influenced by what they read. "Bangles", a very sober milk wagon horse at Tracy, suddenly became uncontrollable on the street and lunged through a heavy plate glass window of a garage. Half cut to pieces, the poor animal got into the display room but failed to loosen himself from his wagon. Since the accident the owner has been accused of everything from feeding the horse too much to disturbing its sleep too early in the morning. He has completely exonerated himself from all accusations, however, as he reveals that the horse saw a sign in the garage window: "Change your plugs every 10,000 miles."

Ernotte Hiller Winner of Valley Golf Event

Young Ernotte Hiller, the Crookston boy who surprised the golf experts by winning the Birchmont International tournament at Bemidji three weeks ago, became the Northwest's double champion Monday by beating Theo Morck, another young Crookston star, two up, in the finals of the Red River Valley golf tournament in Crookston. The battle culminated another fine tournament sponsored by Crookston's Minakwa Country club. It was the eighth annual event of the Red River Valley golf association and the meet is still growing. It drew 109 Northwest golfers this year, setting a new record for the event.

INDIAN JOE LOCATES BODY AT NINETY FEET

Excelsior.—Indian Joe, famous "body finder", again appeared in his mystery role at Christmas lake, near Minnetonka, to recover the body of Larry Lyons, drowned musician, after a seven days search by others had failed. The body was found in a depression in 90 feet of water, and would never have come to the surface except for Indian Joe. Dynamite and diving had failed when this man came to the rescue. Christmas lake is fed by springs, and the strong undercurrend carried the body to deep water, where the immense pressure of the water held it there. The victim had evidently been taken with cramps. His arms were drawn up tightly and could not be bent, while the lower limbs were limber as in life. Indian Joe steadily refuses to tell his secret, but invariably finds drowned bodies where everyone else has failed. He works alone, mainly at night, and denies that he uses diving methods. A full-blooded Indian, he claims powers denied to others.

SELLS FIVE DOLLAR BILLS FOR PENNY

Blooming Prairie.—Business was pretty good for four-year old Bobby Wagner when he started to sell five dollar bills for a penny, but his first venture in big business didn't turn out very well in the opinion of his parents. The son of Mrs. Bertha Wagner, cafe proprietor in Hollandale, near Blooming Prairie, Bobby found three five dollar bills in his mother's pocketbook, which had been inadvertently left within his reach. The pieces of paper didn't have much value in his eyes—not nearly as much as a big, copper penny, with which he knew he could buy candy. All went well on exchange until a customer in the cafe spied the "paper" in Bobbie's hand, saw that it was real money, and called Mrs. Wagner's attention to the fact. One bill was safely tucked into Bobbie's pocket. He proudly displayed a penny for one he had sold, which, with the third was totally missing.

PRESIDENT SIGNS FARM MORTGAGE MORATORIUM BILL

Gives Debt-Burdened Farmers Chance to Obtain Three Years Extra Time

President Roosevelt Thursday signed the Frazier-Lemke three-year farm mortgage moratorium bill, designed to replace the law declared unconstitutional by the supreme court last spring.

The measure permits debt-burdened farmers to go into federal court and obtain moratoriums of as much as three years on their mortgages. During that time their property, in effect, would be under court control.

Farmers are allowed to remain in possession of their land during the moratorium but must pay a "fair" rental, either every six months or at the end of each year, as the court may decide.

At the end of the moratorium, property which has been protected by it must be re-appraised by the courts or on court order.

The farmers then may clear their land by payment of the appraised value. But if they fail to do so, secured creditors can obtain court orders directing that the secured property be sold at public auction.

Mahnomen to Celebrate Completion of Paving

The Village of Mahnomen Friday evening will celebrate the completion of paving thru the business district with a program and pavement dance. Following an address of welcome by Mayor Val A. Franta there will be a parade featured by the appearance of the Ninth District Legion band and the Crookston Legion auxiliary drum corps. N. W. Elsberg, state highway commissioner, has been invited to speak.

Farmers Union Meeting at Crookston Saturday

A mass meeting of the Farmers union will be held at the city hall in Crookston Saturday at 2 o'clock, it was announced this week. E. E. Kennedy, national secretary of the organization, will discuss the Frazier-Lemke refinancing bill and other national legislation.

The "Courting Stick"

Gone and almost forgotten is the "courting stick" of old New England. It was a hollow stick about an inch in diameter and eight feet long, fitted with mouth-and-earpieces, through which sweethearts carried on secret conversations while seated on opposite sides of the fireplace in the presence of the family.—Collier's Weekly.

Farmer-Labor Rally Is Planned at Cross Lake for Sunday, Sept. 8th

The executive committee of the Farmer-Labor association of Polk county is arranging a Farmer-Labor rally to be held at Cross lake near Fosston Sunday, Sept. 8.

According to George Hagen, secretary of the F-L association the speakers will be Wm. Lemke, North Dakota congressman and co-author of the various Frazier-Lemke farm relief bills; Harry H. Peterson, attorney general of Minnesota; R. T. Buckler, ninth district congressman; Senator H. A. Bridgeman of Beltrami county, Senator H. F. Sprung of Norman county; and Representative J. O. Melby and Gustaf Erickson of the 65th and 62nd legislative districts.

There will be band and other music, and other entertainment on the program. In addition there will be a sports program featured by a tug-of-war between the Swedes and Norwegians. Loud speaker facilities will be installed. There will be refreshments and coffee available on the grounds and all are urged to bring their lunch and spend the day.

Operator of Fertile Dry Cleaning Plant Is Explosion Victim

Explosion of gasoline fluids in a dry-cleaning plant of Fertile Thursday evening brought death to the plant's operator, destroyed the building and shook other nearby structures.

Adolph Peirson, 1, his body a flaming torch, was thrown through the wall of the building, as the plant blew up and the entire structure burst into flames. More than three-fourths of his body burned, he died early Friday morning in a Crookston hospital, where he was taken after first aid treatment at a physician's office.

The cleaning plant, which Mr. Peirson had operated in conjunction with his tailor shop, was in a small building to the rear of the tailor shop, which fronts on the main street of the village.

The explosion, which occurred shortly after nine p. m., Thursday, threw Mr. Peirson six feet in front of the building, his clothes and body in flames and ignited the entire structure instantly.

Astrid, Queen of Belgium, Killed in Motor Accident

Impressive funeral rites were held Tuesday in Brussels, Belgium for Astrid, 29-year-old queen of the Belgians, who was fatally injured in Switzerland last Thursday when an automobile driven by her husband, King Leopold, swerved off a country road and hit a tree. She died within five minutes in the arms of the king, who was slightly injured.

Red River Valley History

By Wm V. Werking

More About the Chippewas

Many patterns make up the historical fabric. In compiling a balanced record we must consider each phase of historical activity. In this region Indian life and lore are conspicuous.

Recent governmental moves in the interest of the Chippewa, including inauguration of the self-government system and payment of cash allotments, has given the status of the Chippewa in Minnesota current interest. While Times readers are too close to the Red Lake reservation scene to be actively curious, a more or less academic study of the Chippewa situation would seem to be pertinent at this time in this series. The writer recently encountered a magazine article in which interesting observations concerning the Chippewa are made.

First, the magazine writer directs attention to the small number of Sioux in the state and briefly explains that the Chippewa drove the Sioux south and that their own hostility—Sioux hostility, we mean—eventually caused them to be driven from the state. He reminds readers that the Chippewa fought little with the whites.

"Meanwhile," he says, "the Chippewa tried the opposite tactics, an atempt to reason with the Great Father as he manifested himself to them in the guise of congressional committees, land agents, and so on. The result of this patient policy, though not so prompt and decisive as that brought about by the bold play of the Sioux, have been almost equally disappointing. The scandals of the land grab at White Earth, for example, which was to have been an Indian Utopia, make any sensitive Minnesotan blush.

"However, the Chippewas survive. A day of more intelligent policy seems to be dawning. Their Pigeon River home is enviable for its natural beauty; the curious visitor will find them there, and at White Earth, Mille Lacs Lake, Red Lake, Leech Lake, and other scattered places, living in various degrees of civilization, sometimes progressive and industrious, again in sloth and dirt. Having much to mourn, they have reason to be slothful.

"But their birch-bark huts, their wild rice harvesting, their porcupine-quill embroidery, and their picturesque appearance never fail to excite interest; nor their pagan burying grounds, where little houses are made for the souls of the departed to live in, set in gardens adorned with colored pebbles and shells. At Cass Lake the art of intricate flat braiding survives among some of the women; a braided rug from their hands is unequaled in its craftsmanship and taste for color. I hope this art will not die for lack of young learners. An Indian legacy that will not die, however is their geographical names."

The author of the article then explains that Chippewa christened Mississippi. He says, "Even the mighty Mississippi, 'Great River,' was given its name by these canoe paddlers at its source. Indian practicality is expressed in such names as Mahnomen, 'Wild Rice,' Menhaga, 'Blueberry', or Watab, 'Tamarack Root Fibers,' used in sewing birch bark together for hut or canoe. Their humor, casual and woodsy, crops up in such names as Winnibigoshish, 'Miserable-Wretched-Dirty-Water,' or the borrowed term Koochiching, 'Somewhere or Other a River and Lake'."

We are told that lumbering chiefly disturbed the Chippewa while agriculture was the major enemy of the Sioux. We read:"

"Thus, when the white man came, he found the Chippewa—living in hemispherical birch-bark huts, traveling in canoes; and—the Sioux, living in conical buffalo-hide tepees, and riding on ponies, the woods Indian and the prairie Indian. While the lumbermans' ax advanced into the domain of the one, the farmer's plow advanced into that of the other. The plow proved to be the deadlier weapon.

The article presents northern Minnesota, the wonderland of wealth and pleasure—wealth in natural resources and pleasure in outdoor charms and scenic beauties. But as distance lends enchantment, conversely proximity breeds familiarity and probable lack of appreciation. So Times readers cannot be expected to enthuse greatly over their good fortune in being residents of this wonderland. Yet it is well, perhaps, that they are told occasionally about it. Anyway, the rest of the world know about Minnesota's wonders. — Northwestern Feature Service.

LEAFLET ON CONTROL OF BOXELDER BUGS

Facts about boxelder bugs, which disturb householders so mightily during the fall months, are given in a folder recently issued by the Agricultural Extension Division, University Farm, A. G. Ruggles, state entomologist and professor of entomology, says the boxelder bug is a plague rather than a pest, meaning that it is more annoying than harmful.

Several suggestions for controlling the bugs are described, including the use of pyrethrum sprays. Anyone wishing a free copy of the leaflet should ask his county agent or write the Bulletin Office, University Farm, St. Paul, for Folder 52, "Boxelder Bug."

PLUMMER ADOPTS SIX YEAR HIGH SCHOOL PLAN

The Plummer school opened with enrollment and registration on Monday, Sept. 2.

The high school this year will be conducted as a six-year high school. This means that all the work of the 7th and 8th grades will be departmentalized in the same way that work of the four year high school has been conducted in the past. The curriculum has been expanded to give those in the 10th, 11th, and 12th grades considerable choice in the subjects selected. At widely separated points on the prairies, says Nature Magazine, you find outcrops of sandstone, forming cliffs or buttes, and here you are sure to find in the portholes or on ledges the brick red eggs of that most splendid of all our birds of prey—the prairie falcon. A bird of marvelous speed and indomitable courage, this little falcon typifies the wild freedom of the great plains. Less frequently you come upon the eyries of the majestic golden eagle. The nests, which are often used for generations, are added to, year after year, until the material composing them would fill the body of a wagon.

SWEDISH SANDWICHES for summer snacks

WHATEVER Swedes do they believe in doing well, be it the building of bridges, constructing canals, founding universities or—simply making sandwiches. To the average American who is accustomed to snatch a cup of mocha and a ham on rye for lunch, the making of a sandwich may seem a negligible culinary achievement. But not so with the Swedes! To them sandwich making is a fine art and sandwich eating a national institution.

So here's a tip from the Swedes to the American housewife who wants to be prepared for those summer guests who always seem to drop in at the very moment when her cupboard is bare. Keep plenty of good bread and butter on hand. Stock your refrigerator with refreshing fruit juices and other drinks, and your pantry with a variety of canned fish, vegetables and meats. Then you can sit back at leisure and enjoy the breeze, serene in the knowledge that you will never be caught unawares.

Secrets from a Swedish Chef

"Swedish sandwich making is largely a matter of color combination and artistic arrangement in addition to the delicious taste," declares Paul Moll, chief chef on the S.S. Gripsholm of the Swedish American Line.

Rounds of brown bread or white toast, thickly spread with unsalted butter, form the basis of most Swedish sandwiches. Hard native knäkebröd also is used. Spreads of chopped meat, anchovies or egg yolks, strips of smoked fish, discreet trimmings of capers or dill, make tasty morsels fit for a king. Swedish sandwiches are open like the face of a grandfather's clock, and as cheerful and gay as summer flowers.

Hearty Food for Sportsmen

After tennis or golf or a vigorous swim, folks simply aren't enthusiastic about thin "two-by-threes" with a sparse cream spread. They want something hearty that will stick to their ribs. For the purpose this beef sandwich seems just about right:

Beef Sandwich: Cover rounds of lightly buttered brown bread with seasoned chopped canned beef. In the center of each sandwich place a mound of grated egg yolk, garnished with a ring of chopped canned anchovies. Radiating from the center, arrange Vs of chopped onions alternating with stripe of chopped capers.

Fancy Fish Sandwiches

"The Swede has an eye for color," says Chef Moll, "and even sardines must be jazzed up a bit." Here are some fish sandwiches which will appeal to your eye as well as to your palate:

Sardine Sandwich: Bone and skin half a Norwegian sardine, lay it on a round of white buttered toast, and garnish it with chopped lettuce and thin fancy shaped radish slices.

Smoked Salmon and Dill Sandwich: Butter crisp knäkebröd and cover it with parallel stripe of smoked salmon, so placed that the butter shows between. Sprinkle chopped dill pickle across the center.

Egg and Anchovy Sandwich: Sprinkle brown bread with a center of chopped egg yolk and radiate from this center pieces of canned anchovy. This is another fine combination for a summer snack.*

State Physicians Call Hay Fever and Asthma Symptoms of One Disease

A disease which takes many forms and affects about 12,000,000 people in the United States is getting a great deal of attention in medical literature these days.

It isn't a new disease but the fact that many old maladies such as asthma, hay fever, excema and even some gastro intestinal troubles are all forms of one disease is a fairly recent medical discovery according to a bulletin issued today by the Public Health Education Committee of the Minnesota State Medical Association. This disease is called for convenience "allergy"

It is of especial interest at this time of year because the weeds, grasses and flowers whose pollen provokes hay fever in people who are sensitive to pollens are now getting ready to blossom Minnesota's fields and roadsides.

Allergy is known to be inherited and not acquired according to the physicians' bulletin. That accounts for the fact that some people have it and others do not. The inheritance appears to follow the Mendelian law, though it does not mean that individuals necessarily inherit sensitivity to the same substance. Instead they inherit a tendency to become sensitive to certain substances or allergens if they come into sufficient contact with them. Thus a child born of an asthmatic parent may develop a sensitivity to ragweed if it is exposed to large doses of ragweed pollen and that means that he will have hay fever in due course of time. Or perhaps he will become sensitive to some food or to some other dust in the air and the symptoms of the sensitivity will vary.

Treatment depends upon finding by means of skin tests and an investigation into the contact of the individual and his family history. When the offending substance is found it is sometimes possible to avoid it. If avoidance is not possible then it is necessary to try to de-sensitize the patient to the substance.

Americans intending to go to Ethiopia to fight for Haile Selassie might better stay at home and continue to fight for recovery.—

Fruit of Many Wild Plants Safe to Eat

Many of Minnesota's wild fruits and berries are not poisonous to humans and could safely be used for food by persons or families who happened to like the taste of them. This fact has been brought out by L. Sando, of the University Farm division of horticulture, who has made an extensive study of wild and cultivated plants to learn which ones are safe for eating. Surprisingly few Minnesota plants, he says, are actually poisonous.

The Juneberry is one wild fruit much used fresh and for canning. It also makes a fine beverage. Berries of the Japanese barberry are excellent when candied or jellied, or may be used as a dried sweetmeat. This is not the same as the common barberry which harbors black stem rust of wheat. Several species of wild cherries are edible, two of especial merit being the fruits of the May Day tree and the flowering almond. Black haw berries are sweet and well-flavored, particularly after a light frost. The highbush cranberry is an outstanding fruit for sauce and jelly.

A long list of the edible fruits turned up by Mr. Sando in his study has been published in The Minnesota Horticulturist. Common and scientific names are given, along with descriptions and suggestions for use. An 8-page reprint, containing this list, may be had free by writing the Bulletin Office, University Farm, St. Paul.

THROUGH A Woman's Eyes

By JEAN NEWTON

THE DESERTED BRIDE WAS LUCKY

A BRIDE finds herself stranded in Pittsburgh with a five-dollar bill.

Married in New York, she was on her way with her husband to his parents' home in Missouri when they stopped over in Pittsburgh. They had been married four days.

As the time drew near for leaving Pittsburgh, the man told her he was going out for a few minutes, and tucked a five-dollar bill into her purse. But he never came back.

One of our readers sends us the press announcement with words of shock and outrage. "How awful for the poor girl," she writes. Her thoughts are all of pity for the deserted bride having lost her husband on her honeymoon.

My reaction, however, would be one of rejoicing. I should be inclined to congratulate the deserted bride for losing the man so quickly and so easily.

Naturally, her position is unpleasant and unenviable. That what should be the happiest time in a woman's life should turn out in disappointment and disillusionment is very regrettable.

But one is impelled to think how much worse it might have been, the girl's initial mistake being what it was. Having chosen unwisely, or let us say having been deceived in her man, what better luck than to have him tire after four days? Had he waited four years, how much more deeply would it have engraved itself upon her life.

So, I can't be sorry that man left her so soon. I think the deserted bride was lucky.

The origin of the derby hat is traced to the fact that the rather eccentric Lord Derby of England caused a hat to be made for himself from a silk hat, with the brim slightly stiffened and rolled.

Radio Control of Airplane

Radio control of an airplane is the same as any radio control in a basic machine. It works by a series of solenoids, each of which is, in turn, actuated by different series of radio impulses controlled by a transmitter on the ground. For stability and straight flights, such a plane is usually equipped with gyroscopes.

Life Near North, South Poles

In the inner Arctic regions there are several species of higher animals, as, for instance, the reindeer and the musk ox, also the polar bare and the lemming. Besides these there are several predatory animals and a number of lower forms, such as land birds, beetles, etc. In the Antarctic zone, lacking vegetation, all higher land animals are lacking. Of lower animals, besides some semi-microscopic ones, only a wingless mosquito is known.

Muscle Bound

Several conditions are described by the term muscle bound, but perhaps the commonest is that by which muscles, through constant practice, are trained to oppose one another rather than to act together in efficient work. Thus, when a muscle is called into play involuntarily its opponent also contracts and the result is less efficient action. The condition can obviously be altered first by rest and then more efficient training of the muscles.

CORN GIVES

"GIVE!" says the jazz band leader. "Give," says the boss—give us all you've got. Remember the song you used to sing in kindergarten, "Give, said the little stream, as it wandered down the hill"?

To give, you've got to have—whether it's a crooning radio voice or ability for work. If you have energy — then you've got something. Fred Astaire has it, so has Ginger Rogers and many another stage and screen star whose gift we are apt to sum up in one word—"personality."

Where to get it? From foods. Energy-giving foods like corn, in delicious dishes like these:

Corn and Walnut Loaf: Drain the contents of one can of No. 2 whole grain corn and run the corn through a food chopper. Add one-half cup of chopped walnuts, two beaten eggs, one-half cup milk and one-half cup crumbs. Season to taste with salt and pepper. Pour into a buttered baking dish and bake for 45 minutes in a moderate oven — 375 degrees. Serve with tomato sauce. This serves four persons.

Energy for Half a Dozen

Scalloped Corn and Celery: Bring one cup of diced celery and one-fourth cup of diced green pepper to boiling in salted water. Drain. Put alternate layers of corn, celery and peppers, seasoned with salt and pepper, in a baking dish. Use all the contents of one No. 2 can of corn. Pour over one-half cup of milk and cover with one-half cup of bread crumbs. Bake forty-five minutes or until the celery is tender. Have the oven moderately hot — 375 degrees. This serves six persons.

Corn and Bacon Omelet: Fry six slices of bacon until crisp. Remove and break into small pieces. Drain the contents of one No. 2 can of whole grain corn. Add to the hot bacon fat and fry golden brown. Add the bacon, and season to taste with salt and pepper. Meanwhile make an omelet for six persons. Just before folding the omelet over, pour over the corn and bacon. Then fold over, cook for a moment, and serve at once. This serves six persons.

Blue Point Oysters

Heating Value of Wood

Fire wood gatherers who want to get the most heat for the least chopping will do well to cut black locust, Prof. Raymond J. Hoyle, of the New York State College of Forestry, has figured out. His tests place locust at the head of the list in heat units per cord, followed in order of heating value by hickory, oak, hornbeam, black ash, rock elm, sugar maple, and yellow birch. Enormous quantities of wood are cut each year for firewood, said Professor Hoyle. In New York state alone the annual fire wood supply would make a wood pile 12 inches wide, 4 feet high, and 390 miles long.—Literary Digest.

Kublai Khan

Kublai Khan was a grandson of Jenghis Khan and founder of the Mongol dynasty of China. He began to reign over the north part of China about 1260 and shortly thereafter he conquered the southern provinces and became master of a vast empire extending from the polar seas to the straits of Malacca, including Tibet, Tartary and Siam. He was one of the ablest of his race, an organizer and administrator of a high degree of ability and intelligence. He was born in 1216 and died in 1294.

Growing With Your Child

Jill dashing into the house with more than her usual impetuosity, burst into tears and flung herself on the davenport.

"Oh, I just HATE Jack!" she exclaimed between sobs.

"Why, Jill, he's always been your very best pal!" murmured her mother, in genuine amazement. The children had been friends from infancy, and it was most unusual for anything to come between them.

"But he doesn't like me any more, he's so mean to me!" wailed Jill.

The little tic between the two children soon blew over, but it had the effect of making Jill's mother observant of the fact that the two had grown past the childhood stage of complete and unself conscious admiration and affection for one another. Not that their feelings had changed. Oh, no. They still laughed at the same jokes, enjoyed the same games, in that sympathy and harmony of interest which is the result of long intimacy. But they no longer came home from school together every day, and ran freely back and forth between the two homes.

What had happened? First of all, Jack and Jill were growing up. They were no longer little children, but were fast maturing into adolescents whose interest in one another was bound to be that of an awakening sensitiveness toward the other sex. Gone were the days when Jack could say to his mother, in all seriousness, "I'm going to marry Jill when I grow up, aren't I?" Or when Jill could sing out to the children assembled for a game, "I choose Jack! He's on my side!"

Why must this perfectly natural relationship change into a more or less stiff and formal friendship? Was it all a matter of their growing up, of their developing sex consciousness? No, a large element in the change was the way other people had treated their wholesome and sincere liking for one another. While they were little, it was possible to protect them from the laughing glances of adults who thought it was "funny" to hear them say so frankly that they loved each other. The two mothers had done their level best to keep these silly adults from making the children self-conscious. But now it was beyond their power. Other children were making them miserable by laughing because Jack was so open in his devotion to Jill. Other children, made selfconscious by poor training or lack of any training at all in understanding their sex impulses, sniggered in their embarrassment over what might otherwise have remained to Jack and Jill a normal situation.

What a shame that children's crystal-clear friendliness should be clouded by the interpretations of adults minds, whose experience makes them take jokingly or cynically what is so wholesome and natural! But there are plenty of unthinking adults who will laugh uproariously when Jimmie insists that Alice is "his girl", thereby awakening suspicion in the boy that there is something odd (to the grown up) about what was so natural to him. Before long, the child too, may develop the snickering, sheepish attitude which he believes must be the right one. If only he could get the hang of the joke! And so he grows up ready to become another of those thoughtless persons who by a casual word spoil a relationship that has been the growth of years.

Buttons on Coat Sleeves

One of the versions of the origin of the buttons on the cuffs of men's coats is that they come from an old necessity when the sleeves were shaped, of allowing a man the possibility of unbuttoning the sleeve and rolling it back in order to wash his hands.

TO TAKE VOTE ON ENCLOSED SKATING RINK

Council Takes Steps to Qualify for Federal Grant of $13,118

$15,000 BOND ISSUE WILL BE VOTED UPON

Nearly All of Federal Grant Would Go to Labor in Community

Following reports that Washington WPA headquarters had approved a grant of $13,118 for an enclosed municipal skating rink in this city, and calling for a local contribution of $11,856, the city council at an adjourned meeting Wednesday evening instructed City Attorney Theodore Quale to take the necessary legal steps to call a special election to vote on a $15,000 bond issue to defray the city's share of the cost together with the expense of acquiring the site in the rear of the Auditorium, now under condemnation proceedings.

Virtually all of the federal contribution will be spent for labor by local workers, it was pointed out, and will materially relieve the relief burden during the winter months. Sponsors of the project called attention to the need of a winter recreation center, and expressed the opinion that the profits from operating the rink should aid materially in retiring the bonds as they fall due. The building also would be available for other purposes during the summer months, it was stated.

The building would be approximately 80 by 200 feet in dimensions, of hollow tile construction with steel trusses supporting the roof. A large warming room would be provided in the front portion of the structure, which according to present plans would be located across the alley from the Auditorium facing on Second st.

The council tentatively designated H. C. Eckland as architect, and instructed him to prepare plans for the basement excavation, so that no delay in commencing work would ensue should the project be approved by voters of the city. The date of the election will be fixed at a meeting of the council next Wednesday.

COUNCIL ACCEPTS GOLF COURSE HERE AS GIFT FROM CLUB

To Enable Qualifying for WPA Labor Grant of $3,500

The city council at an adjourned meeting Wednesday evening adopted a resolution accepting as a gift the local golf course tendered by the Thief River Falls Golf club. The 35-acre tract adjoining the city on the north will be deeded to the city subject to a mortgage in the amount of approximately $3,800.

The double objective of the transaction, it was pointed out, is to permit the course to qualify for a federal WPA grant of approximately $3,500 for enlarging and improving the course, and, from the city's standpoint, to provide a large amount of hand work for men in this community, thus lightening the relief load.

The course, which is equipped with a club house representing an investment of $1,500, will, if the grant is finally approved, be enlarged from seven holes to nine holes, and a foot bridge will be built across Thief river, which will pass thru the enlarged course.

The enterprise will be placed under the jurisdiction of the park board, and it is stipulated that, in the event the city fails properly to maintain the course, it shall revert to the golf club, which shall then reimburse the city for any capital expenditures it may have made.

C. O. ERICKSON KILLED IN MOTOR CRASH THURSDAY

Meets Instant Death in Head-on Collision: Funeral Rites Monday

A throng of sorrowing relatives and friends that tested the capacity of Trinity Lutheran church assembled Monday afternoon to pay a final tribute to Clarence O. Erickson, for the past 17 years a popular local resident, who met an untimely death when he was instantly killed in an automobile collision west of Detroit Lakes last Thursday at midnight.

Mr. Erickson was driving alone into Detroit Lakes when, rounding a curve, his car collided with another occupied by M. B. Schuster and D. J. Swyer, both of Chicago. When the crash occurred Mr. Erickson's car was turned around and he was dashed to the pavement, a fractured skull causing instant death. The occupants of the other car escaped with minor injuries. A coroner's inquest Saturday at Detroit Lakes returned a verdict that the accident was unavoidable.

Rev. R. M. Fjelstad was in charge of the funeral services, assisted by Rev. E. A. Cooke and Rev. Aner Bloom of Grand Forks, former local pastor, who spoke words of comfort to the bereaved relatives. Musical selections included a vocal solo by C. V. Whitchurch and a song by a male quartet. Interment was made in Greenwood cemetery.

Mr. Erickson was born in Crookston in 1898 and was 37 years old at the time of his death. Moving with his parents in 1902 to Randin, Minnesota, he came to Thief River Falls in 1914 and was a member of the freshman class in Lincoln high school. He completed his high school course in Baudette, following which he returned to this city.

With his friendly ways and cheerful disposition Mr. Erickson made a host of friends while in the employ of the E. O. Mogenson clothing store from 1918 to 1924 and of the men's department of the Oen Mercantile company during the following ten years. In July of last year he assumed the post of traveling salesman for the H. D. Lee company of Minneapolis, and on August 28 this year he moved with Mrs. Erickson to Grand Forks to make their home.

Mr. Erickson was married in this city in 1919 to Miss Thelma Holm, who survives him, together with his mother Mrs. Olina Erickson and a sister, Mrs. Eli Rolland, both of this city. His father and a brother preceded him in death.

Among the out-of-town relatives present for the funeral rites was Secretary of State Mike Holm of St. Paul, father of Mrs. Erickson.

Stop Chasing Fire Truck, Fire Chief Hanson Orders

Condemning the habits of local motorists of crowding behind the fire truck when it responds to alarms, Fire Chief Leonard Hanson today called attention to the fact that the law requires vehicles to remain one block behind the truck, and stated that penalties will be inflicted if the practice is continued. He pointed out that it not only hampers the work of the firemen, but increases the likelihood of accidents.

St. Hilaire 4-H Club Band Places Second in State-wide Contest

A group of 13 Pennington county 4-H club workers together with the St. Hilaire 4-H band returned to their homes last Friday after having spent an enjoyable week at the Minnesota state fair.

Marian Green, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Carl M. Green of this city, one of 88 girls who appeared in the 4-H style revue at the fair, was honored by being named one of four attendants in the court of Margaret Wilson of Hennepin county, who was named style queen. Marian wore a candy-striped linen dress trimmed in brown, with matching brown shoes and purse.

The St. Hilaire band, under the direction of M. S. Graham played on the fair grounds on several occasions during the week, and also performed at a banquet in the Radisson hotel in Minneapolis Thursday evening attended by 1,400 4-H workers from thruout Minnesota. The band won second place in the state contest.

That Northwestern Minnesota is a healthy place in which to live is proved by the fact that two club members from this section of the state were winners in a contest Friday to determine the healthiest boy and girl of 100 entries. The winners were Aurora Capistran, 16 year-old Crookston girl, and Clifton Gustafson of Gonvick, 21 years old.

BLINDFOLD DRIVER TO DRIVE PONTIAC IN CITY SATURDAY

Stunt Chief to Perform Here From 7:30 to 8:30 in Evening

Qualities of the new Pontiac automobile will be demonstrated on the streets of the city Saturday evening by the Pontiac Stunt Chief, who will give an exhibition of blindfold driving between the hours of 7:30 and 8:30 in the evening, T. M. Thronson of the Thronson Motor company announced today.

The Stunt Chief is being sent to this city by the Pontiac factory. The feat that has made him famous is that of having his eyes sealed tight with cotton and adhesive tape, all covered by a blindfolding tape, and then driving about the city for an hour with the same ease as an ordinary motorist and obeying all traffic laws.

The journey will start from the Thronson Motor company quarters on Knight av. at Third st., and will end there an hour later. The Stunt Chief is Jimmy Burns of Superior, Wisconsin, a noted racing driver. He will be blindfolded by a committee from the assembled crowd.

A caravan of Pontiac cars will arrive in the city at noon Saturday, and will be headed by the Stunt Chief in his tour of the streets in the evening.

$32,000 IN SCHOOL BONDS TO BE PAID EARLY NEXT YEAR

School Board Discusses Budget at Meeting Monday Evening

The board of education at its meeting Monday evening received reports of the successful opening of the local school September 3. Supt. Morris Bye stated that the total enrollment at the end of he first week showed an increase of 15 over the figure at the same time last year, while the high school enrollment declined from 545 in 1934 to 516 last Friday. Additions since that day, however, bring to 540 the total number of students in Lincoln high school.

Mr. Bye presented to the board figures relating to the budget for the coming year, but final action was deferred to a later meeting owing to the absence of two members of the board.

It was indicated that sufficient funds will be available in the school district treasury February 1, 1936, to retire a privately held $32,000 block of which will reduce the district debt to $108,000. A total of $70,000 in bonds issued to the state will mature July 1, 1936, and arrangements will be made to refund the issue.

The new International motor bus recently purchased from C. Gustafson and Son on their bid of $1,600, will be delivered this week, the board was informed. The bus has a capacity of 40 pupils. Lars Backe was authorized to write the insurance on the vehicle.

While three classes in the grade schools number 40 or more pupils, Supt. Bye reported that none of the high school classes this year are too large for the rooms in which they are scheduled, and that there is room in all classes, except in home economics, for the additional pupils that may enroll from now on.

CITY WILL PAY LOW INTEREST ON NEW BONDS

Minneapolis Group Buyer of $60,000 Issue at 3¾ Per Cent

SAVING ESTIMATED AT NEARLY $1,300

$7,900 in Building Permits Approved by Council Tuesday

The city council at its regular September meeting Tuesday evening accepted the bid of a Minneapolis syndicate for the purchase of the recently authorized 60,000 bond issue with which to defray the cost of installing a 1,000 horse-power Diesel unit in the municipal plant.

The successful bid was on a basis of a premium of $8 with interest at the rate of three and three-quarters per cent, the lowest rate yet obtained in local financing. The syndicate includes the Wells-Dickey company, Allison-Williams & company and J. P. Arms & company.

It was estimated that the saving in interest and other costs during the term of the issue would amount to nearly $1,300 as compared to selling the bonds to local investors on a four per cent basis. A total of $49,500 in subscriptions had been entered by local prospective purchasers. Kalman & company of St. Paul also bid for the issue on a four per cent basis with a premium of $426.50.

A total of $7,900 in building permits were approved at the meeting, the applicants including Lund & Tunberg, garage addition, $3,000; M. T. McFarland, residence at 400 Arnold av. N., $2,000; department of rural credit, potato warehouse, $1,800; Olaf Neset, remodeling residence, $500; and Mrs. Ingeborg Legvold, remodeling residence, $300.

Following a lengthy discussion Charles Fiterman was granted a permit to remodel the old Shirley barn on Fifth st. into a double garage at a cost of $800, and he was ordered to file a cash bond of $200 to insure early completion of the work.

It was voted to defer action on the purchase of road oil for the oiling of four additional streets in the city, but to proceed at once with the work of getting the streets in shape for oiling next spring. Mayor Frank Rinkle stated he had been advised by highway department officials against attempting any oiling projects this late in the season.

City Clerk P. G. Pederson was instructed to call for bids on the winter supply of coal for municipal buildings. On motion the salaries of the assistant librarian and janitor at the public library were left at the same figure as during the past year. The matter of securing the necessary amount of grass seed for seeding the boulevards along Johnson st. was left in the hands of the park board.

Mayor Rinkel called attention to the necessity of revising local light and power rates following the installation of the new Diesel unit, and the council endorsed his suggestion that steps be taken to engage a competent man to draw up a suggested schedule of rates for consideration at a later meeting.

Governor Olson Names R. M. Aalbu to Post of Municipal Judge Here

Bishop, following his appointment to the office last Thursday by Governor Floyd B. Olson. The office will be filled by election when voters of the city go to the polls in November. Mr. Aalbu, former painter and decorator and more recently engaged in the newspaper business, has for many years been a member of the local Farmer-Labor organization.

Rotary-C. & C. Golf Match Gets into Kangaroo Court

Following an argument that developed last week as to who was the winner of the golf tourney in which the Rotary club competed against the Civic and Commerce association, a kangaroo court was set up at the association luncheon Thursday with Paul Lundgren on the bench.

Kern Olson, representing the association players, set forth that his group would be the winner if a match between Charles Lieberman and M. P. Erickson were not taken into consideration, and said that if it was counted the association would be the loser by approximately 100 points. Mr. Olson declared that Anton Hall, Rotarian, had illegally interfered with the match by prevailing upon Mr. Lieberman to play the course using only a putter.

Dr. A. E. Jacobson, chairman of the Rotary group, vigorously defended Mr. Hall, submitting affidavit replete with whereases tending to prove that Mr. Hall was a man of exemplary character whose only purpose in approaching Mr. Lieberman was to save the golf grounds from being irretrievably ruined by inexpert use of the heavier golf clubs. Dr. Jacobson darkly hinted that, even so, the golf club is contemplating the filing of a suit for damages against the association because of the manner in which the course was mistreated.

Displaying the wisdom of Solomon, Judge Lundgren withheld a forthright decision, adjourning the hearing pending the playing of the final match between Morris Bye, Rotarian, and W. L. Carlisle, president of the Civic and Commerce association.

MAN KILLED BY HIT-RUN DRIVER IN ST. HILAIRE

Lloyd Ross, Employed on J. W. Black Farm, Meets Instant Death

ERVIN TOMMERDAHL WAS DRIVER OF CAR

Is Bound Over to District Court on Charge of Manslaughter

Struck down Saturday shortly after midnight by a speeding car driven by Irvin Tommerdahl of this city, Lloyd A. Ross, 22, employed since last spring on the J. W. Black farm near St. Hilaire, met instant death.

The driver of the death-dealing car, who was accompanied by Leonard Ottum, Helge Gothenburg and Mr. and Mrs. Omer Belland, continued on his way after the accident without stopping, and was arrested in this city a few hours later together with Ottum and Gothenburg, the car having been identified by a cracked windshield, cracked bumper and dented windshield pillar, a description of the car being supplied to local police by Harold Anderson, who had been at the scene of the accident.

Anderson and Gerald Frodahl took the victim to a local hospital, where it was ascertained he had died of a fractured skull. Testimony of witnesses at a coroner's inquest conducted Monday evening was to the effect that Ross had stepped out into the street between two parked cars just as the Tommerdahl car came down the street heading south. It was also brought out that the driver had turned around a short distance south of the village and returned to the scene of the accident, and then had proceeded to this city.

The coroner's jury returned a verdict that Ross had met his death by being struck by a car driven by Irvin Tommerdahl in a careless manner. In municipal court Wednesday morning Tommerdahl waived a preliminary hearing and was bound over to district court on a charge of manslaughter in the second degree. His two companions who had been taken into custody by the police were released following the inquest.

Lloyd Ross, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Ross of the Alvarado community, was born in 1913 at Alvarado. Funeral rites were conducted from the Norwegian Lutheran church in that village Wednesday afternoon. The surviving family includes his parents, two sisters, Lara and Dorothy, and three brothers, Howard, Richard and Gene, all at home.

ORGANIZE FARM WAREHOUSE BOARD HERE LAST FRIDAY

To Enable Farmers to Make Loans on Grain Stored on the Farm

As part of a farm warehousing service arranged by the Minnesota railroad and warehouse commission a Pennington county warehousing board was organized at a meeting Friday evening in the farm bureau office. J. V. Patton of St. Hilaire was named president; R. M. Douglass secretary; and Alfred Longren treasurer.

The board, the purpose of which is to enable farmers to borrow money on their grain while it is stored on the farm, will inspect and seal grain under authority of the commission. The board is authorized to issue warehouse certificates and collect application, inspection and sealing fees.

Storage of grain under such state supervision will permit the farmers to pay seed liens from their crops by use of the warehouse certificates and hold their grain for better prices, commission members said. It also will permit them to retain grain for feed and seed unless they realize cash from the sale of livestock and save them from the loss which would be incurred by selling at current prices and buying back grain for seed and feed, it was emphasized.

The next regular meeting of the Auxiliary will be held on Tuesday evening, Sept. 17th. Please note the change in day. The executive Board of the Unit has acted as a nominating committee, and at this meeting will submit names of nominees for office for the coming year. All members are urged to attend.

Mrs. Brumund and Mrs. Wiltrout acted as hostesses at our last meeting. Mrs. Claude Evenson, outgoing president, gave us a very fine report of the State Convention at Albert Lea, which she attended as a delegate from the local unit. An important change in the By-Laws provides for the election of officers in June hereafter. The new officers will take office immediately following the State Convention. We were very much pleased to hear of the prizes won by our Drum Corps and by our Post and feel justly gratified by the accomplishments of the past year. As a token of her appreciation of co-operation and loyalty, our President presented each of her officers and chairmen present with a clever corsage bouquet.

Did you see the splendid picture of the Drum Corps in the Legionnaire of August 28?

Plans are being formulated to conduct the Forget-Me-Not Sale again this year in co-operation with the D. A. V's. These little flowers are sold each year to particularly commemorate Argonne Day and the proceeds are used in Welfare Work.

Growing With Your Child

Children enjoy routine. Young children, especially, who can't yet tell time and who haven't very long memories, like to have the comfortable feeling of knowing what's coming next. They feel safer that way. Their world is bounded by mother's way of doing things, and if mother is full of whims, if she is inconsistent about things that might fall easily into a pattern, there is apt to be unnecessary and bothersome conflict.

A little girl arrived at nursery school quite late one morning. The other children had come in from outdoor play, and rid of their coats, were drinking their orange juice and cod liver oil. Betsy refused her glass—an unprecedented thing—and it took some time to get the explanation: she hadn't played out of doors yet, it simply wasn't time for orange juice! After she was allowed to go out and run about a bit, she came in perfectly willing to drink the juice as usual. The minor inconvenience of an occasional insistence on following the pattern, in an instance like this, is slight compared with the greater ease of accomplishing the business of eating, dressing, washing and going to bed.

Betsy's behavior is typical of the child who has learned to take events in a certain order. George, in process of being trained to keep dry, had to be brought in from play at regular intervals. He often objected, with yells and screams, to leaving the sandbox for monotonous trips to the bathroom. Then he went to nursery school. On the first Saturday that came along, his mother went out as usual to bring him in. "Ten, o'clock?" he asked, trotting docilely in with her. From only a few days' observation he had learned that this routine performance seemed the socially acceptable thing to do. There had been at school no silly question such as his mother had been wont to put ("Do you want to go to the bathroom?") but only the cheerful announcement, "Ten o'clock! Time to go to the toilet!".

Much anger and frustration may be avoided in handling young children if it is remembered that the pattern of events in the child's day will easily become habitual. If a child is allowed to dawdle in his pajamas for half the morning, we may expect that "routine" to persist, quite as much as the pleasanter one of speeding into one's clothes in order to do the next thing. Making the "next thing" interesting rather than boring or hateful is the secret of getting a desirable "pattern" of routine habits well under way in early childhood.

THERE MUST BE NEW REGULATION

Perhaps the steadily increasing toll of traffic tragedies is a necessary preliminary to more effective traffic regulation. High speed roads and high speed cars have brought with them new problems. It is evident that these problems will not be solved merely by appeals to the public to exercise common sense in the use of automobiles and the highways. We say amen to the safety slogans, virtuously shake our heads in horror of the consequences of carelessness and then blithely speed along our way hoping our names will not be included in the next list of victims. Apparently the solution to these problems of fast cars and fast roads must come through strict enforcement of driving regulations and proper penalties for carelessness in all forms.

Just what these driving regulations should be is in itself a difficult problem. Speed is not the only factor in careless driving. As a matter of fact some drivers are less of a menace on the highway at seventy miles an hour than others are at forty. The driver who insists on watching everything but the road is dangerous at any speed. Many drivers are incompetent, both physically and mentally, to pilot a car through traffic at ten miles an hour.

Then there is the question of the car itself and whether or not it is in proper condition to use the highways. In a hundred mile trip one night last week we passed eight cars by actual count that had only one headlight and nine without tail lights—seventeen in all that were a menace to traffic. How many of the cars we passed had defective brakes or tires we would not even venture to guess. Three wagons and two hay racks without reflectors aided to the hazard of the highway. To what extent should the condition of the vehicles that use the highways be regulated? It would be unfair to arbitrarily declare all cars beyond a certain age unsafe. Some old cars are kept in very good condition. But it would seem reasonable to demand that all cars that use the highways be tested at regular intervals.

Traffic control, like liquor control, is an involved and complicated problem. The motoring public demands speed. To attempt to solve this problem by enforcement of speed laws drafted to regulate the comparatively slow moving traffic of fifteen years ago would prove to be an unsatisfactory solution. It is a new problem that must be controlled by new regulations adapted to conditions as they are at the present time.

It is not to the credit of Congress that in the final hours of the last session it passed a potato production control measure that was opposed by the department of agriculture not only because of the probability of its constitutionality but also because of its impracticability. There is some merit to the idea of controlling the production of such commodities as wheat and cotton. The market value of such commodities is effected by the large surpluses which carry over from year to year. One bumper crop may depress the market for several years. Not so with potatoes, however. The potato crop is a strictly hand to mouth proposition and each year's production and price problem is based on a different set of facts. Attempts to regulate production of such a crop will lead only to dissatisfaction both among producers and consumers. Secretary Wallace realized this and that is why he opposed the plan. But an all-wise Congress knew better and now we will have an experiment in compulsory control of vegetable marketing.

Conditions in this section of the state probably will not be as good this year as they were a year ago. This is due to the fact that conditions were exceptional last year when we were favored by a combination of unusual circumstances. To a large extent our good fortune last year was due to the misfortunes of others. This year we are experiencing a more normal relationship to other agricultural communities. But while in some respects we are not as well off as we were, we should not overlook the fact that in other ways we are better off. Grain and grass seeds are worth less but livestock, poultry and eggs are worth considerably more and in these items alone we have a substantial offset to the losses in other lines. So taking it all in all the prospects for this year's cash returns are not bad.

While there can be no justification for the assassination of Huey Long, there certainly is no occasion for surprise that such an attack was made. As the "boss" of a political machine that ruled the state with an iron fist, Long had invited such an attack. And the fact that he was continually surrounded by a heavily armed guard indicated he himself expected something of the sort to happen. In attempting to govern the state as a dictator he was prepared to meet the fate that history tells us so often ended the career of ancient tyrants.

Considering his own meteoric rise to a position of influence, honor and power, we do not see how Judge R. M. Aalbu can consistently continue to complain about the lack of opportunities in this country.

President Roosevelt and his troupe of "new dealers" should consider carefully the significance of the good effect the recent promise of a "breathing spell" had upon the country. The results indicate that the nation would welcome a more specific assurance that expensive experimentation has ended and that from now on the administration will devote more of its time to the problem of recovery within the government itself. Ever since the Supreme Court knocked the most important props out from under the "new deal" program, business has made substantial gains and unemployment has decreased. If that is what 'getting back to horse and buggy days" means then let's have some more of it.

WHAT A PRICE TO PAY!

(New Prague Times)

Scattered along the paving on a wide curve at the Shakopee road, a little before noon on Sunday, were: A boy's baseball hat that would never again be held in the hands of its owner; a baby girl's doll; a couple of small bathing suits; a woman's blood-spattered white slipper and hat; a miscellaneous assortment of blood-soaked family belongings—mute evidence of what had started out as a happy holiday but ended abruptly in fatal catastrophe.

Tossed on the paving was a heap of wreckage and debris that had a few moments before been an innocent and happy family's automobile, but in a brief tragic second had been transformed into an unrecognizable shambles of indescribable horror and stark tragedy.

At the edge of the roadside was the mangled body of a little boy, lying very still under a blazing sun.

Speeding toward a Minneapolis hospital, an ambulance contained the remaining members of this dead little boy's ill-fated family, a dying young mother, the young father desperately injured, and the torn and bleeding baby girl who would never again feel the touch of a loving mother's hand.

What a price to pay for somebody else's negligent recklessness—for a blind mania for speed!

Human sympathy and decency cries out in protest. Something can and must be done to protect the lives and bodies of American families upon the public highways on Sundays and on every other day of the week.

Seeing it practically new and entirely unused, some of these Republicans are planning to adopt the Democratic party's platform for the 1936 campaign. Sound money, greater economy in governmental bureaucracy, reduction of governmental bureaucracy, these are a few of the major planks that will probably sound good again to the folks who must realize that they pay the bill with every bite of food they eat, every stitch they wear and every item that contributes to their every day life.—Owatonna Journal Chronicle.

The administration is now talking rural electrification. Whether the spokesmen are really contemplating action along this line or whether they are just making an appeal to the rural sections for votes is difficult to tell. The only thing wrong with rural electrification is that it is too expensive. Down at New Ulm, which is said by administration leaders to be an ideal spot for such a project, the city council has many times considered extending the municipal light and power lines into the country, but has never done it. The reason: Too much expense involved for the amount of current sold. The New Ulm council stands ready at any time to sell current to farmers who will build and maintain their own lines, but farmers hold back for the same reason. Electricity on the farm would be wonderful. It is needed there even more than in cities and towns, but until some cheaper way of building and maintaining lines is devised there will be little electrification in rural regions.—Sleepy Eye Herald-Dispatch.

Reason behind the direct primary was the corruption that had occasionally appeared in the convention system. It was believed by honest reformers that the direct primary would eliminate this—and put a higher type of man into public office. In fact, it has failed almost completely. The calibre of public officials is no greater now than fifty years ago—perhaps it is less. Political chicanery has increased, rather than waned. And the direct primary's worst offspring—the long ballot—has made intelligent voting impossible in most states.—Red Wing Eagle.

Man's imperfections lead him to make many mistakes in life. The pointing out of these frailties has engaged the attention of philosophers and reformers in all ages. A recent writer enumerates what he considers to be the seven greatest mistakes of man, as follows: 1. Delusion that individual advancement is made by cursing others down. 2. The tendency to worry about things that cannot be changed or corrected. 3. Insisting that a thing is impossible because we ourselves cannot accomplish it. 4. Refusing to set aside trivial preferences in order that important things may be accomplished. 5. Neglecting development and refinement of the mind by not acquiring the habit of reading. 6. Attempting to compel other persons to believe and live as we do. 7. The failure to establish the habit of saving money.—Northfield News.

A New Jersey advertising man finds himself more widely advertised than he cares to be because he proposed a whispering campaign against the president. The unusual emphasis put by investigating committees on the suggestion he made may help put a crimp in this kind of business. It is nothing new, but never before has anyone connected with a whispering campaign been so completely and pitilessly exposed. There was a whispering campaign against Woodrow Wilson in 1916. In 1920 it was whispered that Warren Harding had negro blood. In 1928 there were whispers about Al. Smith. In 1932 Herbert Hoover was the victim of a whispering campaign. The present president has the same fate as other occupants of the White House, or presidential candidates, in being the subject of slippery and sneaking talk. He is luckier than some of the others have been in getting newspaper publicity and aggressive investigators to turn the attacks to his advantage.—Montevideo News.

Like so many unorthodox economic theories, the Spend-Your-Way-Out theory is only superficially plausible. Its fallacy lies in its failure to recognize two important facts. The first of these is that the great bulk of existing unemployment is in industries which make things that the individual consumer does not buy. The second is that savings do not represent sterile, locked-up funds, but funds which go into immediate circulation thru the medium of investment. It might be well to consider the significance of these two facts before we blithely discard the national habit of saving. Perhaps a little sober reflection may even indicate that a dollar of saving can create more employment than a dollar of consumer spending.—Lewis W. Douglas.

Force may subdue, but love gains; and he that forgives first, wins the laurel. Love is the hardest lesson in Christianity; but for that reason it should be most our care to learn it.—William Penn.

News and Comment

By R. W. Hitchcock of Hibbing, former state senator

The trek of the Minnesota lawmakers to the Minnesota State Fair is something to write home about. Out of 198 members of the House and Senate, only the dead and the sick-a-bed were missing.

The outpouring of the Independent-Progressive majority members was particularly impressive. Seventy House members who have steadfastly acted with the majority were present at an informal dinner and get-together, while a separate Senate dinner accounted for 41 Independent-Progressive Senators. It was a remarkable showing of solidarity.

During the week preceding the State Fair Governor Olson was quoted by the press of the state to the effect that he would confer with members of the Legislature during fair week in regard to an extra session.

Up to Saturday morning, however, when most of the members of the Legislature had gone home, the Governor had made no move to consult or confer with any of the members of the majority group.

It is reported that he had an extended conference with Farmer-Labor members at Farmer-Labor headquarters in the Lowry Hotel on Wednesday evening of fair week, after which Charge d'Affaires, Lewis Herfindahl, staunch Farmer-Labor representative from Swift County, promptly closed up the place and the hotel knew him no more.

No such gathering of Minnesota law-makers in between sessions has ever taken place in the state as that which marked the House and Senate Independent-Progressive get-togethers. Evidently they were moved by a common purpose and apparently there were no differences of opinion upon that naturally absorbing topic—the possibility of a special session. If the Governor decides for a special session, as he has intimated but not definitely said, the Independent-Progressive majority will cheerfully be there, and minded very much as they were when the regular session came to an end last April.

The special session might have been held during fair week. The members were all there. They seemed to be ready to enact the Act. Only one thing was lacking—the Governor's consent to provide the funds to make any state legislation effective.

Many members of the Legislature, perhaps most of them, feel that social security legislation is useless unless funds are first provided to finance it. Also it seems to be the consensus of opinion that a special session will be futile unless Governor and Legislature will agree upon a program for raising the money needed to support other activities of the state without adding to the already penalizing property taxes.

The Legislature last winter authorized $5,000,000 each year for two years for relief purposes, and entrusted to the Executive Council consisting of the Governor, the Attorney General, the Secretary of State, the State Treasurer and the State Auditor, the task of borrowing the money and distributing it. The Executive Council has already spent $3,600,000 of this year's funds, was confronted last week with demands for $600,000 more, and is subject to pressure for a great deal more.

The spenders think that this Executive Council set-up, which has been developed to such astonishing lengths in Minnesota, is just the thing. It is much easier to "put pressure" on the five members of the Executive Council than it is upon the Legislature. The members of the Legislature are responsible to the people of their individual districts and they know that their constituents want economy, but the members of the Executive Council must harvest votes in the state at large. No matter how efficiently they may conduct their respective offices, they are strictly on the spot these days in their capacity as members of the Executive Council.

The act which loads legislative functions upon the Executive Council should be repealed at the first opportunity. The longer it remains upon the statute books the worse it will be for Minnesota.

Now you see Federal funds and now you don't. The air was full of demands last winter for the appropriation by the state of $10,000,000 for relief, and equally full of promises that if the appropriation was made ample funds would be forthcoming from the Federal government, but the uncertainty and the irregularity of the Federal supply has become proverbial.

It is pretty difficult and exceedingly wasteful and often frankly unjust, to attempt to administer relief to 125,000,000 people from Washington, D. C.

There are rumors that if there is an extra session there will be demands for the appropriation of additional millions by the state for relief.

The election of 1936 is casting its shadows a long way before. Among law-makers and editors at the State Fair the air was full of political gossip, with a rising note of confidence among Republicans.

The Republican State Central Committee maintained a booth in the Agricultural Building, while Hennepin County Republicans held open house at the Yeomen Building. The Woman's Division of the Farmer-Labor Educational Bureau operated from a tent opposite one of the main entrances to the fair grounds.

All of them reported a lively interest in political literature.

The gypsy who hypnotized an elderly couple and obtained $900 probably will be pursued until caught and assigned to a good job in the treasury department.—Indianapolis News.

With the approval of the large number of water conservation projects which have been sponsored by the Division of Drainage and Waters of the Department of Conservation before WPA, the most comprehensive program for the conservation and utilization of the state's waters will have been put into motion. These projects affect every community in the state where lakes are to be found. None of them are large but they are of the kind which will offer employment to local people on relief.

The problem of unemployment is continuing to mount. According to the national industrial conference board there was 266,000 more unemployed in July than there was in June. The July total reached a staggering amount of 10,015,000. The national industrial conference board is the employers' research agency, so if anything their figures are too conservative.

At a special meeting of the Railroad and Warehouse commission, rules and regulations for operation of the County Farm and Warehouse act of 1935 were adopted with a few minor revisions. At the same time warehouse boards for a number of counties were selected, and committees for the remaining counties of the state are to be picked in the near future.

One of our state game wardens, William Munch, has made quite an extensive study of birds and their food habits. In a recent lecture, he said that birds eat their own weight in food every day. In other words, a bird must have a full meal every hour and a half. What are some of the harmful insects they eat? The food of the meadow lark consists of grasshoppers, weevils and beetles; the jay will eat a million moths a year; woodpeckers are fond of crawling insects and some may eat as high as 5,000 ants a day; martins get their food on flight, and will eat as high as 3,000 mosquitoes a day.

Financially the Bemidji municipally-owned liquor stores and bars seem to have been outstanding successes. In 16 months of operation they have taken in total receipts amounting to $106,358.51 with a net profit of $43,765.83.

Judge Alfred L. Thwing's court at International Falls has ordered judgment in favor of the state against the International Lumber Company, a Backus organization, for the sum of approximately $300,000 for personal property taxes from 1920 to 1931, omitted in the company's returns. The information and evidence presented in court was collected by William A. Anderson, special tax investigator and former mayor of Minneapolis. Attorney General Harry H. Peterson assigned F. A. Pike, assistant attorney general, in charge of the litigation.

Elmer M. Hauge of Minneapolis has been appointed crime bureau statistician by Melvin C. Passolt, director. Putman M. Smith, recently appointed supervisor of the bureau's radio station, is in Redwood Falls familiarizing himself with the apparatus of the station which will be completed and in use in 90 days.

The paved highway between Elk River and Anoka is perhaps the most heavily traveled road in the state. It is a bottle-neck through which all traffic from the north and northwest must pass to enter the Twin Cities. The new belt highway from St. Cloud to Minneapolis on the west side of the Mississippi river will relieve the dangerous congestion on the present road when completed. At present some of the bottle-neck traffic may be evaded by taking the black top road at Elk River which runs through Dayton and again meets the pavement at the west end of the river bridge at Champlin.

Upon Your Prayers

By ANNE CAMPBELL

NOW in the turmoil of day,
 Weary and fevered with cares
I turn to my comfort and stay,
 Leaning upon your prayers.

Often, surrounded by noise,
 Hampered by worldly affairs,
I can taste of the spirit's joys,
 Leaning upon your prayers.

Over the clang of the street,
 The moor of your love for me fares,
And life is made suddenly sweet,
 Leaning upon your prayers.

Services Tuesday for Joyce Julien Lundeen

Funeral services for Joyce Julien Lundeen, who died Sept. 7th, took place at the Oak Park Church Tuesday, Sept. 10th, with Rev. Bjorgan of Goodridge officiating. Pall bearers were the Misses Jeanette and Mildred Gustafson, Marles Stendall and Hazel Tinneson. Interment took place at the Oak Park Cemetery.

Little Joyce was born Mar. 17, 1934 and at the time of her death had reached the age of one year and five months. She leaves to mourn her passing her father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Lundeen of Oklee, and one brother, Wilmer.

Clarinet Is Most Useful of Instruments in Band

The clarinet, like other members of the wood-wind family, goes back to those instruments used by Pan, when nymphs and fauns danced to the gay music of pipes in the woods. Since those early woodland days, says an authority in the Washington Post, the pipe has undergone many changes. The mouthpiece was given a double reed for the oboe, the English horn and the bassoons, but in the clarinet only a single reed is used. Much as the clarinet resembles the oboe, it does not taper, and is of equal thickness until the end, where it flares into a bell. Of all the wood-wind instruments, the clarinet is the most useful because of its wide range, its ease of playing and the great variety of tone.

Clarinets are made in different keys and pitches. The ones in B flat and A are most commonly in use, although some of the scores call for clarinets in C, E flat and D. Occasionally an alto clarinet is employed, and, more frequently, a bass clarinet, which is the largest and deepest pitched instrument of this family. It has a crook for the mouthpiece, and a large bell. It sounds an octave below the B flat clarinet.

The clarinet was the last instrument to enter the classical orchestra. Mozart was the first composer to bring out its chief possibilities.

Big Bertha's Long Range Outclassed Other Guns

Typical artillery of the World war, writes John A. Menaugh, in the Chicago Tribune, were the following British guns: The 14-inch gun, with a range of 20 miles; the 12-inch gun, with a range of 19 miles; the 9.2-inch gun, firing a shell 15 miles; the 6-inch gun, with a range of 10 miles; the 12-inch howitzer, hurling a shell 8 miles; the 60-pounder rifle, with a range of more than 7 miles; the 9.2-inch howitzer, shooting 7 miles; the 18-pounder field piece, with a range of about 9,600 yards; the 4.5-inch howitzer, with a range of 7,000 yards; and the 3.7-inch howitzer, shooting 5,800 yards.

The maximum range of the huge German 42-centimeter howitzers that were used against the forts at Antwerp was 10,300 yards. The German 6.69-inch trench mortar threw a shell 1,250 yards. The German Minenwerfer was capable of throwing a 20-pound trench bomb 450 yards.

It was the German long-range gun, the Big Bertha, however, that was the most talked-of weapon of the World war. A number of guns of this type were employed in shelling Paris.

Others of the guns had different maximum ranges, the greatest only slightly less than 80 miles.

Pheasant Fast Runner

Were it not for the pheasant's ability to hide from its pursuer, it would probably be at the point of extinction today. In compensation for its bulk and lumbering flight nature has given the importation a pair of legs which bear it to safety in a twinkling. A pheasant can run alongside a trotting horse without exerting itself. Some authorities, who have followed the bird in an automobile, declare that it is capable of attaining a running speed of 20 miles an hour.

CORPORATION TAX LAW IN MINNESOTA IS HELD INVALID

Minneapolis Judge Rules on Excess Tax Law Last Saturday

The corporate excess tax, a measure by which Gov. Olson hoped to collect millions of dollars in levies was held invalid Saturday by Judge Arthur W. Selover in district court in Minneapolis.

The decision will have a far reaching effect on the tax situation in Minnesota, already muddled, and due for long discussions at the special sessions of the legislature.

Representatives of the attorney general's office in St. Paul said the decision would be appealed to the state supreme court.

The state corporate excess tax has been on the statute books for 57 years but never has been enforced. Gov. Olson sponsored the first action to enforce the law after the last session of the legislature.

If enforced, it would cost Minnesota corporations millions of dollars annually.

Judge Selover's decision was returned in test actions brought under the recent uniform declaratory judgments act. Plaintiffs were the Bemis Bag Co., and S. H. Clausin Co., Jewelers.

Amateurs Should Not be Trusted in Picking Mushrooms, is Warning

Mushroom season lasts from early June until the first Autumn frosts and, by the same token, there is still danger of mushroom poisoning among those who trust to amateur selection of edible mushrooms in Minnesota.

Warning against trusting to the inexperienced in selection of wild mushrooms is issued in today's bulletin from the Public Health Education Committee of the Minnesota State Medical Association.

Young specimens are the most poisonous, in the case of the poisonous varieties, according to the bulletin, and it is the young mushrooms that are the most apt to be mistaken for edible forms.

Various useless "tests" for trying the mushrooms to determine whether or not they are poisonous are still used by many people who should know better, according to the bulletin. Among them is the silver test by which a piece of bright silver is placed in the utensil in which the mushrooms are cooking. If the silver is not tarnished the mushroom are mistakenly considered safe to eat.

Actually there is only one means of knowing poisonous mushrooms. That is an expert knowledge of all of the varieties of safe and poisonous kinds. Amateurs should refrain from trying to decide for themselves such a serious question.

In general two types of mushroom poisoning are most likely to be encountered. The so-called rapid type is due to the various forms of Amanita muscaria. Poisoning takes place within one to three hours and may be severe. But it responds well to treatment and the mortality is low. The delayed type, due to forms of the Amanita phalloides, produces symptoms from five to 16 hours or more after eating and death occurs in at least half the cases.

A direct lineal descendant is a descendant of the direct line. A collateral descent is one belonging to the same ancient stock, but not in a direct line of descent. Thus, father, and son are lineal or direct kinsmen, but brothers, cousins, uncles, nephews, and so on, are collateral kinsmen and inheritance between them is collateral inheritance.

BYE GETS DETAILS OF PLANS TO HELP NEEDY STUDENTS

Attends Crookston Meeting Called by Department of Education

Plans for the extension of federal and state financial aid to needy boys and girls desirous of attending high school or college were outlined at Crookston Tuesday at a conference called by by the state department of education. Supt. Morris Bye of this city was in attendance.

The federal program is restricted to members of family on relief, of ages from 16 to 25, a maximum of $6 a month being provided, in exchange for which the recipients will be required to do a certain amount of work. The quota for the local high school is six students.

Supplementing the federal program is a state project for extending similar aid to members of needy families, not necessarily on relief, the maximum age limit being 21 years. Details of the plan are available at the office of Supt. Bye.

Hint Texas Man Involved in Marie Wick Murder Charged to Wm. Gummer

Without recommendation, Attorney General P. O. Sathre of North Dakota, revealed Tuesday at Bismarck to the state board of pardons results of his investigation into claims by William Gummer, serving a life term for the murder of Marie Wick former Grygla girl, that the crime was committed by another man.

Sathre told the board his investigation carried him into Texas and Colorado, acting on a story told by a former inmate of the North Dakota state penitentiary. At the same time, the board had before it once more the plea of Gummer for clemency.

Sathre said he interviewed a former inmate of the state penitentiary at Borger, Texas, and was told another man now reputedly a member of a band of Texan outlaws, had "boasted he murdered a girl in Fargo early in 1921."

The mysterious figure also was reported to have told others in Borger that he attacked the girl, in a Fargo hotel, and that "to conceal the crime he killed her with the nozzle of a fire hose", according to Sathre's report.

Sathre contacted four persons, in Borger, who, he said, told him similar stories of the man's boasting of the crime.

MIDDLE RIVER AND GONVICK SHOOTERS HERE NEXT SUNDAY

Local Riflemen to Seek Revenge for Previous Defeats

Meeting the Gonvick and Middle River rifle teams on the local grounds next Sunday, the Thief River Falls Rifle club will seek revenge for previous defeats suffered at the hands of the visitors. The three groups will compete in a three-way shoulder-to-shoulder match.

Fourteen members shot the army Course D last Sunday. While a strong wind made going difficult for the newer members, some promising scores were turned in. The five high scores for the qualifying rounds to date are: Herb Jung, 223; C. V. Whitchurch, 222; Victor Jung, 219; Ed Johnston, 217; and Herb Syverson, 214.

The pistol match, in which ten shooters participated, was won by Herb Syverson with a score of 108, while Orlando Bishop was second with 96. The event consisted of ten shots slow fire at 60 yards, ten shots timed fire at 20 yards and ten shots rapid fire at 20 yards.

Production Credit Assn. to Loan on Stored Grain

Farmers are now able to obtain cash advances on their stored grain and thus avoid the necessity of selling it at threshing time, through the Thief River Falls Production Credit association, according to a statement made today to the Thief River Falls Times by Secretary-Treasurer Robert J. Lund.

These grain loans are made on the same conditions as other loans through the associations: The farmer joins the association and takes a $5 share of stock for each $100 or fraction of $100 that he borrows. He pays an interest rate of 5 per cent a year, but pays interest only on the actual amount he uses and for the time he uses it.

Town Merchant Does Good Job, Survey by University Indicates

Retailers in the smaller Minnesota communities are doing a good job at their task of supplying the needs of people in their home towns and the nearby countryside, experts from the University of Minnesota have decided after making a study of retailing in Waseca, which they chose as typical of the medium-sized cities.

The volume, "Distribution Structure of the Small City" has just been published by Professors Ralph Cassady, Jr. and Henry J. Ostlund of the School of Business Administration.

They state that the three major factors in lending people to trade at a certain town are convenience, desirable merchandise and popularity of personnel. In these they find the Waseca "retail plant" a satisfactory one. Of price they say:

"The community does not determine the price of the merchandise sold but merely determines which grades of merchandise it is able and willing to purchase, and the merchant buys to sell at this price.

Among the characteristics of people in the Waseca trade area, these researchers found that eighty per cent of the population read at least two magazines and more than half read five or more, although this is true of only 38 percent of those living in larger cities. Fifty-six different periodicals of the newspaper type were taken in the trade area, of which 28 were rural, 15 metropolitan or national and the rest in a miscellaneous group including religious and foreign-language newspapers.

We don't care who writes the nation's economic books, just so long as they don't pass a law compelling one to read them. — South Bend News-Times.

ASSASSIN BULLET KILLS HUEY LONG IN STATE CAPITOL

Dies Tuesday Morning After Sustaining Fatal Injury Sunday

An assassin's bullet removed Huey Pierce Long Tuesday from the political scene in which he had played a dramatic and colorful part by building the most amazing personal dictatorship in American history.

His assassin, a mild-mannered young physician with bitter political enmity toward the United States senator, ex-governor, "share the wealth" advocate and potential presidential candidate, died ahead of him.

The bodyguards of Senator Long killed the assailant, Dr. Carl A. Weiss, in Louisiana's skyscraper statehouse Sunday night, after he had fired the fatal bullet through Long's abdomen.

Control on Long's Louisianna empire was in confusion as his lieutenants sought to solidify their ranks and preserve the power they inherited.

Long was 42 years old.

New U. S. Regulations to Speed Grade Crossing Program

A substantial program of winter construction will be carried out by the State Highway department as a result of changes made in regulations governing federal works program road and grade separation funds, according to an announcement by N. W. Elsberg, state highway commissioner.

Several important restrictions have been removed from the state's $5,895,000 allotment for railway grade crossing elemination, Mr. Elsberg said. Regulations governing the $5,277,000 allotment for highway work also have been modified. As a result, work can be started on both programs within a short time and employment will be provided in many localities throughuot most of the winter.

"As a result of the changes in federal regulations we can now carry out a grade crossing elimination program practically on a normal basis." Mr. Elsberg stated. "Federal funds can now be used for the purchase of sufficient materials and the use of sufficient equipment to build modern, permanent grade separation structures. The requirement that 90 per cent of the labor come from relief rolls also has been removed, although men on relief will continue to receive preference. No federal funds can be used for land acquisition."

Figuring the average cost of grade separations at $50,000 each, highway engineers said that the state's allotment should make possible the elimination of about 100 railway crossings. Much of this work can be done in the winter months.

The labor requirements on works program highway funds also have been modified so that 90 per cent of relief labor is no longer required. However, the limitation of $1,400 of federal funds per man year of employment has been retained. On this basis, the highway department will provide about 4,500,000 man hours of employment with the $5,277,000 highway fund, in addition to paying for materials and equipment.

3½ POUND CUCUMBER IS ADDED TO TIMES DISPLAY

A three and one-half pound cucumber was contributed Saturday to the Times "Can You Beat It" display by Mrs. Oscar Jopperu residing on the Eshelby farm north of the city. Another specimen of about the same size was brought in by Bj. Bjornaraa of Hickory township.

Concordia College Dean New Budget Commissioner

Professor Paul A. Rasmussen, dean of men at Concordia college, Moorhead, Friday said he would go to St. Paul October 1 to take over his position as state budget commissioner, to which he was appointed by Governor Olson. A graduate of St. Olaf college, Professor Rasmussen has been dean of men at Concordia college nine years, and also has coached debate and oratory. For a number of years he has been prominent in Farmer-Labor circles in northwestern Minnesota.

120 CHICKS STOLEN, THEN BROUGHT BACK

Fairmont.—One hundred and twenty chickens stolen from the farm of Paul Kasal in Mower county, came back to roost and officers are puzzled. The thieves took all but a few chickens on the place. Sheriff Ira Syck was called. He and his deputy scoured the neighborhood and questioned many persons in the hope of finding clues. The next day Mrs. Kasal was surprised to see the chickens walking around in the farmyard. It is thought the thieves became frightened by possible apprehension, brought back the poultry and turned them loose near the farm.

Orthopedic Clinic at Crookston Sept. 28th

An orthopedic clinic is to be held in the Central high school building at Crookston Saturday, September 28, and residents of Northern Minnesota counties will take advantage of the clinic inasmuch as very few orthopedic clinics will be held throughout the state this year by the Minnesota Public Health Association due to a shortage of personnel. Children who have been to the Gillette state hospital or to the Shriners' hospital who are wearing braces and who are to report for "check-ups" can be examined at such clinics and save the expense of a longer trip. The annual Christmas Seal sale takes care of the expense for an orthopedic clinic.

BOGUS MONEY PASSED AT FESTIVAL DAYS

Sanborn.—Watermelon day at Sanborn was a big success—until those who took in the money began examining some of the bills. At least 14 fake greenbacks were then detected, with more expected to show up as the bills are returned from the bank. Apparently passers of the bogus money felt that such occasions as watermelon days in Sanborn, Springfield and New Ulm were the best of places to get rid of the bills, and a number of fakes were reported from each city. To the casual observer, the bills might appear to be genuine, but upon close inspection and comparison with a genuine dollar bill the difference can readily be seen. The printing on both sides is much more crude with details, such as fine lines, hardly discernible. The real mark of distinction from the genuine is the absence of the fine threads in the paper which are woven into genuine U. S. money, and which counterfeiters have never been able to copy.

STEP LADDER NEEDED TO HUSK STATE CORN

Clinton.—Farmers in Big Stone County are producing a Paul Bunyan corn crop this year, and in many places throughout this section the fields tower well over ten feet in height. Ears on the corn are so high up on the stalk that farmers will almost need the aid of a step-ladder to husk their corn this fall. If frost does not touch the corn for a week or two the corn crop will be one of the best in the history of Big Stone County. The corn this year got off to a slow start, but after the 4th of July it made great gains.

Red River Valley History

Early Mail Carriers

Among the unsung heroes of the northern Minnesota frontier were the mail carriers. They were mixed bloods and brought to the task the endurance, speed and knowledge of nature of their Indian forbears, supplemented by the shrewdness and practical-mindedness of their French-Canadian blood. They were brave and bold, but many of them were gay and simple fellows. Charles Cavileer, who went to Pembina on the Dakota-Manitoba border in 1851 and served as postmaster and customs agent, wrote of the carriers in 1890:

"Our carriers were all halfbreeds, the best and most reliable men to be had. Our best man was 'savage' (Joseph) Montraille. He had the endurance of a blood hound. Tough as an oak, fearless and faithful. To verify my statements I will relate an instance connected with one of his trips. The trip was made in the fall when the rivers and lakes were just frozen over. We started him out on foot with his brother, Alex, as his assistant. The trip to Crow Wing was made on time but with considerable hardship. The return mail was large and the brothers had to pack it on their backs. One carried the mail, the other food, bedding, etc.

"They met with no mishaps until their arrival at Thieving river. Alex was taken sick and would have to be carried. A white man would have cached the mail and seen to his brother. Not so with 'Savage'. He endeavored to pack Alex, the mail and the rest of the loads but made slow progress. He finally decided to pack the mail and supplies, leaving Alex, returning for him after traveling a few miles. He would carry his brother a few miles beyond the first stop and repeated this performance until he reached Pembina six days after leaving Thieving river.

"This is only one instance of many of these voyageurs. I had on the route one Paul Beauvier who was as tough, if that is what to call it, as man can get to be. But he was a voyageur every inch of him. He never even in the coldest weather, wore a cap or hat. A blue cloth capot, without lining, with a capucha or hood attached which was seldom worn on his head even in the coldest of weather, was his usual dress. He always went with an open breast, with nothing but a cotton shirt no matter if the mercury showed 20 or more degrees below zero. As an equivocator he was a success. He would spin out yarn after yarn finer than any good string could possibly be stretched.

"I always gave him provisions sufficient for the round trip, but in Red Lake village he would lay over two or three days, and in the morning when he wanted to leave for Crow Wing he would apply to the resident missionary, Mr. Wright, for grub to take him to Crow Wing, having played high old revel with the dusky maidens of the village until his supplies were exhausted.

"On one occasion after getting his supplies from the unsuspecting missionary to last him to Crow Wing, before he got to the last wigwam or teepee of the village he hadn't a mouthful left for the trip. He knew they were cutting a road through from Crow Wing to Cass lake and concocted a plan to euchre the overseer out of grub enough to take him through to Red Lake village on his return trip. He struck the contractor or overseer some miles west of their encampment and told him a flowery yarn of how the roaring Red river had robbed him of all his provisions and asked the loan of enough to take him to Crow Wing, promising that he would replace it on his return, and succeeded in getting what he wanted. In returning home Paul knew about where they were working on the road, and took a straight cut some distance from the dog trail. He therefore kept the old trail and passed without drawing a growl from the dogs, getting home O. K. Those fellows may be looking for him yet."

Study of a Minnesota map will show these carriers traveled through northwestern Minnesota along trails made by Norman W. Kittson and Joseph Rolette and over which the Red river oxcart trains creaked.

"A few years after I came to Pembina", Cavileer wrote, "Kittson, who had been appointed postmaster in 1849, appointed me as his assistant. Joseph R. Brown had the contract to carry the mail from Pembina to Crow Wing, via Thieving river at its mouth at Red Lake river, thence by land and canoe to Red Lake village, making short portages, thence between small lakes to Cass lake and then by the same order of travel to Leech lake and so on to Croy lake and to the end of the route at Crow Wing village, which was the headquarters of the Northwestern Fur company for all that section of the country claimed by the Chippewa from Crow Wing to Pembina northwest and northeast to Sandy lake and Fon du Lac at the head of Lake Superior.

"The contract was a go as you please, on foot, horseback, cart or canoe, any way to get there affair. The contract price for the carrying the mail was $1,100 a year."

LINCOLN HIGH SCHOOL PROGRESS

STUDENTS REPORT TO ASSEMBLY FOR SCHOOL OPENING

Supt. Bye and Mr. Claffy Address Pupils at Opening Exercises

School days! Tramp, tramp was the sound as some five hundred pair of feet wound their way into the assembly on Tuesday morning. There Mr. Bye officially opened the 1935-36 school year. With a hearty welcome to both the old and new bearers of the Blue and Gold he advised all to study diligently and to make the best use of all opportunities and to believe as he did; namely, that there was a pot of gold at the end of the rainbow.

Mr. Bye quoted "Eldorado" a poem he had learned voluntarily while in high school. The theme of the poem was that of a gallant knight who went in search of Eldorado, the city of gold.

All the faculty, who responded with a bow and a smile, were introduced by Mr. Bye.

Mr. Claffy then instructed the freshmen to use the north steps to come up and the east steps to go down.. But the freshmen weren't the only ones who needed advice, for all the students had to be informed by Mr. Claffy where they had to go to receive their schedules.

All rushed to their respective rooms to find out where their classes would be on certain hours during the next nine months.

GYMS-GEMS

(Who's Sylvia?)

If we know most of our high school students, it will not be necessary to say that she is the genius who pats and pounds, soothes or stimulates the persons of Hollywood's constellations, which brings us to the point. Girls in physical education are about to embark on carriers of amateur masseurs. There is much to be said in for the "g" of the art, except in the case of a particularly ambitious partner.

When the classes are fully organized, girls interested in working toward a school letter or numeral will be called together for the purpose of forming a G. A. A. (Girls' Athletic Association) headed by a board of captains of the major sports. "Didriksons" please keep this in the corner of that mind—and not to duty.

The annual football physical examination was held last Friday night at Dr. Melby's office. The purpose of the examination is to determine who is eligible for football. All those who do not pass are barred from play.

ENROLLMENT IS 518 STUDENTS

Large Number of Pupils Return to School on Tuesday

518 students are enrolled in Lincoln High this year. This number is not as large as it will be later in the year, but it is a good start. Of this approximately 151 students are new in the high school. 63 boys and 88 girls are starting on a new venture.

Last year the enrollment was 586. This year's enrollment is quite a decrease over last year. Last year's graduating class had a total of 130 members. The graduating class of '36 will have but 111 members.

The normal training department is composed of 16 girls. Last year there were but 13 certificates given out; therefore, an increase in that department is shown this year. The post graduate class contains 11 members, 9 of which are girls.

Although this decrease, the high school seems just as crowded as ever.

ETIQUETTE

"Oh, kid, I can't stand her!" Such remarks are often heard from school girls. This is especially true where groups of girls gather to while away time. They usually are nice and pleasant to someone who, as soon as she leaves the group, is the object of unpleasant remarks. In this way the girls, if they keep up the small talk as they grow up, will really become old "gossipers."

Also, when a new girl comes to school, instead of trying to be nice to her they really make her miserable. The few remaining lines should be remembered as an aid to all girls.

"There is so much bad in the best of us
And so much good in the worst of us
That it will ill behoove the rest of us
To speak against the rest of us."

The English IV classes have begun public speaking. They will devote the greater part of the first semester to this work, later on they will study English literature under the supervision of Mr. Hauge.

FACULTY GROUPS PURSUE STUDIES DURING SUMMER

Illinois and Minnesota Are Among Large Schools Attended

Here are glimpses of how the Lincoln High School faculty spent their respective vacations. Mr. Pope spent his time locally as did Mr. Bye, with an exception of a trip to the North Shore, and Mr. Orwoll. Mr. Orwoll whiled away his time helping young aspirants with their hand work and also made a trip to southern Minnesota and one to Canada. Mr. Chalmers spent the first two months of vacation in Thief River Falls giving swimming lessons. He attended the Red Cross Aquatic school at Lake Lincoln near Brainerd, and last month he visited at Madison, Minnesota.

Mr. Johnson spent his "vacation" working in the building field at Marshall, although he did say he took a few days off to go fishing. Mr. Lanning attended college in Chicago for 6 weeks and was at home in Egan, South Dakota the remainder of the summer. Mr. Claffy attended school during the summer session at University of Minnesota, also visiting in Chicago and Wisconsin. Miss Wise attended the Gregg College of Chicago. She also spent some time at Camp Algonquin at Algonquin, Ill., and at her home in Sebana, Missouri. Miss Diebel attended the University of North Dakota and visited in Minneapolis.

Miss Steenerson took the longest trip, going through Denver, Colorado, in Mexico, to California, up the Pacific coast, and back through the Canadian Rockies. Miss Lunder also took a Western trip to Glacier and Yellowstone National Parks. She spent quite some time at Crystal Lake. Miss Parsons spent her time at home in Northfield with the exception of a trip to Iowa and Chicago.

Miss Greenland stayed at her home in Binford, North Dakota and at Clarissa, Minnesota. Miss Springen, when asked what she did during the summer, said, quote, "I just stayed at home!" (Her home is at Mayville, North Dakota). Miss Tanberg was at her home in Thief River Falls during the summer except for a two weeks' trip along the beautiful North Shore Drive to Port Arthur. Mrs. Korstad spent six weeks with her daughter at Bald Cape Lake at St. Paul, and one week in Lincoln, Nebraska. Miss Leavitt spent the summer at Chautauqua, New York.

Miss Olson's English I Classes are reviewing grammar. They will soon start on public speaking.

SCHOOL

Last week school opened in Thief River Falls. What does school mean? To most students it means spending six hours a day, five days a week in a building where books are read and discussed under the supervision of an instructor.

It is true that we, as students, are required to go to school. But when we are in school we might as well invest our time instead of "serve" it. The students that uses his time wisely in school seldom finds it necessary to study at home. On the other hand, the student that doesn't study in school, never studies at home either, but he finds that he is sadly lacking in credits when he has completed four years in high school.

In Physics, we learn that the output equals the input; that is, it is impossible to get out more then you put in. If we expend our full resources in school, we will get meager results. Opportunity is presenting its broadside, the advantage of it.

THE THIRTEENTH

Friday the thirteenth! It is our belief that there is no such a thing as an unlucky or a lucky day. Nevertheless, it will be a lucky day for the Thundering Prowlers, as it will start their grid campaign with a victory. It will be a disastrous day for the Red Lake Falls football team because they will have to chalk up a loss.

The Prowlers have one of the scrappiest teams we have ever seen. Ably led by Captain Gunderson, pushed by Coach Lee, and supported by the student body, this team has possibilities. Let's support them; be at every game; give credit where credit is due; and we will have a team of which we can be justly proud. All right, bring on the opposition. We're ready.

NORMAL TRAINING NEWS

In order to accommodate the new agricultural department at the Washington school, the Teachers' Training Department has been moved from the Washington school to the Knox school. There are sixteen students enrolled in the training department this year. They are Alice Anderson, Corlan Dokken, Esther Deran, Betty Flodeland, Marion Hervey, Ethel Kivle, Eleanor Larson, Vivian Larson, Ila Mou, Anna Ose, Beatrice Ostmoe, Clarice Plymire, Charlotte Roberts, Agnes Sandland, Inez Werham, and Judith Wold. Miss Stapleton was pleased to say that all the students who graduated from her class last year now have positions as teachers.

LEEMEN LAUNCH ATTACK FRIDAY

Red Lake Falls Opposes Prowlers in Opener Friday P. M.

With an initial turnout of 35 candidates that has now mounted to over forty, football started for the 1935 season, Sept 2nd. All candidates were in good shape with the exception of Nelson who is handicapped by leg injuries. At present the squad has been having short chalk talks during the noon hour. During the first few days special attention was given to blocking and tackling.

Coach Lee also gave much attention to strengthening the line. Capt. Gunderson has been shifted from a back position to a tackle to pair with Hetland, another husky letterman who was shifted from guard to tackle. In other front positions Jung and Mickelson, both lettermen, are expected to hold down center and an end respectively. Other promising line candidates are Gibson, Helquist, Silk, Peterson, Bredeson, Lorenson and Adkins, who was shifted from end, at guard and tackle posts with Olson and Stadum as candidates for the vacant end. In the backfield M. Nesse and Art Nelson are the returning lettermen, while the scramble for the other posts is between J. Nesse, Mattson, Hooren, Hess, Kelly, Al Nelson, and a few others. J. Nesse and Mattson are outstanding. Van Pelt, one of last years stars, has not yet decided whether or not to return to school.

The first football game of the season will be played on home field at 4:00 o'clock tomorrow afternoon with Red Lake Falls. It is expected that Mickelson will play end again this year, and Hetland, who played guard last year, will be placed in one of the tackle positions. Jung will hold the pivot position at center. The backfield is not certain, however, it will probably be the two Nesse brothers, Nelson, and Gunderson.

Even though the average weight of the team is light, they make up with speed.

Red Lake Falls will confront us with a light line, all except the tackle positions, and the fastest backfield of its history.

Last year the Prowlers took Red Lake Falls by a score of 13-0. We hope they will do the same, or even better, this year.

Three girls from Lincoln High School represented the Pennington County 4-H clubs at the Minnesota State Fair. They were Marion Green, Pennington County Style Queen, Marjorie Matheson, first prize in canning, and Florence Hanson, first prize in Sewing II.

CALENDAR OF EVENTS

Week of 9-13
Sept. 13—Football game with Red Lake Falls here.
Week of 16-20
Sept. 16—Constitution Day. Schools in session.
Sept. 20—Football game with Grafton there

ENROLLMENT FOR CHORUS INCREASES

Various Groups Meet During Week; Tryouts Now Being Held

The enrolment for chorus this year is about one hundred, which is a great increase on last year. Because of the large enrollment the group will meet in sections. The sopranos will meet on Monday, tenors on Tuesday, altos on Wednesday, and the basses on Thursday, with the combined groups meeting on Friday.

The boys' double quartette met Wednesday evening at 7:00 for their first rehearsal. The personnel of the group is the same as last year. They will meet every Tuesday from 6:30 to 7:30 in Room 103.

Tryouts for girls' small groups were held this week and the selected groups will be announced soon.

Tryouts for boys quartettes will begin this week.

ALUMNI NEWS

Checking up on a few of last year's graduates, we find quite a number back in our high school taking a post graduate course. Among these are Harriet Jung, Martha Storholm, Eleanor Leiran, Morris Haney, and Harold Hoialman. Among those who are going to college are our two Dorothys, Rau and Traver, who are attending the Bemidji Teachers' College; Theodore Quale and Archild Fjelstad, Concordia; Robert Olen, St. Olaf; and Kathleen and Phyllis are both (naturally) taking nurses' training at some hospital in Minneapolis. Taking normal in this city are Inez Werhen, Ethel Kivle, and Corlan Dokken. W. C. T. U. News Notes

"Teach—Diligently."

It is not surprising that the eyes of those interested in the welfare of American youth were focused upon the teachers of the nation as they were gathered in their annual convention. The future welfare of the nation depends more upon their decisions, perhaps, than the action of any other group, since in their care, for many hours each day during the greater part of the year, are placed the most precious possession of home and community — the youth. As they fit and train this, the coming generation, so will the country and the world be molded in the fast-approaching years. It is a consideration which must make even the most experienced educator breathless at times.

Surely then, all who wish the young people to be well-equipped for the responsibilities which will speedily be theirs, must have rejoiced if they saw the statement —which so much of the daily press saw fit to omit—that the National Education Association as a part of its permanent platform, adopted at its recent convention, "urges complete and scientific instruction in the schools regarding the effects of alcohol and narcotics on the human body and the social organization." It also expressed "its disapproval of any false advertising or propaganda on the subject."

As the schools open again the W. C. T. U. in each community will be standing back of these teachers, ready to cooperate so far as lies within its power. And this attitude should be made known early in the fall, for the task before the educators will not always be an easy one.

CAPTURE SIX-INCH TARANTULA IN STORE

Sleepy Eye.—Having a full grown tarantula staring at him as he was about to cut bananas from a bunch at the rear of a grocery store was the startling experience of Jim Rono at Sleepy Eye. With the help of Ed Schroepfer, Rono snared the venomous spider and it is now on display in a glass jar at the store. The tarantula is an extremely large one, measuring about six inches from tip to tip. Considerable damage was done to the bananas, the boys claim, as the spider galloped about as they were attempting its capture. The bananas on which it was found were uncrated the day before and had hung in the back room of the store more than 24 hours before the spider was noticed.

SHOW GOES ON—BUT WITHOUT CHORUS GIRLS

Appleton.—The show must go on but not without chorus girls, a dictum given after a rather unsuccessful performance at the county fair at Appleton revealed, and as a result businessmen in that town are being given the "break" as 26 comely young ladies are waiting for money from home to leave this section of the country. The chorus girls had everything that is required except ability to get the steps all done in unison, and this lack of rhythm also seemed to prevail among the ladies' orchestra. Complaints to the booking agency caused the termination of their engagements at the closing performance, and while the show went on, in true show tradition, it went on without them. Approximately 26 young ladies were given $20 each and told to develop their own individual initiative. Since most of them came from New York and the far East, their destinations were a little too far to go for $20 on Mr. Pullman's cushions. As a result, they are mostly waiting letters from friends and relatives and hoping something will turn up.

URGE ACTION NOW TO GET TEST FOR BANG'S DISEASE

Federal Funds Must be Spent Before Year-End, Says Farm Bureau

Immediate action by Minnesota farmers in Bang disease eradication work is urged by the Minnesota Farm Bureau Federation in a resolution adopted at a directors meeting held in St. Paul on Aug. 31. Federal funds for the eradication of contagious abortion in cattle must be spent before the end of the year, according to present regulations, and if Minnesota is to get its share of service it must act at once.

Farmers who have not previously applied for the Bang test, as well as those whose herds have been given a negative rating, are urged to contract for the test at their earliest opportunity. Recently increased federal indemnities for reacting cattle add to the desirability of the test at this time.

Farmers who sign the federal contract also may sign the state contract, thus making possible the state accreditation of their herds on passing of the federal test. County Farm Bureau offices will give their full cooperation in getting the work under way, as they did in the area t. b. testing campaign, brought to a successful conclusion about a year ago when the entire state was given the coveted modified accredited rating.

STATE BOARD OF HEALTH PLANS PLUMBERS TESTS

The state board of health will hold examinations for master and journeyman plumbers at 9:00 a. m. on Friday, Sept. 20, in room No. 303 of the Agricultural Building, University Farm School, St. Paul. The law provides that all persons who do plumbing work in cities or villages of 5,000 or more population must be licensed by the State Board of Health.

NATION'S BEST LIMBURGER MADE IN WRIGHT CO.

Buffalo.—The limburger cheese you whiff, whether stamped Armour, Hormel, Swift of Cudahy, in all probability came from Hasty, little Wright county village near Buffalo. Just 11 years ago the Modern Co-Operative Cheese company at Hasty earned a national reputation among the huge distributors of cheese and meat products, and today the company produces 300,000 pounds of limberger each year using millions of pounds of milk from Wright county farmers. The cheese is taken from the milk room 24 hours after it has been separated from the raw milk, cut into pound sizes and salted, and then removed to the curing room where it is placed on racks and left for 10 days, treated to a salt water wash each day.

GRAND CHAMPION SHORTHORN SIRE AT N. W. SCHOOL

Outstanding Animal Places First at Minnesota State Fair

Divide Chancellor 1762895, Shorthorn herd sire at the Northwest School and Station, was declared the grand champion Shorthorn herd sire at the Northwest School and Station, was declared the grand champion Shorthorn bull at the Minnesota State Fair last week. This bull was bred by the Allen Cattle Company of Colorado, and purchased at the International Livestock exposition last fall. Last year as a senior yearling he won first in his class at the Kansas City Royal and International Livestock show.

The Northwest Station is also developing a stud of purebred Percheron horses. The station stallion, Minnesota Carnot, was foaled at University Farm in April 1933. He is a half brother to the grand champion mare at the recent state fair.

Two outstanding Holstein sires are in service in the station dairy herd. The dam of the senior sire, Minnehaha Burke Sir DeKol, made a state record as a five year old of 21,528 pounds milk and 705.6 pounds of fat. Many of his daughters have averaged 100 pounds more fat than their dams. The junior herd sire Governor Bancstine Matador, was bred at the Northwest Station. His dam made a junior three-year-old record of 18,940 pounds milk and 653 pounds fat.

The Northwest Station also maintains excellent purebred hogs and sheep and one of the highest producing flocks of White Leghorns in the Northwest.

The lecture and laboratory work in animal and dairy husbandry during the school year, which opens September 30, will be presented by O. M. Kiser and R. J. Christgau, while A. M. Pilkey will have charge of the work in poultry. Emphasis will be placed on breeding, feeding, and herd and flock management, together with practical work in slaughtering and curing meat.

ISLE BARBER OWNER OF RAZOR WITH HISTORY

Isle.—D. H. Kennedy, Isle barber, is displaying to his patrons a razor that has shaved William McKinley and Theodore Roosevelt. Long since retired from use because honing has worn it too narrow to hold lather, Mr. Kennedy treasures the old blade as a keepsake. It was when Mr. Kennedy was proprietor of an eight chair shop in Superior, Wis., about thirty-five years ago that he shaved Roosevelt who was in the city campaigning for the presidency. Five years later he used it in smoothing the handsome features of McKinley, also in Superior on a presidential campaign. Mr. Kennedy purchased the razor in Chicago about forty-two years ago.

WPA IN STATE NOW HAS REACHED ITS 50 MILLION QUOTA

Flood of Projects Submitted to Christgau Ahead of Deadline

Minnesota was assured of its full share of WPA funds this week as Victor Christgau, state Works Progress administrator, approved more than $18,400,000 in projects to swell the total of Minnesota work proposals now in Washington for allocation of funds to $50,528,000.

In the final drive to provide jobs for their unemployed, communities of 81 of the state's 87 counties submitted projects to the state WPA headquarters during the week. The rush followed the president's announcement that September 12 is the deadline for getting projects to the nation's capitol.

The group submitted this week will furnish jobs for a year to close to 22,000 persons, it is estimated. Altogether, the Minnesota work proposals will give steady employment during the coming year to approximately 58,400 persons now on relief.

"The cooperation communities over the state have given us assures Minnesota of its full share of WPA funds," Christgau stated. "The projects now at the capitol are sufficient to provide jobs for the full quota of relief persons assigned to us. We also expect to have a substantial reservoir of projects to draw on."

He pointed out that the Public Works administration and approximately 50 other federal agencies also are operating to absorb the state's relief load.

"We have every reason to believe," Christgau added, "that the program will be in full swing by November 1. It usually takes about 30 days for the time of submitting projects to Washington to get the release of funds. Once this money is made available to us, the work will start immediately."

In less than 48 hours, the 835 proposals in the latest consignment to Washington were sent through the engineering and administrative channels at the state Headquarters. Less than six weeks have elapsed since the first of the more than $50,000,000 in work projects passed through the hands of the state administrator. Of the aggregate the federal government will furnish $44,323,000 with labor to get $36,059,500 of this amount. Sponsoring communities will contribute $6,205,732 for materials and supplies needed in establishing permanent and worthwhile improvements.

Largest among the week's approved projects were two statewide enterprises, a $2,130,000 education and recreation program to give employment to 2,150 "white-collar workers; and a $2,541,381 proposal which would make possible $20,000 to $30,000 in improvements and new facilities at each of the county fair grounds in the state.

Aimed at the development of local talent in athletics, drama, music and the arts, the recreational activities will have three principal objectives; first, to provide employment for especially trained persons as leaders; second, to offer a well-balanced program of worthwhile leisure time activities; and third to develop community morale. No standard program is being advanced, but a variety of activities will be offered according to the needs and special interests of the community.

The week also saw the WPA Youth program under the direction of George A. Selke, president of St. Cloud Teachers college, in full swing. High school superintendents were informed of the number of needy students to whom they could offer jobs by which they may make an average of $6 a month during the school year. At the state's colleges applications of students needing financial help were being received by the registrars. Selke advised students eligible for the aid to get in touch with authorities at the school they expect to attend immediately.

FISH CATCHES MAN: FRONT PAGE NEWS

Benson.—When a dog bites a man, it's news; and when a fish catches a man, it really should be given headlines. On a recent fishing trip to the north country, R. W. Rowland, auto dealer at Benson, actually saw a 20 pound muskie catch a man. The guide had taken the party out at the head of a small island to have a try at a large fish which had been seen there, and sure enough, one of the fishermen hooked a muskie that gave a terrific fight. The fish "charged" his captor, and the first thing the fisherman knew he had his intended quarry out on the bank. The fish had been hooked by the front one of the three gang hooks, and in its struggles it sank one of the other hooks in the man's leg. Every time the muskie flopped, the hook sank deeper and the man yelled louder. The guide finally arrived and dispatched the fish with a club.

PROJECTS HERE ARE APPROVED BY STATE WPA

Women's Sewing Project is Among Those Approved in St. Paul

BRIDGE IN SMILEY GIVEN STATE O. K.

Total of $132,000,000 in State Projects Sent to Washington

Minnesota had $132,000,000 in work projects in the hands of Washington authorities this week as representatives of the Works Progress administration in every county in the state rushed their proposals to state headquarters at St. Paul to get them approved by Victor Christgau, state WPA administrator, before the deadline.

In less than three days the state WPA administrator placed his signature on $82,000,000 in public improvements and enterprises for Minnesota. More than $50,000,000 previously had been submitted.

Enough work is provided in the applications, it is estimated, to give steady employment for a year to 135,000 persons now on relief.

Of the aggregate funds asked by Minnesota, $92,744,000 would go to labor. About $22,500,000 of which a little more than $17,480,000 would be contributed by sponsoring agencies, would be spent for materials and equipment. Federal funds alone would amount to approximately $115,450,000.

In this week's group of projects from Minnesota were 2,019, representing every county in the state. Largest of them was a $20,190,000 state-wide plan for the demolition of unsafe and obsolete rural schools to be replaced by modern structures. Every county also would share in this proposal to put nearly 23,000 persons on steady jobs during the coming year.

The projects submitted for Pennington county include:

Thief River Falls—sewing project, federal $3,018, sponsor $290; trim trees along municipal power lines, federal $372, sponsor $125; installing water main, federal $1,851, sponsor $1,463; constructing white way, federal $252, sponsor $1,418; finish and install light posts, federal $1,267, sponsor $1,628; home nursing, federal $2,820; extend sewer, federal $253, sponsor $82; demolish four frame buildings, federal $582; assisting county librarian, federal $900; sponsor $15; building new recreational center, federal $3,859, sponsor $1,973. Smiley Twp.—constructing wood bridge, federal $2,807, sponsor $307. Goodridge—construct frame building in school district No. 8, federal $3,160, sponsor $4,507.

With the preliminary work of getting the Minnesota program definitely shaped for Washington's approval out of the way, Christgau said, "We are ready to take over the part of the state's relief load which has been assigned to us as soon as the funds are allocated by Washington.

"The response given us by every county in the state assures Minnesota of its full quota of relief funds. Though we cannot expect to get the full amount asked, we are confident of approval of a sufficient number to give every employable man and woman a job during the next year. Communities have shown wonderful initiative in drawing up a large variety of projects which not only adapt themselves to all kinds of working conditions, but also provide an outlet for all the various trades, crafts and professions.

MANY SPEAKERS ADDRESS ANNUAL F.-L. PICNIC HERE

Paul A. Rasmusson Advocates State Printing of Textbooks

Several hundred county residents attended the annual Farmer-Labor picnic Sunday at the C. L. Heinze farm south of the city and heard addresses by a group of party leaders headed by Paul A. Rasmusson of Moorhead, recently named state budget commissioner.

Other speakers introduced by H. O. Berve, chairman, included Charles D. Egley of the Farmers Union organization in South St. Paul; Judge J. E. Montague of Crookston; Senator Henry G. Teigan of Minneapolis; Rep. Erik Friberg of Roseau; and Rep. J. O. Melby of Oklee.

Mr. Rasmusson declared that government was now in the hands of the wealthy, and that steps should be taken to restore control to the common people. He also defended the plank in the Farmer-Labor platform calling for the printing of textbooks by the state, asserting that under the present system school books are unduly partial to the capitalistic classes.

Mr. Egley advocated replacement of the capitalistic system by a cooperative commonwealth, and criticized the Roosevelt administration for not going far enough. Judge Montague criticized the 1935 state legislature for failing to seat W. E. Day of Bagley as representative from this district in place of Marius Waldal of Plummer. Mr. Teigan discussed legislative matters.

SKATING RINK ELECTION SET FOR OCTOBER 7

Volunteer Judges to Serve in Vote on $15,000 Bond Issue

ACTION IS TAKEN TO ACCEPT GOLF COURSE

City Is Insured Against the Project Being Expense Burden

The city council at an adjourned meeting Wednesday evening designated Monday, October 7, as the date of the special city election to vote on a $15,000 bond issue to qualify for a federal grant of $15,118 for the construction of an enclosed skating rink at the rear of the Auditorium.

The election will be conducted virtually without cost to the city as a sufficient number of judges and clerks of election have volunteered their services. Of the $15,000 to be raised by the bond issue, a total of $11,836 would go toward defraying the city's share of the building cost, while the remainder would be applied on the acquisition of the site, which is now under condemnation.

A formal resolution also was adopted at the meeting to accept a deed of the Thief River Falls golf course from the local club. The course will be operated under the supervision of the park board, and in the event the city decides later to discontinue the project, title will revert to the golf club, which will reimburse the city for its expenses on improvement and maintenance of the course.

The Northern Chevrolet company asked a reduction in the assessed valuation of its garage building and site, holding that the present figures are out of line with those on comparable properties. The matter was referred to the council tax committee with power to act.

OPEN OFFICE HERE FOR DEALING WITH MUD LAKE OWNERS

Attorney General Charges Eleven Attorneys With Soliciting Cases

A Thief River Falls office was established this week by Attorney General Harry H. Peterson to give owners of land in the Mud lake game refuge area a chance to deal directly with the state in selling their property for the refuge. The office, located in the rural credit building on Main av. S., is in charge of Armond Brattland, assistant attorney general.

Attorney General Peterson Saturday threatened disbarment proceedings against eleven attorneys, whose names were not made public, on charges of soliciting cases from land owners involved in the game refuge condemnation suit.

The state desires to pay a full and fair price to the approximately 800 land owners but Peterson said there is evidence that the owners are making court contests of the appraisals as a result of solicitation by lawyers in violation of law and the legal code of ethics.

"We have considerable damaging evidence already and if this wholesale solicitation is not stopped immediately, we will institute disbarment proceedings," declared the attorney general.

The Mud lake game refuge involves a $5,000,000 federal development project and the last legislature authorized condemnation of the required 53,000 acres for sale to the government.

Mr. Christianson has gained wide publicity from his independent stand on national issues, and his address, one of the first to be delivered by him since his recent return from Washington, will inspire much interest.

At the same time John Arnold, chairman of the committee in charge of the contest for the selection of four popularity queens, stated that a veritable avalanche of votes was cast during the past week, and that a tabulation made Wednesday evening revealed that some of the candidates now have substantial totals of votes. The list of contestants will be further reduced by elimination before next Thursday, it was announced.

Plans for the Veterans Day program Thursday, October 10, which will open the three-day celebration, are progressing satisfactorily, according to Chairman A. B. Stenberg of the local Legion post activities committee cooperating with Commander Ward Long. Included in the list of Legion and auxiliary officials who are expected to participate in the afternoon and evening programs are Harold M. Rogers of Minneapolis, state Legion commander; Dr. Harry Hedin of East Grand Forks, first vice commander; and C. A. Zwiener of St. Paul, state adjutant; B. M. Thompson of Henning, ninth district commander; Fred L. Chapman of Minneapolis, grand chief of the Forty and Eight; Mrs. Vigen, state auxiliary president; and Mrs. T. L. Stickney, ninth district president.

A gala dance will be held at the Auditorium each evening of the three-day celebration with music to be supplied by Wayne Stute and his band, noted musical organization which carries its own amplifying equipment, and intersperses its dance tunes with vocal solos, duos, quartets and ensemble singing. The band has played at leading hotels and cafes in Baltimore, Boston, Detroit, Pittsburgh and Dayton.

ALL BUT 24 OF 250 CARS TESTED HERE HAVE GOOD BRAKES

Seven Highway Patrolmen Make Checkup Here Thursday

Seven members of the state highway patrol were in the city last Thursday to check brakes on cars driven by local motorists, as well as to make a check of drivers licenses. They reported finding the condition of cars here above the average for the state.

Of a total of 250 cars checked, 226 were found to have brakes in satisfactory condition, while 24 were found to have defective equipment, and of these ten were arrested and fined for having no braking power at all.

All but ten of the 250 drivers were found to have drivers licenses in their possession, and of the ten only two were discovered not to have secured a license, the other eight having them at home.

The check was made on Main av. S., local police cooperating.

Nervous Children Often Become Stutterers, Says Minnesota Medical Ass'n.

Stutterers usually have the same organs and mechanisms of speech as non-stutterers. The difference, according to a bulletin issued today by the public health education committee of the Minnesota State Medical association, is not in physical make up but in emotional type.

There are more than 200,000 stutterers in the United States according to figures cited by the bulletin. Almost without exception they are recruited from the highly sensitive over-emotional, nervous types of children. They developed into stutterers because of unfortunate surroundings neurotic parents and bad handling, usually they live in an atmosphere surcharged with tension.

The more they stutter, furthermore, the more fearful and sensitive and futile they become. Many of them become fixed in a vicious circle in which their stuttering is only one factor in their general misfortune.

Parents of such children, the obvious "stutter-types" are especially warned by physicians to watch themselves as well as their children. They should see that these children especially have a peaceful home, gentle, unflurried handling and good general hygiene.

Such children should be protected especially from undue fatigue and excitement and helped to adjust themselves happily to companions at home and at school. It is easier to prevent stuttering than to cure it after it is established.

Modern methods of cure for stuttering begin with an attempt to counteract the bad effects of early training and bad home surroundings. The first thing to do, whether the stutterer is a child or an adult, is to create an atmosphere of peace and calm and good humor. Without that no training is likely to be a success.

Extra Suit Skirt Should Be of Contrasting Fabric

When you buy your suit this year—that you will buy a suit goes without saying, for it's a suit year—be sure to order an extra skirt of contrasting fabric. For instance, a separate black skirt to go with a checked jacket, or the other way around. Stripes and cross bars are the most important note in skirts this spring.

In the matter of accessories a suit year calls for caution and taste. Don't wear high heels with tailored suits. That goes ditto for nose veils, fussy bags and gloves and very low-necked lacy blouses. Those things all have their place—when you put on your silk afternoon suit.

SPORTS AID TEMPERANCE IN SCOTLAND

Very little sacrifice is today required from a total abstainer in Scotland, said Mrs. Burnett Smith—better known to many under her pen name of Annie S. Swan—speaking at a public temperance meeting in Edinburgh. Instead of finding oneself the only water drinker at a social table, she asserted, according to the press, one is now likely to discover that the wine drinker is the exception.

Among other prominent speakers was the moderator of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland, the Right Rev. Marshall Lang, who stated that Scotland was becoming a more sober nation, due greatly to the growing appreciation for outdoor sports and the simpler amusements of life. He protested against the liquor posters and liquor advertisements, urging that both be made illegal.

The education of children along temperance lines was the topic of Lord Rowallan, who suggested that an ideal be set up for children by telling them of internationally famous sportsmen and sportswomen who are abstainers.

SHOULD HAVE A COMMISSION

Mayor Frank Rinkel has suggested that if possible the voters in the city election to be held here this fall be given an opportunity to express themselves on the question of a special commission to handle the city's rapidly growing light and power business. The suggestion is timely. If such a proposal were favored by the voters then it might be possible to secure the necessary enabling legislation passed by the special session that is to be called, permitting immediate reorganization of the department along more business-like lines.

According to city clerk P. G. Pederson the billing for light and power this year is likely to exceed a hundred thousand dollars. The income for the first eight months of the year showed an increase of nine thousand dollars over the same period last year. Under the present system, being under the direct control of the council, the department is a political football and questions of administration become important factors in every election. In the last two elections the personnel of the council has changed completely, which has meant that the management of the department has been in the hands of inexperienced men. It certainly would be reasonable to expect better results from a managing board, the terms of the members of which would be staggered. It would mean that at all times the majority of the board members would be experienced, and with their responsibility limited to this one field they would be more likely to familiarize themselves with the problems of management.

Municipal ownership of such a utility has been most successful in those communities where the management has been under the direction of a special commission. It would seem, therefore, that to provide for such a commission in Thief River Falls would be a forward step.

The best news of the month for this community has been the steady advance in the market price of flax. With a very satisfactory yield in this section of the state, this crop will pay for many gallons of gasoline during the coming year.

Thief River Falls has reduced its bonded indebtedness forty thousand dollars this year. If it were not for the fact that our needs as a growing community made new expenditures necessary from time to time we would soon be out of debt. In spite of the fact that we have expended close to half a million dollars for permanent improvements during the past ten years, our bonded indebtedness is greatly reduced.

If there is any opposition to the proposed skating rink it certainly is not vocal. Everyone seems to agree that an enclosed rink would be an investment in healthy recreation that our community could well afford to make. Police say that during the skating rink season they have no trouble with the youngsters around town. From this standpoint alone the project has sufficient merit to justify the expenditure necessary to secure a permanent structure.

HOW ABOUT IT?
(Brown County Journal)

Rufus W. Hitchcock, editor of the Hibbing Tribune, and for many years leader in the Senate comes right out in the open and calls the Minnesota Leader, Farmer-Labor state organ, a liar and defies the publication to sue him for libel.

Here is the choice manner in which Hitchcock throws the harpoon into the Leader:

"We often wonder what members of the Farmer-Labor party and others who vote the Farmer-Labor ticket think of the newspaper, the Minnesota Leader, which represents them, or rather, misrepresents them, in a statewide way.

"Do they think that it is all right for such a publication to entirely disregard the truth, to deliberately feed them false information, to attempt to influence them with 'news' made out of whole cloth

"When Farmer-Labor voters base their opinions upon the statements of a publication which is notorious for its deliberate misrepresentation of everything connected with state politics or state government, how can they have any confidence in what they believe or what they think?

"The policy of the Minnesota Leader, formerly known as the Farmer-Labor Leader, is to publish political news of Minnesota, not as it is, but as it would like to have it; not as it is, but as it will best serve the political purposes of the Leader.

"The Minnesota Leader is absolutely unscrupulous in its disregard for the truth in any matter pertaining to Minnesota politics. It is more than that: its deliberate, calculated policy is to think up lies that will prejudice the voters in favor of Farmer-Labor policies and candidates, and print those lies with as great an appearance of candor and truthfulness as possible.

"This is a serious charge; if it were a false charge the Minnesota Leader could collect heavy damages from the Tribune for the libel. But we can go into any court and prove the truth of the charge. We have made it repeatedly, and the Minnesota Leader has taken it lying down every time.

"During the time that H. G. Creel was in charge of the Minnesota Leader, it was difficult to find in the Leader's columns any statement pertaining to Minnesota politics that was true, or that if it were true, was not said with the intention of deceiving.

"In one Minnesota Leader broadcast made by Mr. Creel last winter there were twelve distinct and deliberate misrepresentations of fact. We called the Leader on these lies at that time, but the Leader did not answer. It could not."

DUE TO INHERENT STRENGTH
(The Business Week)

"The present business upswing," says the American Federation of Labor, "is the healthiest thus far; it is the first not due to government spending or currency action; the first which seems due chiefly to inherent economic strength." We may well imagine that the Administration will be disappointed at this statement, coming from a source which has been so friendly. What! the recovery not due to reform? the upswing not due to the New Deal? But so it is. Even organized labor has said it.

Steel ingot production in August was the largest in the year. Carloadings in the last week of August were higher than in any August or September week since 1931. And it is a natural recovery, due to "inherent economic strength."

The filling of long-delayed wants has produced a general rise in business income. The chief benefit, naturally, has gone to corporations that perceived the necessities of the newer day and made preparations to meet them. Products and marketing methods were improved; costs were reduced by modernization and by purchase of machines that pay for themselves rapidly; and prices were adjusted to comply with changed conditions.

The Machine Tool Show in Cleveland, the first in 6 years, is a sign of the times. Business is modernizing its plants and overcoming obsolescence. It is prepared to produce cheaply and make a profit.

A St. Paul man who confessed to having $1,500 savings account while accepting relief in Ramsey county has 60 days in jail to reflect on his chiseling activities. His wife, who pleaded guilty at the same time, was fined $100. Couples like that who can well afford to keep themselves during these times make it hard for those who really are deserving of help. The judge should have ordered the man to pay his own keep while in jail so the taxpayers would not be hooked again.—Wadena Pioneer-Journal.

Maryland police authorities have published a photograph of a man robbing an ice box, the picture having been taken automatically and without the knowledge of the culprit. That is carrying crime prevention too far. The secret visit to the refrigerator is an institution too venerable to be overthrown at this late day.—White Bear Press.

News and Comment

Visitors to the state fair were much intrigued with the nobly log-constructed new Conservation Building on the fair grounds. Many a country bumpkin wondered where the Conservation Commission got the money to squander on so sumptuous a building to be used for only ten days in the year. It appears that the funds for the construction of this building, which is not only large and beautiful, but very complete, came out of the 10,000,000 appropriation made by the Legislature of 1935. It will not be attempted here to give the total cost of this handsome building built of Minnesota cedar logs, but the appropriation of 1935 appears to have been nicked for $32,896.02 of it.

Some of the boys probably got quite a bit of work putting up the building and its beautiful exterior and superbly arranged and equipped interior will give state fair visitors great pleasure—for ten days each year.

There is considerable vigorous differences of opinion in Minnesota as to a recent action of the state highway department. Those queer little nickel-looking nubbins, with shiny reflectors in them in the night time, sticking up in the middle of the highway on many curves are making a lot of talk.

The average motorist eyes them with disfavor; in fact, he does not like them at all. "When they are spending thousands to remove bridge abutments from the middle of the road," he complains, "why do they spend good money to put a new obstruction in the road?" The answer is, of course, to make the careless motorists more careful in rounding the corners.

Obstructions in the road to make the road safer, some folks think, are peculiar, especially at a cost of some $50,000 or more, 20,000 buttons at $2 per, so the gossips say, and the large labor of installing them besides.

The highway patrol, also, is wondering what will happen in the winter time if their high speed motorcycles happen to slip on an ice-covered nickel nubbin in the middle of the road. By the way, why should the state patrol be compelled to travel on motorcycles, exposed to the inclemencies of the season, and thereby advertising themselves to the possible offenders against traffic regulations? The patrol is partially equipped with closed coupes; it would seem that the efficiency of the service, as well as humanitarian considerations, demands that the coupe equipment be extended to all patrol men.

At Esquagama Lake on the Minnesota iron range, in the heart of the strongest Farmer-Labor section of the state, the G. O. P. held a picnic. The weatherman frowned on the Republicans, and it rained cats and dogs and broom-handles all day; nevertheless 500 Republicans from all parts of the state gathered for a notable and enthusiastic rally. Mrs. Simmons, the woman wonder, a Democrat who frankly says she "hates the New Deal", a farm woman from Missouri, held the picnickers enthralled with a characteristic address and Arthur Hyde, former cabinet member presented an indictment of the present national administration that was a classic.

Among other Republican picnics in the offing is one scheduled for Taylors Falls on September 22nd, at which Sen. L. J. Dickinson of Iowa will speak.

Dewey Short, the dynamic Missouri Congressman will be in Minnesota September 29th for Republican picnics at Dunn's resort in Otter Tail county and at Marshall Lyon county, while Rochester and Olmstead county together with southeastern Minnesota Republicans are arranging for a rouser the first week in October when they hope to present Col. Frank Knox to Minnesota.

DOCTOR GETS 33-POUND MUSKIE

Brooten.— The second-largest muskie hooked in the Lake of the Woods region this year, a 33-pound muskelonge, was brought back to Brooten by Dr. Townsend. Several specimens approaching the giant size, two weighing 20 and 18 pounds each, were included in the catch which was brought back as proof, and a "big one" which like the rest of its tribe managed to get away, was reported at some length. Dr. Townsend plans to mount the 33-pound muskie so that his grandchildren won't smile too much at his story.

Many grass cattle were included in the run of 9100 that arrived here at the week's opening. This heavy run following liberal receipts late last week resulted in a weak to 25c lower market on slaughter classes with stockers also showing a lower tendency. Grain-feds were practically absent, a few grassy slaughter steers going at $5.00-8.00. Most grass butcher heifers made $4.50-6.50, beef cows $4.25-5.25, good westerns $5.75-6.00, cutters $3.25-4.00, most sausage bulls $4.25-5.25, outstanding natives to $5.75, good to choice vealers $8.00-9.50, common and medium $5.50-7.50. Desirable stocker yearlings and calves sold at $6.50-7.50, choice up to $8.00, good to choice stockers and feeders over the week end at $7.00-8.25, some $8.50, and four cars fancy 1300 lb. finishing steers at $9.00.

Hogs were 10-25c higher today, bulk better 160-250 lb. $11.40-11.60, top $11.65, 140-160 lb. $11.00-11.60, 250-350 lb. $10.60-11.50, feeder pigs $11.50-12.00, good sows $9.85-10.00 or better, heavies down to $9.65.

Fat lambs were 25c lower, bulk better grade natives selling at $8.75, with several loads of fat range lambs held at $9.00 still unsold late. Most fat ewes brought $2.25-3.25. Two loads 62-65 lb. range feeding lambs made $9.00, 93 lb. yearling ewes to breeders $7.25. Fifteen loads of range lambs sold to killers and feeders Saturday at $9.00.

New State Hospital for Insane Will be Built on Site in Carlton County

Minnesota's new $2,165,000 state hospital for the insane will be located on a 1,700 acre tract at Moose Lake, in Carlton county, it was officially announced Tuesday.

Selection of the hospital site was reported by the site commission to the state board of control with the statement that the Commercial Club of Moose Lake has underwritten the cost of the land in excess of $66,500. The estimated cost of the property, which includes 27 places, is $78,450.

The report was signed by all five members of the commission who are Frank Clague of Redwood Falls, chairman; Miss Rebecca Peterson, Minneapolis, secretary; P. O. Holland, Northfield, Oliver Amundson, Hanska and James Fahay of Graceville.

The last legislature appropriated $1,200,00 for purchase of a site which was required to include not less than 640 acres of agricultural land and the cost of the buildings and equipment.

Capitol News Review
By A. I. Harris

Figures released last week by L. P. Zimmerman, SERA administrator, disclosed that more than 204,000 persons in Minnesota are living on direct relief. These figures are exclusive of those who receive their livelihood from CCC, transient camps, and other government undertaking.

State and municipal officials are quite concerned over the relief problem, especially in view of the announcement made by the federal government that all direct relief by Washington will cease on November 1. Federal officials at a meeting at the Capitol last week at which Governor Olson presided, told the assembled mayors and officials of Minneapolis, St. Paul and Duluth that PWA and WPA projects would absorb by November 1 most of the employables in the state. Thus far no actual PWA projects have as yet been put in motion.

It seems that Washington will have to cut much of the red tape which now seems to be delaying PWA projects if the promise of the federal officials is carried out. If the federal program fails to absorb the number of unemployed promised the problem of direct relief will be a staggering one, both for the cities and the state.

The meeting with the federal officials was held in the Senate Chamber in the Capitol and was called to acquaint the federal officials with the needs of Minnesota and the urgency for prompt and complete action.

The appointment of Professor Paul A. Rasmussen, Dean of Concordia College, Moorhead, as budget commissioner and director of personnel has been well received in all circles. Professor Rasmussen is an educator who is well known in his profession and known also because of his lively interest in government and other matters which affect social welfare. During the World War, Dean Rasmussen served as a lieutenant in the United States field artillery. He succeeds I. C. Strout, who resigned.

The decision of Judge A. W. Selover of Hennepin county district court holding the corporate excess tax law null and void will be appealed to the State Supreme court, Harry H. Peterson, attorney general, has stated. The court held that the law, passed in 1878, has been repealed by the Legislature "by implication." The attorney general takes issue with the court on that contention.

During the past few years, the entire system of taking care of inmates at St. Cloud state reformatory has undergone a complete change. The authorities now realize that the welfare of society is better served by real reformation and rehabilitation of the prisoner so that he can become a useful citizen than with the question of punishment for revenge.

Education-vocational and otherwise—plays an important part in the training of inmates. Co-ordination of educational activities is accomplished through the same system as that used in Antioch College, Ohio. Inmates go to school. In the afternoon they go to the shops to put into practice what they learn. An inmate desiring to learn something about electrical engineering, for example, spends his time in the morning under the tutelage of a graduate engineer. In the afternoon he works in the power plant.

Two new state highway signs for regulation of traffic are making their appearance on the trunk system. One reads "No passing" and the other reads "Thank you". The first is placed at the beginning of a danger zone on a curve or hill. The "Thank You" sign marks the end of the zone. The no-passing zones also are marked by double center lines on the highway and in most cases by reflector buttons between the center lines for night guidance. Highway officials report a marked reduction in accidents where the no-passing zones have been established.

FIND ROSARY CROSS IN PATIENTS LUNGS

Austin—A case almost as strange as the woman taking a pin from her ear which she had swallowed over half a century earlier is almost matched by a case of an Austin man. For several years his trouble was diagnosed as tuberculosis, and he had frequent hemorrages. But he failed to start to other ills for tuberculosis. After an x-ray it was decided to operate upon him. A cross from a rosary was found lodged in one of the passages to his lungs. The man then recalled that as a child he had swallowed the little cross. Now he is cured.

WHEAT CONTRACT FOR '36 OUTLINED BY COUNTY AGENT

25 Per Cent Is Maximum Cut That May be Ordered in Acreage

Copies of the 1936-39 wheat adjustment contract have just been received from the Agricultural Adjustment Administration by County Agent R. M. Douglass. He outlines the principal provisions for the benefit of prospective contract signers as follows:

1. The contract covers the years 1936-39 inclusive, but provides that the producer may withdraw at the end of 1937 if he has complied with his contract up to that time. The Secretary of agriculture may also terminate the contract at the end of any crop year by proclimation. Contract signers can make known their wishes to the secretary in regard to discontinuing the program by initiating a national referendum on the question. Such a referendum will be held if 25 per cent of the contract signers in any principal wheat growing region petition for it.

2. The base years of the new contract are the same as for the old one—1930-32 for acreage and 1928-32 for production. Under certain conditions, four-year and five-year base periods may be used, to meet special crop-rotation and summer-fallow practices.

3. The extreme rate of acreage reduction that may be required in any one year is 25 per cent. For 1936, however, only a 5 per cent reduction will be required. The maximum reduction would be required only in case of an unusually large supply and small demand.

4. The adjustment payment will be the difference between the average market price of wheat during the marketing year, and the "fair exchange" price, as determined by the relation of wheat prices to other commodity prices during the pre-war period. It will be paid only on the proportion of the crop normally consumed in this country, which is 54 per cent. About two-thirds of this payment will be distributed as soon as possible after the year's compliance has been determined, and the remainder, less necessary local administrative costs, at the end of the marketing year.

5. The contract will be open to all wheat producers who can establish a base production and acreage. Under certain conditions, farmers who did not grow wheat in all of the base years may sign contracts and receive adjustment payments on a limited scale.

6. The land retired from wheat production is to be used for pasture, hay, timber, shelter belts, soil erosion prevention, weed control, soil improvement and summer fallow.

For further information about the contract, farmers are advised to consult the county agent or members of the county wheat allotment committee.

Yule Seal Clinic for Physically Handicapped Children September 28

Physically handicapped children in Northwestern Minnesota counties will have the opportunity for medical examination by specialists, and advice at the Christmas Seal orthopedic clinic to be held at the Central high school at Crookston, Saturday, September 28.

The purpose of the Clinic is to bring before the public the possibility of correction or improvement of certain physical disabilities which may not be receiving attention and to give indigent, crippled children their chance for help.

The examiner will be an orthopedic specialist, a member of the Minnesota-Dakota Orthopedic club. Representatives of the Gillette State Hospital and the division of re-education of the Minnesota department of education will be in attendance to give advice on training facilities and opportunities for vocational training.

The Clinic hours will be from 10:00 a. m. to 4:00 p. m.

Potato Shippers Oppose Federal Crop Control

Directors of the Red River Valley Potato Shippers association went on record at Moorhead last week in opposition to the federal potato control act, claiming it not feasible and that it will work a hardship on the valley territory. A. T. Brandt, association secretary, said the valley, which has suffered from drouth for four years, will not be in position to reinstate its average normal production under the act.

POTATO BUGS DON'T LIKE JAPANESE SPUDS

Bemidji—Japanese products are competing with those of the rest of the world, but it remained for Paul Michalla, farmer at Solway near Bemidji, to start competing with Japanese potatoes by raising Japanese potatoes. Michalla planted six hills of potatoes last spring and has watched their growth with great interest. The potatoes, even tiny when full grown, are blue in color and are said to be eaten by the Japanese as an after meal delicacy. The vines are an unusually dark green, and potato bugs stay clear of them. Michalla put a number of common potato bugs on the vines at different times but they all flew away as quickly as possible, he states. A handful of the potatoes were brought to Bemidji by Michalla and placed on display.

HORSE LOSES HALF OF TAIL IN THRESHER BELT

Argyle—A horseshoe or other piece of steal will sometimes get into the cylinder of a grain separator to cause trouble for the threshing crew, but it seldom happens that a horse's tail puts a machine out of commission. One of the horses of a bundle team of Steve Tulibacki on the farm of O. L. Melgaard east of Argyle switched its tail as the team drew up to the separator with a load of bundles and the tail was caught in one of the drive belts. With the sudden twitch of its tail, the horse kicked viciously with both hind feet and knocked the belt off the pully. Half the horse's tail was pulled off and a kink put in the cylinder shaft that caused considerable delay to the machine while it was being straightened out.

FALL TERM OPENS AT N. W. SCHOOL SEPTEMBER 30TH

Largest Attendance in Recent Years Anticipated at Institution

Fall term activities at the Northwest School will open Saturday, September 28, with the first faculty meeting of the year, followed by a reception in honor of new members of the staff. Registration will take place on September 30 with the first classes scheduled for the following morning.

Outstanding among the special events of the term will be the annual home coming celebration October 26, at which time Coach R. J. Christgau's Northwest School Aggies will meet their conference rivals from the North Central School of Agriculture, Grand Rapids. The following Saturday, November 2, has been set aside for the Parents' Day celebration when parents from all Red River Valley counties will be guests of the school and attend a special program to be presented by the students.

Registrar J. W. Milnar reports a marked increase in advance room reservations as compared with the same date last year so that arrangements are being made for the largest attendance in years.

According to Superintendent A. A. Dowell much interest has been shown in the recent state law which authorizes the payment by the state of all necessary tuition, and laboratory and equipment fees to any boy or girl who has completed the eighth grade, who is under 21 years of age, who is not a high school graduate, and who comes from an organized rural district which does not offer accredited high school instruction. In addition to this aid a number of students will be assigned work to cover a part of their expenses as a result of the allotment of funds which have been made available by the Federal Youth administration.

Additional information may be secured by writing the Northwest School, Crookston.

COP BREAKS UP STRIKE OF YOUNGER GENERATION

Luverne.—The first major strike of the season was launched in Luverne when a group of 20 youthful bicycle riders, carrying banners vigorously opposing the anti-sidewalk riding edict issued by Mayor E. S. Frick, paraded through the Main street during the busiest part of Saturday afternoon. The strikers sought the sympathy of the public by means of their studied messages and signs. Carrying placards such as "We Want to Ride on the Sidewalks" and "Sidewalks or Streets?" the boys traveled as slowly as possible and on several occasions tied up traffic on busy intersections. The strike broke up into a near riot when Chief of Police P. J. Connell espied the caravan. The chief, whose main worry on Saturday afternoons is to keep traffic moving, sent the strikers scurrying in a dozen directions. After the strike was over, Keith Connell, grandson of the chief and one of the youngest strikers in the group, said, "Gosh, Grandpa sure gave me heck!"

NEW ATTRACTIONS ARE ENGAGED FOR COMING PROGRAMS

Eight New Features Will Appear in Assembly Programs

As customary, for the benefit of the students of Lincoln High School, a series of feature programs have been arranged for the coming year. These programs are outstanding for their educational entertainment. The stars and players are nationally known, and they are recommended by the Educational Entertainment Service.

A brief outline of the programs to be presented is as follows:

Frank P. Douglass, a pioneer of the Artic regions, tells of his life and adventures during the great Klondike gold rush. He relates a vivid, graphic tale of hardship and adventure. He tells how forty thousand eager men, with stout hearts and healthy bodies, put their puny strength against the inexhorable rigors of the frozen north. He tells how they risk their lives, as they braved treacherous rapids, avalanches, glaciers, and roaring canyons to find the long south gold region. He also exhibits actual gold dust and nuggets from the Klondike region.

The Lombards, Harry and Lela, present a picturesque and entertaining program of costumed musical sketches from both opera and recent musical comedy successes. The entire production is elaborately costumed and staged. This program will be interspersed with piano and whistling solos. This program is very entertaining.

Mr. Geoffrey O'Hara, composer, speaker and raconteur, will give an address on "The Fun and Philosophy of Musical Composition." Mr. O'Hara brings into his address all the vital experiences and broad sympathy that has contributed so much to his success as a song-writer, making them fascinating to the musician and music-lover as well as the ordinary persons. His keen Irish wit gives just the right zest to the address to make it an event long to be remembered.

Mr. Channing Beebe, geologist and explorer, will give a fast moving account of adventure in the jungles of West Africa. He takes you with him on a trip from the west coast of Angola to the interior of the Dark Continent. He reveals more intimate facts of African explorations than it is ordinarily possible to hear, facts not found in newspapers or books. Mr. Beebe knows African jungles as you know your home town, so come prepared to gather a great deal of information about the darkest parts of Africa.

Gladys Faubell, an outstanding versatile artist not only from the entertainment standpoint but from the educational as well, will give a novel program. Her program features singing, impersonations, musical saw, the one-woman band, ventriloquism and other novelties. She has won great recognition in the field of ventriloquism, which is a rare art for women. The program as a whole is well balanced, with plenty of music, comedy and artistry.

ETIQUETTE

Now that summer vacation is over and school has started, most boys may have forgotten what little they did know about etiquette. But now is the time for them to "brush up" on their manners and for the freshmen boys to learn a few.

Boys are judged by the way they act in public more than in private, for more people see them than at home. If any boy is to have any manners, he should practice them all the time and everywhere instead of at special events as some boys do. By these are meant small courtesies such as opening doors and allowing the teachers, older people, and girls to go through first.

When a boy enters a classroom walking with a girl, he should let her enter first. Another thing that is very important is to have all the boys "poke fun" and not be polite to the new boys who are sure to feel bashful their first day in school.

Therefore boys, show your best manners for the honor of the school.

FRANK P. DOUGLAS COMING THURSDAY

First Assembly Program Will be Present at Auditorium

Thursday at 3 o'clock in the City Auditorium, Frank P. Douglass will tell the true story of the great Klondike gold rush. This is the first in the series of Lyceum programs to be presented throughout the school year.

Mr. Douglas tells the tale of men fighting against the frozen north, braving treacherous rapids, avalanches, glaciers and roaring canyons in their search for gold. He has lived in the North since he was eight years old. When his service in the World War was finished, he went to the Near East as a member of a diplomatic mission to Romania. Three years later his longing for the Artic Circle drew him back to the Klondike.

With a pack on his back, he walked the last three hundred miles of the journey alone on snowshoes in twelve days and reached home two days before Christmas. The temperature during the time ranged between 40 and 50 below zero.

In December 1932, he submitted the story of that thrilling race against time to the Elgin Adventurers' Club and was awarded first prize—a seven hundred dollar platinum watch. Floyd Gibbons broadcast the tale over coast-to-coast network on the 10th anniversary of the night Mr. Douglas completed his memorable trip.

Mr. Douglas brings with him several samples of nuggets and raw gold-dust as well as a pair of native Indian snowshoes, parka, gold pan, and a selection of Klondike curios and invites his audience to inspect this unusual exhibit.

LINCOLN HIGH TIMES

Who were the h. s. boys and girls a certain history teacher referred to as breaking rules of Etty Kett in high school by whistling in assembly? Who are the children seen about school with a decidedly green color betraying them to the rest of us? Etty Kett in high school says "Don't chew gum so other people are so facinated they stare at you!" Who was the senior girl who will make one grand cheer leader this season (Remember at pep fest?) At the same time how about some more of youse guys and youse gals trying too and helping get more spirit for football and basketball games? This year with loads of pep, all we need is some more swell leaders. What senior boys' hat was an object of extreme interest at the Alumni game? What 2 sophomore boys feared for their very existence because of this same hat?

GYM GEMS

"Come let us be joyful, come let us be gay,
Come gather life's roses, before they fade away,
Now don't you worry and don't you fret,
There's plenty of pep in the old man yet.
Come let us be joyful, come let us be gay."

Do we know our high school girls? If we do, we know that they get a big "bang" out of folk dancing. So last week's gym classes were enjoyed because the girls folk-danced. They sang the above song while dancing the "Virginia Reel", and were accompanied by a piano while dancing the "Swedish Clap Dance."

If the girls are in favor of it, next week they will take posture tests, after which they will pick out a "Venus De Milo" from all the gym classes. Let's wait now to see who'll be "Venus".

IT PAYS TO BE A STYLE QUEEN

Thrills and Chills of the Minnesota State Fair Told by M. Green

Editor's Note: (Marion Green, Pennington County 4-H Style Queen has consented to write an article relating her experiences at the State Fair).

It was a great surprise to me when I was chosen the Pennington County 4-H Style Queen. For this I was awarded a free trip to the Minnesota State Fair.

All this was a great thrill to me because it was my first visit to Minneapolis and St. Paul. On some of our tours we took in the University campus, Fort Snelling, the parks, Capitol and State buildings, and also the downtown department stores. All the tall buildings and skyscrapers made me feel small and very unimportant.

The State Fair grounds are in St. Paul and located next to the University Farm, where all the 4-H Club members stayed. The exhibits in the various departments were very illustrative. During the duration of the Fair demonstrations of bread baking, canning, and safety-first were given to decide the champion of each department. These demonstrations and the clothing and Style Show were the leading attractions at the 4-H Building.

Of the 88 4-H girls taking part in the Style Show I was chosen Queen of the second year clothing and also one of the five ladies-in-waiting in the queen's court.

The last and most interesting "get-together" of the 4-H'ers was at a banquet held at the Radisson Hotel. The one thousand four hundred or so of us were guests of the Minneapolis Civic and Commerce. Joe Hauser and the Minneapolis Miller were introduced to us and the National Champion Banjo Band entertained us.

I enjoyed the trip and the State Fair immensely, and I wish I were still there.

MEET THE PROWLERS

Here is a minute biography of the members of Coach Lee's football squad:

Arnold Gunderson: Captain, 160 pounds, 5 ft. 11 inches, tackle, senior. Gunderson has won five major letters in his first three years, two in football, and three in track. Last year "Gunder" was used in the backfield where he was an outstanding plunger. This year he has been moved up to a tackle where, in the first game, he was outstanding on both defense and offense.

Gilbert Mickleson, 150 pounds, 6 feet, senior. "Mick" is a letterman both in football and basketball and in the coming season will head the Lincoln basketeers. Last season he stood out especially on offense where his pass-catching was exceptional. This year he has developed into a strong defensive player as well. In addition to his other accomplishments he played on the baseball team and is a member of the National Athletic Honor Society.

Art Nelson, 162 pounds, 5 feet, 11 inches, back, senior. Art is a two year letterman in football and has won one letter in basketball. He was handicapped at the beginning of the season by leg infections but seems to have overcome this now. He is a terror on defense and very few ball runners care to make more than one visit in his territory. In addition to his athletic accomplishments Art is a member of the National Athletic Honor Society, senior class vice-president, and is known as the "Romeo" of the team.

Victor Jung, 160 pounds, 6 ft. center, senior. Vic won his major letter in football and basketball last year. In his sophomore year he played all but a few minutes and no substitute gains were made over him. He is also a member of the track team, president of the senior class, and a member of the National Athletic Honor Society.

SUPPORT

On behalf of the Fighting Prowlers, we earnestly solicit your support next Saturday. We have a football team in our school! Those who saw the Red Lake Falls game can vouch for that. But Saturday we will be battling against heavy odds.

Grafton has a first-rate team. For six years we have been unable to beat them. Why?

We don't like to say that they "grow them tougher" in North Dakota; we won't agree that they are smarter ball players; we know they haven't better coaches.

Usually we point to the extra practice that the North Dakota team gets. In Minnesota we can't begin practice until the first of September, in North Dakota they start about August 15.

But, despite this aid to better organization, the Prowlers are going to fight, fight, and fight! They will go far with a few breaks.

What they need most is support. They need encouragement. Last Friday we had a fair-sized crowd at the game but no Pep!

The students should try to instill in the players their own enthusiasm. Keep them on their toes. When they are in the shadows of their own goal, they need encouragement more than at any other time of the game.

But then the crowd sits back and bites its fingernails instead of being on its toes to save that touchdown!

When we stand at the threshold of a touchdown, when only one yard is between the team and victory, that is when the going is toughest for the offensive. Here a little encouragement goes a long way toward winning the ball game.

Let's have a little zipper, a lot of pep, and a showy display of enthusiasm at Grafton! PEP! PEP! PEP!

PROWLERS DEFEAT OPPONENTS 27-0

Lincoln Squad Wins First Game of Season by Wide Margin

Friday the thirteenth proved to be a lucky day for the Prowlers when they defeated Red Lake Falls 27-0 in their first grid contest of the season. From the opening whistle to the end of the game the Prowlers outplayed their opponents in every respect.

The locals started their march to victory in the first quarter when Milton Nesse took the ball across for the first touchdown of the game. Jack Adkins kicked the goal, making the score 7-0. In the second quarter Nesse again carried the pigskin over the line and Jack Adkins followed and kicked the goal as in the first quarter. The first half ended with the score of 14-0.

When the teams came out after the rest period between halves, Red Lake Falls seemed to have gained a little more strength. However the Prowlers played harder too, and James Nesse caught a pass from brother Milton which resulted in the third touchdown of the game. Adkins, true to faith, kicked the goal for the third consecutive time making the score 21-0.

The fourth quarter saw another touchdown made by Milt Nesse. This time Adkins made his first miss. After this touchdown Coach Lee put in the whole second string. Then Red Lake Falls threatened our goal line for the first and only time of the game when, on a fortunate play, they got the ball on the Prowlers fifteen yard line. Lee then sent in the first squad and they regained the ball and punted out of danger. This was the only time during the whole game that the Prowlers had to kick, except of course, on the kickoff.

Claffy Urges Prompt Purchase of Tickets

The students have not purchased a very great number of either football or assembly tickets. All classes have purchased nearly the same number of football tickets with the freshmen leading in the row for assembly tickets. Sophomores, Juniors and seniors follow as named.

Students are advised to buy their football tickets now as sales will be discontinued Friday. The price of these tickets is 35 cents while the price of each individual game is 20 cents.

Assembly tickets are only 25 cents, and there will be 8 programs, most of them held at the auditorium in the afternoon. According to this, the cost of each program is about 3 cents, otherwise the price is 10 cents.

The total cost is 60 cents for 12 programs and games. Mr. Claffy will make arrangements for those who are not able to buy their tickets now but will be able to later on. All students should be able to buy their tickets at these prices.

Football Will Replace Freshman Initiation

The customary freshman-sophomore football game will be played sometime in October on the high school football field.

The losing side or class will present a party for the winning side. All of the members of both classes will be invited. A program will be presented at the party, both the sophomore and freshman members taking part.

A football game has been chosen as the favorite means of freshman initiation.

JUNG NAMED HEAD OF SENIOR CLASS

First Meeting Held Tuesday Evening in Rear of the Assembly

The first senior class meeting of the year was held Tuesday evening, September 12, in the rear of the assembly.

The meeting was called to order by Francis Engle, the president of the Junior class of last year. The election of officers of the senior class for the coming year was then held. Those elected are Victor Jung, president; Art Nelson, vice-president; Flora Schroeder, secretary; and James Nesse, treasurer. Miss Tandberg and Mr. Claffy were chosen as advisors. A small committee was appointed to count the ballots after the meeting.

Much of the business for the coming year was discussed at this meeting. The first question that arose was that of class dues. It was unanimously agreed to set the dues at one dollar a semester or two dollars for the year. This is more than is customary, but it will enable the seniors to publish a larger "Prowler" than usual. The second question that arose was the publishing of a "Prowler". Everyone agreed that a "Prowler" must be published and that it should be bigger and better than the "Prowlers" published in the past few years. The question of class rings was also taken up and the matter was referred to the new officers who will appoint a committee to select rings.

The seniors also decided to sell hot dogs at the football games this year. A small committee was appointed to sell the hot dogs. They are Audrey Anderson, chairman, Philip Pritchard, and Margaret Larson. This committee will select more students to help them in the sales.

PEP FEST HELD FRIDAY MORNING

Pep Meeting Held Prior to Opening of Football Season

Friday morning, the 13th, occurred the first pepfest of the 1935-36 school year.

The program opened when Mr. Lanning, a very good master-of-ceremonies, introduced the pep squad. The pep squad then favored us with a song "Football Season Is On." In this song they reminded us that it was necessary to have a football ticket to see the game, the ticket costing but 35 cents for four football games. They also called attention to the fact that the senior class was going to sell hot dogs at the game in the afternoon. Next Gordon Holte and Bruce Prichard showed us how we look when watching a football game by walking across the stage in big sheep-lined coats. Following this, Edna Lee led the "Yea Prowler" yell. Mr. Lanning, who knocked our pep last year, gave us extra credit this year. "Dutchy" was then called upon to play the "Victory March." With Mr. Lanning as leader and the 518 voices in high school as his chorus, the school song was sung.

The main feature on the program was the speech of Coach Lee. He said that Thief River Falls ought to be able to put eleven men on the field that were as good as any other team could place there. He also said that although the teachers told you to be a "good loser", he said to be a "poor loser". By this he explained he did not mean that after the game to go and tell the other fellow it was all luck but to say to yourself, "I'll do better the next time."

Captain Arnold Gunderson was then introduced to the students. Mr. Lanning told how Gunderson's parents had started him with "Wheaties" until now he is what he is—a powerful tackle and also captain of the squad. He then introduced the team one by one. While the team stood, Edna and Martha led two yells "Rrrrah Prowlers" and "15 Rah's" for the team.

GRAFTON WILL BE OPPONENS OF THE LOCALS SATURDAY

Prowlers Have Been Beaten Five Years in Row by Maroons

In their second start of the season and the first game of the year out of town, the Prowlers meet the Grafton "Maroons". The Prowlers will be out to avenge a string of defeats at the hands of Grafton including last year's 30-0 whitewashing.

Grafton has one of its usual heavy and fast teams and are somewhat favored to win. Coach Schweinfurt has heavy experienced men for every position including Johnson, Bailey and Greenberg at ends; last year's star Cecil Schrank and Kittelson, McGraw, Holt, Zende, and McDonald at tackles; Nelson, Kearney, B. and T. Dahl and P. Beaudry at guards; and last year's captain Burns and LeMarre at the Pivot position. In the backfield he has LaBerge, Everson, Hagen, Griffeth Numedahl, Tweten, Morgan, Turney and MacDonald.

The Prowlers have been working on tackling and long blocks in addition to getting new plays. Stadum, freshman, end candidate, looks like a good pass receiver, and he may team with M. Nesse to make an excellent passing combination. Hill, a Sophomore, who reported a week late, looms up as a great possibility for the tailback position. As yet, it is not known whether Art Nelson, veteranback, will be ready for the Grafton game or not.

Coach Lee is expected to start Mickleson and Olson at ends, Captain Gunderson and Hetland at tackles, Adkins and Silk, Lorentson or Gibson at guards Jung at center, and J. Nesse, M. Nesse at two back posts and either Hill, Kelly, Hess, or Mattson at the other back positions.

In a practice game September 10 the High School team defeated the alumni 9 to 6. After a scoreless first half the Prowlers scored on a safety, a touchdown by Van Pelt, and an extra point by Jack Adkins. The "grads" scored in the last minute of play with Dahl carrying the ball.

It strikes us that a party with a share-the-poverty plank in it would be a natural for 1936.—New York Herald Tribune.

CLOSED FOR CONCRETE PAVING

A Sign of Wise Investment
Fortunate are the communities where a highway is closed for paving with concrete. Temporary inconvenience is quickly turned into lasting satisfaction.
This means the end of spring break-up ills—frost boils, mud and ruts. Seasonal load restrictions, dust and the inconvenience of constant road tinkering can be forgotten.
Concrete stands up under all legal loads in all weather. It permits speed with safety. It cuts driving costs to motorists. It reduces road maintenance costs.
Watch a modern concrete pavement being built. Notice how thick and strong those big slabs are. Note the high standards for materials, the exact proportioning, the thorough mixing, the accuracy of the machine which shapes the riding surface. Then you'll know why concrete is the best investment.

POTATO CONTROL PLAN WILL BEGIN DECEMBER FIRST

AAA Announces Provisions of Federal Program for Next Year

The first step toward putting into operation the new potato control program, recently provided for in an amendment to the Agricultural Adjustment Act, was taken last week when supervision of this program was placed under the AAA division of tobacco, sugar, rice and peanuts, headed by John B. Hutson.

Provisions of the new program, as outlined by the Agricultural Adjustment Administration, are as follows:

Beginning December 1, 1935 the Act will levy a tax on all potatoes sold in excess of a national sales allotment. This tax will be at the rate of three-fourths of a cent per pound, although the Secretary of Agriculture is empowered to reduce it to one-half cent per pound, if he believes this rate to be high enough to make the Act effective.

The national quota will be determined by the Secretary of Agriculture in accordance with the best interests of both producers and consumers. It will be divided among the states, counties and individual producers according to their past sales records and their facilities for producing potatoes.

At least 95 per cent of each state's allotment must be apportioned to farms on which potatoes were grown during one or more of the years 1932-34.

Two per cent of the national allotment may be set aside by the Agricultural Adjustment Administration to correct inequalities between states, and five per cent of each state's allotment may be distributed to farms operated by new producers, or to growers otherwise ineligible for allotments.

As evidence of his allotment, each grower will receive a certain number and value of tax-free stamps, which he must fix on the containers in which he sells his potatoes. The Secretary of Agriculture will give due consideration to customs of the industry in repackaging of potatoes and affixing of tax stamps.

If the grower sells more potatoes than he has been allotted to sell, he must pay the tax on the excess quantity. No tax will be levied, however, on potatoes resold at retail, on potatoes sold for export, or under certain conditions, on potatoes sold for manufacturing or livestock feeding.

Transfers of tax-exemption stamps between growers will be permitted, subject to the secretary's regulation.

Before December 1, 1936, and each year thereafter, the growers will be given an opportunity to vote on the question of whether or not the potato control program should be continued.

Funds to administer the potato plan were to have been provided in the Third Deficiency Bill, which the Senate failed to pass, but the Agricultural Adjustment Administration is taking steps to obtain funds from other sources with which to begin the program.

GOVT. REFUSES TO TRY SLUG MAKER

Brainerd.—The government refuses to prosecute a man who manufactures slugs to use in slot machines. As reported earlier, William Carlson was charged with counterfeiting when he was caught using slugs in a slot machine at Brainerd and federal officers found a casting apparatus in his home which was being used to manufacture the spurious coins. Carlson was arrested on complaint of Tom Walsh, manager of the Rainbow tavern, and was brought before U. S. Commissioner A. D. Polk for a hearing. Polk decided, however, that the case did not warrant prosecution by the government on a charge of counterfeiting, since the slugs were not intended to be mistaken for U. S. coins, but only to cause slot machines to trip and spill out genuine currency.

Minnesota State Fair Has Total Attendance of 526,000 This Year

Minnesota's 77th annual state fair will be held from September 5 to 12 in 1936 as a result of action taken by the board of managers following the completion of this year's record-breaking exposition.

Passing the 500,000 mark for attendance for the third time in its long history the 1935 State Fair will go down in the records as the most successful so far. An audited check reveals that 526,946 attended this year's Fair.

"Financially the 1935 Minnesota State Fair has been a success," said Raymond A. Lee, secretary. "While it is too early to determine the exact profit on the operation of the Fair it is certain to exceed $25,000, the best showing in the past decade."

Lorette is 48 years old, and is of the fourth generation of a family of clowns.

10-YEAR OLD SAVES TOT FROM DROWNING

Red Wing—Betty, 10-year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. W. Nordly of Red Wing, played the role of a young heroine recently when she rescued a three year old girl, Muriel Ruth Pantke of Roselle, Ill., from drowning. The incident occurred at Fish Trap lake near Lincoln in northern Minnesota where members of the Nordly family were vacationing. Muriel had gone to the end of the pier, stretching out into the lake for a considerable distance, where she was playing with her doll. She dropped the doll and while attempting to reach for it fell into the deep water. Betty rushed to the end of the pier and as Muriel came to the surface she grabbed her arm and pulled the tiny tot out. Mr. Pantke and Mrs. Nordly reached the scene at this time and with the aid of neighbors administered first aid. Little Muriel quickly recovered and is none the worse for her experience, thanks to the alertness of her playmate.

KIDS IN SCOTLAND MEET 40 YEARS LATER IN CRASH

Elk River.—Some 40 years ago, two youngsters were in school together at Selkirk, Scotland, but since those days the two had grown to manhood without seeing or hearing of one another. Last week one of these two men, Frank White of Winnipeg, was driving through Elk River when he suddenly lost control of his car and it went into the ditch. Mr. White and his wife remained at a hotel while their car was being repaired and slight injuries healed, and the accident was reported in the Elk River Star News. Walter Grierson of Minneapolis read the newspaper account and played a hunch that White was his old boyhood chum. He called Elk River by phone, and the two renewed their old friendship when Grierson and his wife motored to Elk River to talk over old days with the Whites.

HIGHWAY PATROL REPORTS DRIVERS SLOWING DOWN

Members of the state highway patrol report a noticeable tendency away from excessive speeds on the trunk highways since the patrol began making arrests for speeding recently, says a highway department bulletin. The patrol is not enforcing any absolute limit, but is making arrests where the speed is obviously dangerous to other traffic. One of the first arrests made was of a Minneapolis man who drove through the village of Moose Lake at 80 miles an hour.

NRS Issues Call for Sugar Beet Toppers

Representatives of the National Reemployment Offices in Marshall and Polk Counties indicate a demand for about two hundred sugar beet toppers in excess of their local supply. Experienced and inexperienced beet workers in this territory are urged to apply at the NRS Office located in the Municipal Auditorium, where complete information relative to working conditions and wages can be secured.

The beet topping season will be well under way in about ten days. The beets are in excellent condition and should yield heavily, thereby making it possible for employees to earn from eighty to one hundred dollars per month, according to information received at the office here.

A CAR; A MATCH; A LIGHT; NO CAR!

Breckenridge—John Deans, Tenney, knows how it feels to see his car vanish before his very eyes. Magicians have done the trick, but none more effectively than Deans, who lays no claims to magical powers, and furthermore requires no silk scarf to perform the trick; a small, insignificant match was all that was needed. The vanishing act all started when Jay Tracy filled the Deans' car with gasoline at Tenney. Tracy, as he completed filling the tank, noticed Deans pull a cigarette from his pocket, scratch a match, light the cigarette and then throw the match near the gasoline tank. The car immediately burst into flames. When the fire was finally extinguished, what had been a car was a mass of twisted steel.

Red River Valley History

By Wm V. Werking

(Town of North Pioneers)

Men sometimes ungallantly question the judgment of women; they even assert women are not always practical and haven't the common sense with which Divine Providence is supposed to have endowed men. We offer a study of early life in this article which might be considered as tending to support this stand, but it probably would be more nearly accurate to say that any person, man or woman, could have been guilty of such a faux pas. Anyway, the incident to which we refer will be found in the following article:

"Charles E. Purdy, residing on section 31 in North township, is one of the enterprising and successful agriculturists of Red Lake county." North township is now in Pennington county.

"Mr. Purdy was born in Northumberland county, Canada, Sept. 13, 1857. He was the fifth in a family of eight children. His parents, Stephen and Mary E. (Ives) Purdy, were natives of Canada. The father moved to Clay county, Minnesota in 1872 and entered a homestead claim to land about nine miles from Moorhead. He was one of the Tenny colony and went to Minnesota with the first extensive settlement. Our subject and one brother are the only members of the family residing in Red Lake county.

"Mr. Purdy removed to Dodge county, Wisconsin, with his parents when he was four years of age, and there a farm of forty acres was cleared and improved. He was reared on his father's farm in Clay county, Minnesota, and resided there from 1872 until 1894 with the exception of one year spent in railroading and two years spent in Montana. He located in Red Lake county in 1894 and has since followed farming there. He and his wife are the owners of a fine farm and have met with success in its operation.

"Mr. Purdy was married in 1892 to Miss Emma C. Millis. One daughter has been born to bless this union, namely, Mary M. Mrs. Purdy is one of the oldest settlers of northern Red Lake county. She was reared in New York state, and attended the Cook academy at Savannah, New York and taught school one year. In 1880, in answer to an advertisement for a music teacher, she went to Crookston, Minnesota, and there she formed a class in music. This [illegible] the water, and with hammer and nails she set about the task of shingling. She did not wait to nail the cleats, but at once began laying the shingles, clinging to the spaces between the roof boards, and thus gradually worked her way to the top, reaching there before the storm broke. She was delighted with her carpenter work and hurled her hammer to the ground, when she suddenly realized that her shingles so well laid covered the ladder by which she had ascended to the top, and she found herself too high to slide to the ground. Finally the branches of a small tree close by presented a means of descent, and by clinging to them she dropped to the ground in safety, profiting much by her experience. In 1882 Mrs. Purdy was the possessor of three hundred and twenty acres of good farm land, and, having secured her claim, she returned to her home in the east and taught a ward school in Three Oaks, Michigan, where her father then resided. In 1889 she again took up her residence in Minnesota, and taught school three years thereafter, being located most of the time at Glyndon, in which town she became acquainted with Mr. Purdy. Since the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Purdy they have resided on the pioneer farm and have a comfortable and pleasant home.

Mr. Purdy is a member of the Modern Woodmen of American, and in political sentiment he is a Populist. He is an active worker for the welfare of his community and is the present clerk of his township, and enjoys the esteem of a large circle of acquaintances.

COUNCIL STUDIES WORK PROJECTS WEDNESDAY NIGHT

Fixes Order of Preference for Starting Various Projects

At an adjourned meeting of the city council Wednesday evening that body indicated its order of preference for the start of the various WPA works projects sought for this community. Action was taken at the request of the district office in Detroit Lakes.

First on the list was placed the clearing of the enclosed skating rink site, followed by construction of the rink, white way project on Johnson st., a 400-foot sewer extension on Markley av. S., and various park projects. Other projects, making a total of 16, would be deferred until later.

Hans Anton, president and J. M. Theige, secretary, of the local cooperative creamery, appeared at the meeting to renew their appeal for the reduction of $4,960 in the assessed valuation of the creamery property, making it $10,480. The matter was referred to the tax committee of the council.

The building committee was instructed to get estimates on the cost of construction of several small cottages to provide quarters for families on relief, the situation being held acute in view of the local housing shortage.

The first estimate of Albert Larson, contractor, on the improvements being made to the local fire hall was allowed in the amount of $1,293. Arrangements were made to move the municipal court room to quarters in the basement of the Auditorium.

Telephone Companies at Meeting Held Here Report Good Business

Virtually all telephone companies in Northwestern Minnesota were represented in a group of fifty persons who attended a district meeting in the Civic and Commerce association rooms in this city Tuesday. J. P. Crowley, secretary of the Minnesota Telephone association, presided at the session which was featured by a round-table discussion of telephone problems. It was generally agreed that business of the companies is improving and that more telephones are in use, many companies being back to the peak levels of 1929-30. Collections generally speaking were reported as being on the upgrade.

BENEFIT DANCE FRIDAY EVENING NETS $140 GAIN

Softball Players Extend Thanks to Public for Cooperation

The softball league benefit dance staged at the Auditorium last Friday evening was a decided success financially as well as socially, a checkup revealing a balance of approximately $140 remaining after expenses were taken care of. The proceeds will be used to defray the medical bills of two players who were injured during the past season.

Preceding the dance a Dutch lunch was enjoyed by 75 persons in the Civic and Commerce association rooms. A group of amateur entertainers who presented numbers in the course of the dance included the Land O'Lakes quartet, tap dancing by Jewel Warner, feats of magic by Bob Booren, and a song by Joe Cloutier.

BRIDGEMAN BUILDS TURKEY DRESSING STRUCTURE IN CITY

Excavation Now Under Way for Large Addition to Local Plant

The Bridgeman Creameries late last week began excavation work for a one-story brick addition, 41 by 62 feet in dimensions, to their present plant on Main av. S.

William LaFave, local manager, announced that the building will be used for turkey dressing, and will be equipped with cold storage facilities. The company dressed a large volume of turkeys in the basement of their present structure during the past two years, and the new addition will supply much needed room and add greatly to the convenience of turkey handling operations.

Sorenson & Larson have been awarded the contract for the structure, which is scheduled to be completed by November 1 in time to handle this year's turkey crop.

AWARDS FILED IN MUD LAKE PROCEEDINGS

Commissioners Appraise Affected Property at $164,299.50

TIME FOR APPEALS EXPIRES TUESDAY

Some Land Owners Indicate They Will Seek Better Settlement

Commissioners in the Mud lake condemnation proceedings Saturday filed their report in district court at Warren, making awards aggregating $164,299.50 and involving approximately 60,000 acres of land which the federal government proposes to convert into a game refuge.

The report was filed after nearly three months of work by the commissioners, who include T. H. Bjerke of this community, J. V. Patten of St. Hilaire, and Andrew Johnson of Gonvick.

Armond D. Brattland, special assistant attorney general representing the Minnesota department of conservation, is now stationed at the rural credit office in this city to confer with affected property owners, and he will remain here until next Tuesday when the time expires for filing appeals from the awards. The appeals will be heard in district court in Warren in October.

Mr. Brattland yesterday expressed the opinion that the appraisals made by the commissioners are fair and in line with prevailing values. He stated that some property owners who have appeared at the local office indicated their intention of appealing for a better settlement, while certain others are apparently satisfied. He added that the three commissioners will remain here until the time for filing appeals expires, and anyone wishing to confer with them will find them in the rural credit office on Main av. S.

Other officials stationed here included H. G. Weber of the land acquisition division of the department of conservation; and Loring Elofson, John McGowan and Anton Yngve, also of the conservation department. When the times comes for hearing the appeals, several other members of the attorney general's staff will be sent up from St. Paul to represent the department.

Missionary Here Tells of Life in Abyssinia

Niece of Mrs. H. P. Lund Sees Difficulties for Mussolini

Mussolini's Italian forces will encounter many difficulties if and when they make their projected attack on Ethiopia, in the opinion of Miss Dora Arveson, missionary, who came to this country in August on a furlough after five years of service in Ethiopia. Miss Arveson, who is connected with the United Presbyterian mission, was a guest last week in this city at the home of her aunt, Mrs. H. P. Lund.

In a resume of conditions in the little African nation prepared for the Times, Miss Arveson states, "If there is to be a war, climatic and geographic conditions will be in favor of the Ethiopians and to the disadvantage of the Italians.

"North of Lake Tana in northwestern Ethiopia there are great impassable gorges and ravines, and no roads except the narrow needle or mule path. The natives of course, can cross this country without any seeming difficulty. They, with their small mules, are great climbers, and are amused at foreigners becoming tired so quickly while climbing.

"All the supplies which the Italians would use, including war equipment, would have to be brought over these difficult passages, while the natives would take a little parched grain, and one suit would last them the duration of the war. Water is scarce in many places and all the surface water is contaminated, but the natives drink it just as it is.

"The climate is very hot in certain sections and would cause the Italians to suffer, while the Ethiopians love the heat. From books I have read I gather that the great success of the Ethiopians in their war with the Turks and Portuguese as well as the Italians was due to their fighting in their own country and with their great rock fortresses. The Ethiopians are a fearless, strong and shrewd people, yet kind and peace-loving and harmless when not disturbed.

"The tribe with which I have been privileged to work, the Amhara, is the ruling element in Ethiopia. Haile Selassie I is an Amhara and he is a very fine man. He has done many things which, according to our way of thinking, are excellent, such as abolishing slavery and the building of schools and roads. Progress has been somewhat slow, as it is only since 1930 that he was crowned King of Kings.

"Haile Selassie has been very kind to our mission. He gave us fifteen acres of land on which we have built our hospital, and the empress gave us a school in which we can care for 60 or more girls. Last Christmas when he made us his most recent visit the emperor said, "Truly, you are fulfilling the command in the Bible by preaching the Gospel and taking care of the poor who are sick". He speaks French, Arabic and Amharic, while the empress speaks only Amharic.

"During the past year we treated 12,036 persons in our out-clinic patient department and 1,271 patients in the hospital. Each one had the opportunity of having the Gospel read to him at various times. I have had the joy of seeing many Ethiopians turn from sin and darkness into the light of our Lord and Savior, Jesus Christ".

Several new exhibits were added to the Times "Can you beat it" department during the past week. Chief among them are some fine specimens of fully matured yellow dent field corn, the stalks bearing a heavy load of cobs. The corn was seeded June 7 and 8 on the Carl Buis farm, one and one-half miles west of Rosewood and was cut last week.

M. J. Graettinger of Kratka brought in some specimens of matured black walnuts, grown on trees developed from seed planted seven years ago. The nuts are surrounded by husks resembling unripe peaches.

Mike Welch brought in a monster potato consisting of a huge central portion to which are attached six fully matured smaller potatoes.

Some excellent specimens of matured Minnesota 13 corn were supplied by P. P. Iverson, living south of Greenwood cemetery. His three-acre tract was planted May 23.

Another novelty is a twin pumpkin, two growing from the same stem. This was raised by Manley Hauge, son of Oscar Hauge of St. Hilaire.

CITY'S BOOKS ARE BEING AUDITED BY STATE EXAMINERS

Group of Local Property Owners Request Audit by State

Two men from the public examining division of the state controller's office in St. Paul last Friday began a complete audit of city records for the year 1934, and an audit of cash balances for the current year.

The examiners were sent here following the filing of a petition signed by more than one per cent of the free-holders of the city. The list of signers, which was not made public here, was certified by the county auditor's office before being accepted by the state controller.

While the city's books were checked last year by an auditor engaged by the city council, it is fifteen years since the last audit was made by the public examining division. The examiners said yesterday they could not foretell exactly how much time would be required for the audit.

3 YOUNG WOMEN IN AUTOMOBILE SPILL NEAR GRAND FORKS

Three Occupants Sustain Bruises in Accident Sunday Night

The mishap occurred when, passing a car with bright headlights, the Kiewel car came up to another one proceeding in the same direction, and, turning out sharply to avoid a collision, the driver lost control and the car left the highway, turning over and sustaining considerable damage.

FIRST TICKET PROPOSED FOR CITY ELECTION

TO SELECT MAYOR CANDIDATE FRIDAY

President Douville Offers Tentative Platform for Ticket

A tentative slate of labor-liberal candidates for the city council in the municipal election November 5 was drawn up in ward caucuses conducted at a meeting of the Workman's Protective association at the court house Monday evening.

The names brought forward are: First ward, William J. Douville; second ward, Algot Johnson, a former alderman; third ward, Joe Ruane; fourth ward, Andrew Ness; at large, H. W. Kinghorn and Ward Long; municipal judge, R. M. Aalbu.

No agreement was reached at the meeting as to the nominee for mayor, the names of Olaf Neset, Ben Abbot and O. C. Paulson being mentioned. Mr. Paulson, who was present at the meeting to urge support of the bond issue for a municipal skating rink, refused to allow consideration of his name. A committee of twelve, representing the four wards, is scheduled to meet Friday evening to decide on a candidate.

R. M. Aalbu, speaking for the local Farmer-Labor organization, expressed the opinion that as a group it would be opposed to participating in the forthcoming election, but that it could be depended on to support any liberal candidates.

Mr. Douville, president of the association, submitted a tentative platform for the labor-liberal slate, but the meeting closed without any formal action being taken to adopt it. The statement advocated economical government, and declared that the city must provide work instead of direct relief for able-bodied citizens. It urged a decent standard of wages for city employes, as well as an eight-hour day.

Referring to the municipal power plant, the platform proposed that the plant be placed in the hands of a commission, and that the rate schedule be revised, having in mind the interests of domestic users of current. It also advocated a municipal liquor store in the event the sale of liquor in Pennington county should be authorized by the voters in the special election October 14.

Mr. Paulson urged support of the enclosed skating rink project in the election to be held Monday, October 7, on the question of issuing $16,000 in bonds to finance the city's share of the cost and to qualify for a federal grant of more than $13,000. All of the federal money, he said, would go to labor in this community, and he also stressed the need of providing wholesome winter recreation for the young people of the city. His remarks won applause from the gathering.

Traveling Library is Now Being Distributed to Pennington Schools

When it comes to book service received thru the Pennington County traveling library department, rural school teachers are not the only enthusiasts, says Mrs. Hazel Halgrim, Carnegie librarian. Some trustees declare they will never buy another library book as long as this system is maintained. Anticipating an urgent demand for new books from the children, several teachers prepared for it by taking libraries out for opening day.

Over half of the schools under contract, now have their libraries. Other schools will be starting about the first of October when the rest of them will be taken. Schools expecting to become members for the first time, should get their contracts signed at once, so that they may secure a full year's service.

At the close of five years no apologies have to be made for this department. More than $1,200 worth of books have been purchased and are kept in good condition for the exclusive use of the rural schools to whom they belong.

Official Paper of Pennington County and City of Thief River Falls

The weather seems to have been satisfactory to all concerned during the past two weeks. It has been as close to ideal as it could be. This is the season of the year when it is pleasant to be up and around. Jack Frost has brightened the scenery with beautiful color combinations and there is just a wee bit of a nip in the air that is positively invigorating. Of all the seasons of the year, this is the one that gets our vote—as long as the weather is as it is.

Hundreds of hunters from down-state found excellent hunting up in this territory Saturday and Sunday. They hunted for hours and hours without being bothered with bag limits. Weather conditions were ideal and a pleasant outing was enjoyed by all. The only thing that might be said to have detracted from the otherwise perfect conditions was the fact that game was a little scarce. On Sunday night it was rumored that a chicken had been seen east of Middle River but this story was discounted by many as Game and Fish Department propaganda to justify the sale of thousands of hunting licenses.

Another case of rank discrimination in this country has been uncovered. Researchers have discovered that only one baldheaded man has been elected President of the United States. Land of equal opportunities—bah.

In his remarks about the recent strike in Minneapolis, which resulted in the death of two innocent by-standers, Mayor Tom Latimer expressed the opinion that both sides were at fault. To have Mayor Latimer intimate that the strikers were partly to blame is a serious indictment of the mob that is trying to dominate labor in the Mill City. As a result of his refusal to yield to that mob, an attempt is now being made to oust him from the Farmer-Labor party. All of which causes one to wonder sometimes just what the Farmer-Labor party does stand for. It cannot much longer continue to embrace within its folds all of the conflicting elements which now march behind its banner. Sooner or later there will be a definite break between the right and left wings. If the conservative group prevails then the party will muster strength from the liberals of other parties. If the radical group retains control, then the more conservative element will lend its support to the other parties. When the party starts ousting its Tom Latimers then the end is near at hand.

The fact that little is being said about the coming referendum on the question of legalizing the sale of liquor in Pennington County does not necessarily indicate that there is no interest in the subject. Our guess is that there will be a very representative vote at the polls that day. And there probably will be some curious contradictions in the voting. There are wet wets who will vote dry because the idea of a municipally owned liquor store does not appeal to them. And there are dry drys who will vote wet because they believe municipal ownership of a liquor store will provide more satisfactory control of a traffic that already exists. The ballot itself will be a contradiction to some extent. The way it is worded in order to vote no it will be necessary to vote yes.

Sitting back on the side lines and watching the developments in Europe as the war clouds gather, provides Americans with an opportunity to consider intelligently the causes of war and reflect upon the needs for preparedness even by a peaceful nation. One man, drunk with power, is able to plunge a nation, and perhaps a world, into a death struggle that may cause civilization itself to totter. The idea of "turning the other cheek" has some merit as one sheep to another but it probably wouldn't get a sheep very far in a pack of wolves. Until human nature itself undergoes some radical changes we may expect wars—and it will stand us well in hand to be prepared for them.

Ninety thousand people paid out a million dollars, cash on the line, to see Joe Louis and Max Baer fight Tuesday night. It was a tough old depression while it lasted but we're glad it's over.

The Times office was honored this week by a visit from Senator Shipstead who dropped in to pass the time of day. Having supported the Senator in his last two campaigns for re-election it probably isn't necessary for us to repeat that we respect him. He is one of the few representatives of the Northwest in Washington who deserves to be called a statesman. The Senator is bigger than any political party or machine.

Developments seem to bear out the predictions of those who said the government would use relief money as a campaign fund in 1936. Very little of the five billion dollar appropriation has been released for work projects during the past year. For instance the state highway department has been able to do little work this summer because federal funds have not been made available. Now, however, projects of every sort that will provide employment next summer are being approved and it apparently is the intention of the administration to "shoot the works" in one grand, final drive. Critics might be justified in suggesting that this is one way of playing politics with human misery.

GETS ANSWER IN ALCATRAZ
(Little Falls Daily Transcript)

It seems that the patrons of Uncle Sam's expensive new rest cure on Alcatraz Island in San Francisco bay are far from satisfied with the service these days.

Some enterprising journalist recently contacted a gentleman who had just ended an extensive stay at the Alcatraz resort. This man, who used to be a prominent Chicago racketeer, says that Alcatraz is decidedly unlike other prisons.

"There are no radios, no newspapers, no privileges of any kind," he complains. "Not a word can be spoken by any of the convicts in line, at the table, at work, or in their cells. On Saturday afternoons this restriction is removed, when the convicts are allowed in the yard. They can talk then from one to three-thirty."

When the convicts file through the cafeteria for meals, each one has to eat everything that he puts on his tray. If he fails, he gets punished. If he buys a magazine, the warden tears out whole pages to shield him from stories about crime, prisons or detectives.

All letters are rewritten to prevent the use of codes. A convict may receive one visit a month, from a relative, and must converse through a plate glass wall by means of a speaking tube.

"It's as near escape-proof as anything can be made," the prisoner adds. "It's the toughest pen I've ever seen. The hopelessness of it gets you. Al Capone feels it. Everybody does. You know you'll never get a parole. There's no chance there for anybody—only the God-awful silence that gets on your nerves."

Minnesota contributed $13,103,322 in income taxes to the federal government in 1933, the report of the treasury department reveals. In addition the state contributed $16,001,392 in other taxes, chiefly the tax on gasoline, liquor, amusements, candy, electricity, telephone, telegraph, oleomargarine, tobacco and inheritances. In still further addition the state contributed $27,604,498 in processing taxes on wheat and hogs. This is a total in federal taxes of $56,000,000 in the past year which is some tax. Add $132,000,000 collected by the state and the local units of government in real, personal and other taxes and the nearly $3,000,000 in state income taxes, and we begin to realize why it is that the average citizen works so much of the time just to earn enough to take care of his taxes.—Long Prairie Leader.

Services Monday for Mrs. Carl Elgsten

Funeral services were held Monday, September 23, at the Baptist Church, Reverend V. T. Bjorklund officiating, for Mrs. Johanna Elgsten who passed away at her home in Rocksbury Township, Friday, October 20. Interment was made in Greenwood Cemetery.

Geology

Geology, the study of the earth's skeleton, opened many doors into the intricacies of nature. Fossils of lives lived in other ages found in the rocks led men on to consider the origins of the rocks themselves, as well as to speculate about the lost ages when animals unknown to this age lived, and no traces of humanity were to be found.

Two Held for Robbing Depot at Strandquist

Charged with breaking into the Soo Line depot at Strandquist Sunday afternoon, G. A. Beardsley and Lloyd Francis, both of Minneapolis were apprehended by Sheriff O. C. Tofner at St. Thomas, N. D. Monday, and are being held in the Marshall county jail pending a hearing in court. The thieves did not get a great deal from the depot, the investigation showing that a portable type-writer and nine dollars in cash was missing. The typewriter was found in their car on Monday. A large quantity of other articles was also found in the car, leading local authorities to believe that the men had made several other thefts during the year.

PUBLIC OPINION

Thief River Falls, Minn.
Sept. 23, 1935.

To the Editor:

An election has been called for Oct. 14 to decide the question of opening Pennington county to the sale of intoxicating liquors. This election will cost the county in the neighborhood of $1500.

In view of the fact that the county has so recently voted against the repeal of prohibition and in view of the fact that the persons who formulated and circulated the petitions undoubtedly have at heart the best interests of the county, some of us would like to know who caused the petition to be drawn and circulated and what are the benefits expected to follow the sale of intoxicating liquors in the county.

Yours truly,
E. A. Cooke, President,
Pennington County Dry League.

J. W. Taylor, project manager of the Beltrami and Pine Island forest projects, who has been located at Baudette, has been temporarily assigned to Thief River Falls to develop the resettlement program for the Mud Lake settlers. Mr. Taylor has assisted in the moving of some sixty settlers already of the 425 in the two reserves above mentioned.

"It is estimated" said Mr. Taylor "that there are some sixty settlers in the Mud Lake area that will be bought out by the Conservation Division of the State of Minnesota and will relocate on farms adjacent to the area. The resettlement administration will assist the settlers in moving and locating new farms and assist in the financing of land purchase, livestock, and machinery and getting established on new farms. The settlers may select their own farms and communities in which they wish to relocate.

"The resettlement administration will approve the farms as to soil conditions, drainage facilities, and take into consideration community development, school facilities, markets, etc. Some of the settlers probably will not need any financing by the Administration and others may retire and move to town.

"There are many hundred acres of good productive land available in Pennington and Marshall counties that can be purchased very reasonably and it is expected that most settlers will relocate in these two counties. They may, however, locate in other counties if they so desire."

Joe Louis, sensational Detroit Negro, knocked out Max Baer Tuesday night in New York City, in the fourth round of a 15-round battle before a million dollar crowd of 90,000 spectators. Baer took the count of 10, on one knee, after being saved by the bell in the third round and after taking a terrific beating. The remorseless Negro, fighting his greatest battle in his short professional career, smashed the former heavyweight champion's face into a gory mask in the short, but savage slaughter.

CHICKEN HUNTERS INVADE THIS CITY DURING WEEK-END

Birds Exceedingly Scarce; Many Hunters Return Empty-Handed

Scores of hunters from thruout the state invaded Thief River Falls Friday and Saturday, and were in the field Saturday noon in quest of prairie chickens, but most of them were disappointed in their search for the elusive birds, most of them returning empty-handed.

Only a few were fortunate enough to locate sizeable coveys and return with the bag limit. It was generally agreed that the state game and fish department made a mistake in opening the season in Northern Minnesota this year.

A large number of local hunters joined with the visitors in hunting over the week-end, a total of 506 small game licenses having been issued up to the first of this week. The season closes next Sunday at sunset.

All accommodations at local hotels, rooming houses and tourist camps were filled by the invading hunters, and many took rooms at private homes in this city as well as on tributary farms.

WORKS PROGRAM GETS STARTED IN STATE THIS WEEK

Other Projects Will Start as Rapidly as Funds are Allocated

Minnesota's $132,000,000 program of work relief swung into action in each of the nine Works Progress Administration districts this week, as more than 5,000 needy unemployed were placed on WPA payrolls.

Victor Christgau, Works Progress Administrator, announced that an increasingly large number of persons now on relief will be employed each succeeding week until the WPA quota of the state's relief load is absorbed. Between 60,000 and 70,000 men and women are expected to be definitely assigned to work projects in their home districts by November 1, the date when direct relief is scheduled to end.

To keep the large force steadily employed during the ensuing year, WPA officials will draw work projects for all communities of the state from the huge reservoir of 40,002 proposals, estimated as sufficient to furnish 140,000 persons with jobs for a 12-month period.

The local offices of the National Reemployment service are certifying employable relief clients to WPA as fast as funds are allocated for beginning additional work in the districts.

The number of projects and the funds authorized by districts this week, follow: Duluth district—30 projects, $399,848; Brainerd district—18 projects, $177,701; Rochester district—10 projects, $161,987; St Cloud district—23 projects, $362,646; Detroit Lakes district—33 projects, $344,320; Morris district—17 projects, $205,667; New Ulm district—31 projects, $282,869.

Other developments during the week:

Instructions to supervisors of women's projects to concentrate their immediate efforts toward providing clothing for school children of needy families. Sewing projects for this purpose have been approved for every county in the state.

Announcement by George Selke, WPA Youth director, of allocation of funds to make possible aid to unemployed college graduates for continuing their educations in post-graduate schools. The funds are in addition to the $780,000 already made available for aid to college undergraduates and high school students.

FALLS IN PAIL OF HOT WATER, FATALLY BURNED

Richmond—Falling over backward into a pail of hot water on the kitchen floor, 20 months-old Edmund Vogt, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edmund Vogt of Richmond, was badly scalded and died three days later after all attempts to save his life had failed. The accident occurred Monday afternoon just after the family washing was done and his mother prepared to scrub the floor. A pail full of hot water was taken from the stove and set on the floor. The small boy was playing around the washing machine. He toddled around the pail of hot water, lost his balance and toppled in backwards.

Drinking Prohibited in "U" Stadium, Says Director of Athletics

The University of Minnesota has decided this year to do everything it can in advance to avoid the charges of drinking in connection with football games that were brought last fall against many American colleges, though not against Minnesota in particular.

Frank G. McCormick, director of athletics, has issued a statement saying that drinking will not be tolerated at football games. Persons who come to a game intoxicated will be refused admission, and those who carry on drinking in the stands will be put out, McCormick said.

His formal statement, being included in all envelopes in which tickets are mailed by the university to those who have ordered them follows:

"The Big Ten Conference was organized to carry on athletics on a high plane. The institutions and their representatives, over a number of years, have successfully carried out this ideal, and they have given athletics an important place in the educational program.

"After last football season the conference directors recognized that drinking at football games was growing and would have to be checked. Each institution agreed locally to take the necessary action to eliminate this trouble. Over-indulgence by a small minority results in conduct disgusting or offensive to other patrons and is tearing down the fine traditions and ideals of college football.

"We wish to take this opportunity to give notice that ushers and officers are being instructed to prevent drinking in the stadium and refuse admission to holders of tickets who are intoxicated. We shall revoke the license conferred by the ticket and eject from the Stadium anyone violating the above restriction. We earnestly request the co-operation of all patrons in order that we may keep football games at Minnesota on the highest possible plane."

State Asks Bids on $300,000 Road Jobs

Bids on road construction projects estimated to cost approximately $300,000 will be opened by the state highway department October 4, according to an announcement by N. W. Elsberg, highway commissioner. The work consists of grading and graveling, and will be financed out of Minnesota's $5,000,000 allotment of federal works progress highway funds. The jobs will furnish about 175,000 man hours of employment, highway engineers estimated. A considerable amount of the work will be carried on in the winter months.

DOGS CHEW YOUNG COLT TO DEATH

Luverne—A vicious attack by dogs proved fatal to a three months old colt on the F. J. Schulte farm in Clinton township last week. Mr. and Mrs. Schulte discovered the dead colt when they rose in the morning. It had been badly bitten and chewed around the legs but the most severe wounds were on the throat. The colt apparently bled to death after the attack. Several nights previous, dogs made an unsuccessful attempt to get into his herd of sheep, Mr. Schulte said. Future invasions of this kind, he promised, would be met with gunfire.

N. W. SCHOOL AT CROOKSTON OPENS MONDAY MORNING

Pennington County Students Make Advance Room Reservations

Final plans have been announced for the opening of the Northwest School of Agriculture next Monday, when students from Seventeen Northwestern Minnesota counties and North Dakota will register for courses in agriculture, home economics, music, business training, and community leadership. Advance room reservations have been running considerably above last year so that officials anticipate one of the largest enrollments in years.

Students from Pennington county who reserved rooms during the summer include the following: Olaf Dahlen, Glennie Iverson, Harry Solberg, Erie Helen Hemmestvedt, Truman Hemmestvedt, Harold Nabben, Marvin Nabben, Goodridge; Stella Omundson, Iola Solberg, James Weckwerth, Hazel; Leonard Yonke, St. Hilaire; Marian Augustine, Martin Hanson, Ray Oen, Gladys Ose, Leroy Peterson, Laura Hanson, Thief River Falls.

Four new faculty members will report for duty at the first faculty meeting of the year which is scheduled for Saturday afternoon. Carl H. Ritzman, who holds a Master's Degree from the University of Iowa, will have charge of the work in Debate; Miss Marian Nelson, a graduate of the University of Minnesota music department, will succeed Constance Lane as instructor in piano; and W. D. Rusk of the University of Illinois and Wm. Promersberger of Minnesota will offer the work in tractors, gas motors, and farm machinery.

DOG GUARDS DEAD BODY OF MASTER

Brainerd—A faithful dog kept vigil over his dead master, whose constant companion he had been for several years, long hours before the corpse was discovered. O. A. McCoy, 63, Mission Lake resort owner, apparently died very suddenly as he was walking in the yard of his lake resort. He collapsed and death must have come almost instantaneously. Hours later, W. H. Wafensmith, Deerwood, stopped at the McCoy place for a visit. The small dog was lying across his master's feet. Mr. McCoy was a well-known resident of that area and several years ago was mayor of Trommald. The dog was still mourning his old master following the funeral services.

The Camel's Foot

The camel's foot consists of two elongated toes, each tipped with a small, nail-like hoof. The weight of the animal does not rest upon the hooves, but upon an elastic pad or cushion under the toes.

FIRST ASSEMBLY PROGRAM IS HELD IN AUDITORIUM

Frank P. Douglas Tells of His Experiences in Alaska

Thursday afternoon at 3 o'clock at the City Auditorium the high school students were entertained by Mr. Frank Douglas, who spoke on "The Great Klondike Gold Rush."

Mr. Douglas stated that the Klondike region, which includes about fifty miles around Dawson, is not as many people think, in Alaska, but east of Alaska in Yukon. It was in this region in the year 1896 that an Indian named "Sooky Jim" and an American found the gold dust that started the most famous gold rush in history. The news spread and men flocked into the newly discovered gold fields, and stories of sudden riches spread over the United States. For some time a mad rush for the Klondike continued, thousands braving dangers every mile of the way. Those that sailed from San Francisco up the Pacific coast to Skagway. They crossed the White Mountains and sailed on scows up the Yukon River to the gold fields.

Here the men lived in tents until cabins could be built. The walls of these cabins were built of wood with dirt and chunks of sod [illegible] roof. For windows they used bottles placed row by row. Their icebox was the roof of the hut. Mr. Douglas said he knew from experience that it was a good one, for the meat would freeze into the snow, keeping it safe from wolves and other animals.

He had on exhibit gold dust, nuggets, and gold pieces which he had panned. He also showed the beaded socks and moccasins worn by the men. A parka (overcoat), mittens, a woman's handbag, beaded moccasins, a dog harness, gun cases, snowshoes and a wolf's hide were on display.

ETIQUETTE

A number of questions which are continually on the minds of many of the young people are answered below.

The rule as to who goes first down the aisle of a theater is not important. If the aisle is wide they go together. Otherwise the correct way is for the man to go first until he gives the tickets to the usher, after which the girl follows the usher, and the man follows the girl.

When a man is walking down the street with two girls, he should walk on the outside, not between the two girls.

If a girl is sitting in a group and is asked to dance, she either smiles and says "Not just now—I am very tired", or she may add "Come and sit with us". To simply get up and dance when asked is proper with no other remark necessary.

To refuse to dance with one man and then immediately dance with another is open affront to the first one. It is excusable only if he were intoxicated or otherwise actually obnoxious so that the affront was both intentional and justifiable. But under ordinary circumstances, if one is "dancing" she must dance with everyone who asks her, if she's not dancing, she must not make exceptions.

A young girl who is dancing may not refuse to change partners when another cuts in.

MAKING THE ROUNDS

Miss Lunder's Home Economics II classes have been canning peaches and making jellies and jams. The Home Economics I classes have been studying renovation, that is, the making over of dresses.

Miss Dahlen's eighth grade classes are finishing reading "The Girl and Her Family." Next week they will start learning how to mend and darn.

Everybody is glad to have Miss Leavitt back again at work in the library after a week's illness. But Miss Acker's fine work has been a great help to all, and we are all grateful for it.

Maybe some people have noticed the change in the "Progress." If so, the credit should be given to the staff which has been increased by two new reporters, Yvonne Anderson and Harriet Simonson.

The Progress also has its own typists James Hoffseth, Helen Reierson, Edna Swanson and Helen Rice. Its make-up editors are Anna Hermanson and Dayton Silk. With all these changes the enlarged staff should be able to put out a better "progress" than ever.

Agriculture IV classes are studying about the government.

INTERVIEW WITH FRAND P. DOUGLAS

Inquiring Reporter Probes Private Life of Noted Klondiker

Below is printed an interview held by a member of the "Progress" staff with Frank P. Douglas, who delivered an assembly address on the Klondike Gold Rush on Thursday, September 19.

Q. Your name, please?

A. Frank P. Douglas.

Q. How long did you live in Alaska?

A. Well, I lived there until I was called to the World War with the Canadian forces.

Q. Is the educational system advanced?

A. Yes, it equals yours.

Q. Have you a particular hobby?

A. Yes, I'm a music lover, but I can't play a note.

Q. What was your work in Europe?

A. I was in the Department of State of the Canadian government, studying the rehabilitation of the Roumanian peasant.

Q. Have you had any embarrassing moments?

A. Yes, I was presented to Queen Marie of Roumania without a moment's notice. She presented me with a Red Cross medal.

Q. What is your preferable mode of travel?

A. Automobile. I worked in an airplane factory for four years. After that I'll never ride in one.

Q. During your youth did you help your father pan gold?

A. Yes.

Q. How long have you lectured on the "Klondike Gold Rush?"

A. For four years.

Q. How do the prairies of the Red River Valley impress you?

A. Lonesome. But I think the towns are the busiest little places, just like prosperity.

Q. What is your reaction towards a high school audience?

A. I like a high school audience best, for I feel I will tell something that will interest them.

PROWLERS MEET GREEN WAVES IN NIGHT GAME

Large Local Following Expected Next Monday at East Grand Forks

Monday night the Prowlers will journey to East Grand Forks for their football game with the Little Green Wave, which will be played under lights. This game will prove to be closer and better than the one played with Red Lake Falls two weeks ago.

East Grand Forks was defeated in their first two games of the season. The first with Fargo and the second with Bemidji. The Prowlers will, however, be opposed by a team with a veteran backfield composed of Kimbelin, Rockwood, a fine passer and punter, Sorenson, and Casmey, and five veterans in the line. That means that the East Side team is made up of the same men, with the exception of two, who played last year.

Coach Lee will probably start the two Nesses, Nelson, and Hill in the backfield and Jung, Gunderson, Hetland, Mickelson, Olson, Lorentson, and Adkins on the line.

Last season the Prowlers played the East Side on the local field and defeated them by a score of 7-0, this year, even though they are playing their first game under artificial lighting, the local aggregation is conceded a slight edge over the East Siders.

As the game is an evening attraction, the locals are assured of considerable backing by ardent fans. Don't miss this Battle of the Century.

Second Pep Fest Held in Assembly Tomorrow

The second in a series of pep fests will be held Friday morning, September 27, in the assembly. At this time try-outs for the year's cheer leaders will be held. Bring along an abundance of pep and show our Prowlers that we are behind them one hundred per cent. At the same time be ready to vote for those students who will best represent our school as cheer leaders. Watch the "Progress" for the announcement of the winners.

MEET THE PROWLERS

Milton Nesse—160 pounds, 5 feet 9 in., junior back. "Milt" is the junior class nomination for their 1935 star on the Prowler eleven. He was one of the few who made his letter in his sophomore year as well as being elected to the National Athletic Honor Society. He is heavier this year and with a year's experience behind him is expected to go places. He starred on defense especially last season and one of the opposing coaches is said to have predicted great things for him in the future.

James Nesse—145 pounds, 5 feet 8 in., senior back. Another of the Nesse boys, James this time, looms as a candidate for Prowler stardom. He is the quarterback or the "brains" of the '35 team and along with his excellent calling of plays he lugs the ball with a great deal of ability. Although he did not make a letter in football in 1934, he saw service in several games and won a major letter in track.

Cliff Hetland—185 pounds, 6 feet, senior, tackle. "Het" is the heaviest man on the team this year and with a year's seasoning behind him is expected to hold down a tackle position very ably. He is a boy who actually has a workout even after practice. He lives four miles out in the country, and he walks home every night. He is a good-natured boy even when playing; but when he gets mad, it is certain no ground will be gained over his position.

Jack Adkins—148 pounds, 5 feet, 7 in., junior guard. This is Jack's first year as a regular although he saw action in a few games last year at an end position. Although it is his first regular year, he plays as though he was a four-year letterman. His is the exceptionally hard job of pulling out of the line and blocking for the ball-carrier. Even though Jack only weighs 148 pounds he is all fight and is known to have out played heavier men. In addition to his other work, Adkins is doing all the placekicking for the team.

SOMETHING NEW FOR T. R. F.

Mark a dark circle around Sept. 30th. That's Monday. Then leave that date open for the big game between the Prowlers and the Little Green Waves of East Grand Forks.

What is the significance of this game? Why make it a special occasion? In the first place, the Prowlers are going to repeat last year's victory over the Wave. Second, the game will be played under floodlights! We believe that is the most interesting to see. The players are easier to tell apart and it is easier to watch the path of the ball.

If enough people from here see this game, night football will soon come to our school. It is an improvement which we think will pay for itself in time because of increased attendance. Most of the business men can't leave their business in the middle of the afternoon to see a football game, although even now there are nearly as many workers as students at the local gridiron battles.

Next Monday, not only Opportunity, but his twin brother, Double Opportunity, will be in East Grand Forks. There will be an opportunity to see the classic of the classics (the Prowler-East Grand Forks game) and an opportunity to view a night football game.

Be on hand to cheer the Prowlers on and also to form your favorable opinion about night football. We want night football in Thief River Falls!

PROWLER STAFF TO BE SELECTED

Senior Officers Meet to Select Committee to Choose Staff

Last Tuesday the senior class officers met with the purpose of selecting a representative committee to choose the formulators of the Prowler. The staff is being chosen now in order that the football players will be in uniform and that a few action pictures may be taken at the games. By this arrangement the work can be distributed through the school year and events can be recorded as they happen.

The members of the committee follow: Alice Ann Severson, James Nesse, Adrian Lorentson, Rochelle Kielty, Malcolm Magnuson, Lois Engen, Evelyn Peterson, Ralph Severson, Clayton Gunheim, Vivian St. Martin, Falla Erickson, Dayton Silk, Stanley Mortenson, Robert Mayer-Oakes, Wallace Olson, Albert Jaranson, Douglass Hess, Francis Engel and Margaret Simonson.

Progress Sponsors Cheer Leader Election Friday

The "Progress" campaign for more and better cheer leaders is progressing very well as it goes into the final stages this week. However, there is still room for more to tryout and those aspiring to be cheer leaders may give their names to Marjorie Matheson up to Friday morning, September 27, when the tryouts will be held in the assembly at the pep fest. In order to get the highest efficiency in yelling for our team we want all the teams and individuals to try out. Individuals are especially in demand.

The following teams and individuals have signed up and will try out on Friday: Yvonne Anderson, Elizabeth Dahlen, and Marion Green; Ruth Fowler and Marjorie Matheson; Mary Chommie and Harriet Simonson; Fae Belcher and Margaret McKechnie; Mae Anderson and Alice Lee; Edna Lee and Margaret Paquet; Lois Engen and Dorothy Blanchard; and Margaret Rae Munt and Mary Margaret Cosgrove; Harley Kelley; Robert Westley; and Oscar Bickley.

These teams are practicing yells and when they lead the student body in yells on Friday let's give them all the support they need.

The "Progress" staff will have charge of the voting and the entire student body will cast their votes for the six best cheer leaders. These will be tabulated and the most popular ones will be our cheer leaders for the coming year.

PROWLERS LOSE TO GRAFTON 12-0 IN CLOSE GAME

Heavier Opponents Defeat Prowler Squad After Hard Fight

In a contest that was hotly contested all the way the Prowlers went down in defeat at the hands of Grafton Friday. The game was well played all the way as well as being an interesting game for the spectators to watch. Grafton's two touchdowns were made late in the first and fourth periods.

After Grafton kicked off the entire first quarter was played in Prowler territory. Grafton received the ball on downs on the Prowler territory. Grafton received the ball on downs on the Powler forty line and marched down to the five yard line on three plays, but here they were stopped and M. Nesse punted out to the forty yard line where Everson received it and returned for a touchdown making the score 6-0. At the end of the first quarter the score was the same.

In the second half the Prowlers threatened when Grafton punted from their own 20 and Hill returned 30 yards. M. Nesse gained five yards and a pass got ten more yards, but after a time out Grafton held and got the ball on downs. After punting out of danger the half ended.

After Grafton had kicked off to start the second half the Prowlers got the ball on their own 35 yard line and started on a march down the field. J. Nesse made 5 yards, M. Nesse added 10 more and a first down. Then M. Nesse passed to Mickleson for ten more yards and another first down. On their own 35 yard Grafton held and got the ball on downs. Another chance was missed by the Prowlers when J. Nesse gained 7 yards, a pass M. Nesse to Mickleson made 10 yards and then a pass to Peterson, who was in the open, was incomplete on the Grafton 20 yard line. The Maroons' last counter came late in the fourth quarter after marching from their own 40 yard line. The score was made by Numedahl, who went around and behind erecting blocking.

The Prowlers made 8 first downs to Grafton's 7. In the Prowlers' line Gunderson and Mickleson were outstanding and M. Nesse and Hill played exceptionally well in the backfield. For Grafton, Kearney, Johnson and Maxwell stood out.

BALLY-WHO

Milt Nesse seems to have the English III class quite flabbergasted by his jokes and crude antics.

Wonder how many of the football boys are going to become suddenly sick in school this week so they can go chicken-hunting.

By the way—the meat markets seemed to be well populated last Saturday evening by would-be-hunters who had returned empty-handed.

Just for the freshmen—Austin Shanahan certainly had the right name picked for himself. Wonder how he manages to see over the desks? And then quite vice versa we have that long lanky specimen of humanity—"Bones" Stadum—the coming (or is it already) football, basket ball, track, and baseball star. Oh yes—we almost forgot the Caruso of the high school. Too bad everybody can't hear him in the private intimacy of his body guards and pals.

Somebody ought to get the tap-dancer of the "Green" class of the school, Joyce B., to give her speciality at a pep fest. Must be quite a relief for the returning football lettermen not to have to endure the ordeal of "Berge's" stentorian, Tarzanic vocalizing.

Seems as though some of the alumni are staying away from college to take care of the last year's inspirations.

Too bad we can't say this was written by "George's Piffler."

FRANCES WILLARD WILL BE HONORED FRIDAY SEPT. 27

Program in Memory of American Reformer and Educator

In memory of Francis Willard, an American Temperance reformer and educator, a short program will be held in the assembly on Sept. 27.

Miss Willard was born at Churchville, New York, Sept. 28, 1839. She later went to Northwest Woman's College. From 1879 until her death she was president of the National Woman's Temperance Union. In 1883, she founded the W. C. T. U., serving as president for 15 years. In her campaign against liquour traffic, Miss Willard delivered thousands of lectures, visiting every large city and every state in the Union, and also addressed many abroad. She edited several temperance periodicals, wrote numerous articles on prohibition, suffrage for women, and labor problems. She was author of "Nineteen Beautiful Years", "Women and Temperance", "How to Win", and other works. In 1890, she was elected president of the Woman's National Council of the United States. She died in New York City on Feb. 18, 1898, and in 1910, was elected to the Hall of Fame.

For such a noted woman it is only proper that we set aside a part of her birthday for a program.

By A. I. Harris

Apparently one of the most popular moves made by the state highway patrol recently is its newly adopted policy of arresting speeders. Newspapers in every part of the state have commented favorably on this action. As typical of what the patrol is doing, in a three-day period last week its members stopped and warned 50 drivers going between 45 and 60 miles per hour and arrested three for dangerous speeding. All three arrested were going over 60 miles per hour. Formerly the patrol was prohibited by law from making arrests for speeding.

Like the story about the demise of Mark Twain, opposition political writers have been a little premature in predicting an open break between Governor Olson and the Farmer Labor Association over alleged patronage differences. Conservative leaders have even whispered that these patronage differences have made the Farmer Labor party a house divided against itself, and that defeat of the party at the forthcoming elections is virtually certain.

Those who sharpened their pencils to write the Farmer Labor obituary must have been somewhat stunned and chagrined at the report of the recent meeting of Farmer Labor Women's Federation; the board of the Minnesota Leader, official organ, and the Farmer Labor Education Bureau. Governor Olson was present and participated. The patronage matter was aired thoroughly.

The result: A campaign to bring association membership to the 100,000 mark; engagement of an organizer; plans for increasing the membership and effectiveness of the Woman's Federation; a subscription campaign for the Leader. This does not look like a political party disrupted by internal strife. It means precisely the presentation of a united front at the next election, which will be fought out on the basis of merit of issues.

It is true that there have been some honest differences of opinion on matters of patronage, but these differences have been exaggerated out of all proportion by those with personal grievances and axes to grind. Their propaganda, which bore no relationship to the truth, was "gobbled up" in toto by the reactionary press.

Farmer-laborites, honest and sincere in their convictions, are not going to permit patronage differences to enter the next campaign and weaken the chances of their party at the polls. That is why finis has been written to the patronage squabble. For, without the aid of the honest farmer-laborites, the effectiveness of the wrecking crew is not only impaired but totally destroyed. The recent meeting shows the handwriting on the wall. The party will campaign for principles and not for jobs.

A report of the Division of Women and Children of the Industrial Commission indicates that after a lull of several years there is a marked increase in the use of children under 16 years in theatrical entertainments. Recent legislation prohibiting the employment of minors under 18 years of age in night clubs and similar places of amusement has restricted the commercialized entertainment field for children to performances in theaters.

Mayor Latimer's position in Minneapolis labor difficulties is not a very envious one; He is dealing largely with extremists on both sides.

On the one hand there is the employer who takes his advice or even orders from the Citizens Alliance. This organization is known to have agents provocateur in the labor unions. These stool pigeons get into positions of importance in the unions and take a leading part in deliberations, formulating unreasonable demands upon employers and creating strikes. In that manner they believe that they can destroy the labor movement. Situations which compel police to use clubs and guns and kill and maim people further their objectives.

On the other hand is the communistic leadership in the labor movement. Communistic tactics are to keep things in the constant state of turmoil, in the hope that if sufficient strife is created the capitalistic order will be overthrown. It is safe to say that among the communistic leadership also can be found agents of the Citizens Alliance.

Of course, both extremes are misguided; they are poor students of American psychology when they believe that their objectives can be attained through the tactics they are pursuing. Mayor Latimer will do well to adopt stern methods to bring reasonableness to the situation. When he ordered an industrial plant closed following a riot he showed that he is more interested in protecting life than property.

Minnesotans burned up the roads in August. Records in the office of George Griffith, chief oil inspector, revealed that for that month gasoline tax collections amounted to more than $1,400,000, the largest for any month in the history of the department.

Impostors representing themselves as agents from the office of David R. Arundel, state liquor control commissioner, have been appearing in liquor establishments throughout the state. At times they have suggested that liquor dealers buy certain brands of liquor, at other times they have confiscated small amounts of liquor under the guise of having such tested. Mr. Arundel requests that liquor store dealers demand identification from anyone representing themselves as liquor control agents. Furthermore, he added, none of his men are interested in what brand of liquor a store or bar carries.

Remember when Americans were horrified at thought of a dole? First we endure, then embrace.—Toledo Blade.

TO CHART LAND WHERE POST AND ROGERS DIED

Detroit Lakes.—An airplane flight to Alaska for the purpose of locating and marking the point where Will Rogers and Wiley Post crashed near Point Barrow is the assignment which Roy G. Karlstrom, who left Detroit Lakes 19 months ago for Fort Snelling, Minneapolis, is contemplating as he spends a 30 day furlough with his uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Leonard, Detroit Lakes. No sooner will Roy complete his "vacation" than he and a regular army pilot will start for Alaska for the purpose of scouting the territory where Rogers and Post plunged to death. Despite the fact that he has just recovered from a broken arm and leg which he suffered in a plane accident that killed the pilot, Roy is eagerly looking forward to the flight. His duties will be to operate the radio.

TWO FISH STORIES COME FROM ONE AFTERNOON

St. Cloud—Fish stories have run rampant this year, but when two of them occur on the same afternoon, it's news. Five St. Cloud men, fishing at Lake Alexandria, testify to the facts. Tommy Lacher got the first action, hooking a good sized pike which got away with his leader and about a foot of line. His partner in the boat, C. H. Gustafson, immediately after hooked a fish, landed him, and discovered it to be the one Lacher had just lost, with the line still in its mouth. An hour later, Barney Bachman, tired of his bad luck, let his rod lay in the bottom of the boat while he adjusted the motor. A fish struck and away went—Bachman's complete outfit, rod, reel and line. Efforts to locate the tackle were futile, but Tom Tolman, patiently casting away, remarked soon after that he either had a lively weed, or else a sluggish fish on his hook. He pulled it in, and along came Bachman's line, rod, reel and six pound pike!

CAR PUSHES PEDESTRIAN THRU PLATE GLASS WINDOW

Alexandria—It isn't safe to walk upon the streets of Alexandria, and Miss Ethel Kapphahn will henceforth stay away from large plate glass windows. She was severly injured when a Model T. Ford, driven by Mrs. Anna Velander, jumped the curbing and pinned her between the car and the broken window. Mrs. Velander, of Farwell, was attempting to park in front of the five and ten cent store at Alexandria when she lost control of her car, running it up on the sidewalk and into the large curved glass window in the store. The heavy plate glass window was shattered and Miss Kapphahn was crushed between the car and the window, being cut severely by the broken glass on the arms and legs. Life in Waters

Because certain bacteria which abound in tropical seas destroy substances that are essential to marine plants, far more plant and animal life is found, per square mile, in the cold waters of the temperate and polar seas than in the warm waters of the tropics.—Collier's Weekly.

SHIP DEER TAMED BY CCC BOYS TO MISSOURI REFUGE

Grand Rapids—Ten young deer from Itasca county are to be shipped to Missouri. The deer are fawns which have been caught and tamed by boys in the different CCC camps. While capturing of young fawns and taming them is illegal, these boys have not fully realized it and have made pets of the young animals, which hang around the camps and can be readily handled. Five of these deer are at camp in Itasca county and five in various other parts of northern Minnesota. All are to be assembled and shipped to a game refuge in Missouri. Many years ago, according to reports, Missouri had good deer hunting. They have been killed off, however, until now comparatively few remain. The ten from Minnesota are expected to form the nucleus of a herd which will be developed in a few years. The game refuge is in the Ozark mountains.

State Insurance Head Warns of Companies in State Without License

Insurance Commissioner Frank Yetka today issued a warning to the insurance buying public of Minnesota to watch their step in the future and buy no insurance policies issued by the following named companies operated by M. E. Bean, out of the office at 410 Vanderburgh Building, 10 South Fourth Street, Minneapolis.

The names of the companies, which are not licensed by the Minnesota insurance department and whose agents are not licensed to sell insurance in the State of Minnesota, are as follows: American Fidelity Mutual Association, Consolidated Insurance Underwriters, Consolidated Mutual Insurance Association and communities' Service Association.

Any person knowing of agents soliciting for the above companies or of any person being solicited by any agent of any of the above named companies is requested to notify the County Attorney.

We wonder how many of the congressmen will dare to let their constituents know they have reached home. — Detroit Free Press.

SEEK FARM VIEW ON POTATO CROP CONTROL PROJECT

Findings to be Discussed at Hearing in Washington October 3

Do farmers favor the control of potato production or marketing? If so, what form of control do they prefer?

Answers to these questions are being sought by the Agricultural Adjustment Administration in a series of informal investigations held throughout the potato districts of the midwest and northwest this week. The findings of these investigations will be taken into consideration by the Secretary of Agriculture, in connection with the findings of a formal hearing in Washington, October 3, in determining whether or not the government should develop a potato control program, and if so, the kind it should be.

In a conference at University Farm, St. Paul, last week, several large-scale Minnesota potato growers urged that the Agricultural Adjustment Administration take immediate steps to restrict the quantity of potatoes marketed. They asked that a program involving closer grading and culling of potatoes, enforced by marketing agreements, be applied to the 1936 crop, and that the compulsory control program passed by the last Congress, involving the establishment of sales quotas for individual growers and the imposition of a prohibitive tax on all potatoes marketed and above such quotas, be made effective for 1936.

The latter program has been set aside, at least temporarily, because Congress failed to appropriate for its administration.

"Whether or not the majority of Minnesota potato growers would subscribe to the views presented in the University Farm conference is uncertain," says Andrew Boss, director of AAA programs, University Farm, St. Paul. "Since no program will succeed without the support of the majority of producers, I will welcome the views of interested growers, both large and small, on this question."

Among the plans which will be discussed at the Washington hearing are the following:

1. An acreage adjustment program, similar to those in effect for corn, hogs, wheat and other basic commodities, with benefits paid to cooperating producers.
2. Adoption of marketing agreements between the Secretary of Agriculture and potato handlers.
3. The diversion of potatoes from normal channels of trade, including their use for manufacturing purposes.

SKATING RINK ELECTION HELD NEXT MONDAY

Voters to Decide on $15,000 Bond Issue to Build $25,000 Rink

Supporters of Project Submit Statement of Their Views

Voters of Thief River Falls will go to the polls in the Auditorium next Monday, October 7, to decide whether or not the city shall issue $15,000 in bonds to qualify for a federal WPA grant of $13,118 to aid in financing the construction of an enclosed skating rink in the city at a total cost of approximately $25,000.

Of the $15,000 which it is proposed that the city shall supply, $11,856 would be spent for materials, while the remainder would be used to purchase the site in the rear of the Auditorium, which is now being acquired under condemnation proceedings. The full amount of the federal grant would go to local labor.

The WPA grant was secured thru the cooperation of the city council with federal officials and with the community skating rink committee, which includes O. C. Paulson, A. B. Stenberg, W. E. Dahlquist, H. M. Olson, A. M. Senstad, Earl Effinger and A. M. Campbell. The committee today released the following statement in explanation of its reasons for supporting the project:

"The present plans call for a building 220 feet long and 90 feet wide, of steel frame work and arches, concrete floor, fireproof composition roof, the outside walls to be finished with glazed tile. Included in the inside of the building will be a skating surface 200 feet by 75 feet, warming room 90 feet by 20 feet, toilet facilities, dressing rooms and bleacher space to accommodate 800 people.

"Competent authorities have estimated that it will be necessary to spend from $6,000.00 to $8,000.00 for direct relief here in Thief River Falls during the coming winter. This means that by spring from $6,000.00 to $8,000.00 will have been spent by the city with nothing of a permanent nature to show for it. If the bond issue is approved so that this building project can go ahead it will mean that $18,000.00 will be spent here this winter by the U. S. government for labor which will take men off the relief rolls and provide work for them. Men want work, not relief. In this way the city will be relieved of the relief burden except where it applies to unemployables.

COUNCIL APPROVES APPLICATIONS FOR BUILDING PERMITS

Decides to Call for Bids on Four Cabins for Use of Relief Clients

Applications for permits covering more than $7,000 in construction work were approved by the city council at an adjourned meeting Tuesday evening, while the application of H. A. Dietz for a permit to erect a filling station on the north side of Highway 1 west of the Great Northern tracks was laid over for further consideration.

Permits granted included Bridgeman Creameries, addition to cost $3,500; Leonard Johnson, residence on LaBree av. N., $2,500; L. W. Knadle, remodeling residence $450; A. C. Jahr, addition to butcher shop, $500; and Arthur Belland, remodeling garage, $125.

The council acted favorably on a report of the tax committee recommending a reduction in the full and true valuation of the cooperative creamery property from $28,600 to $29,000. Martin Bothun also appeared to request a reduction in the valuation of his property on Main av.

It was voted to draw up specifications and call for bids for four cabins, 12 by 20 in size, to house relief clients in the city. The cabins would be erected in the block including the old foundry at the west border of the city. Preliminary estimates indicated the cost of each unit would range from $219.50 to $266.10.

207 Local People Are Employed by Soo Line

Annual Payroll in City Reaches Huge Total of $350,000

While local citizens are conscious in the general way of the important contribution made by the local activities of the Soo Line to the economic welfare of the Thief River Falls community, it will be news to many people that as many as 207 residents of the community are employed by the Soo Line at the present time, and that the annual payroll amounts to the imposing sum of $350,000, well in excess of $1,000 for every working day of the year.

These figures, assembled in the office of A. C. Peterson, division superintendent here, in connection with the Soo Line program in the city Friday, October 11, reveal that the Soo Line, next to the farming industry, is making much the largest contribution to the economic life of the community. Assuming three dependents for each local worker on the system, approximately 800 residents of the city, or 1[illegible] per cent of the population, depend on the Soo Line for their livelihood.

Further information gleaned from a study of the records in Mr. Peterson's office reveals that $9,086 in taxes was paid by local employes of the railroad during the past year, and that annual rental paid by them aggregate $19,428, or a total of $28,514, fixing at $137.75 the average annual payment of taxes and rentals for each railroad employe.

SAMPLE BALLOT IN LIQUOR ELECTION PUBLISHED TODAY

Pennington County Voters Decide on Liquor Sale October 14

A sample ballot showing the form that will be used Monday, October 14, when Pennington county voters will be given an opportunity to express their views on the question of opening this county to the sale of intoxicating liquor, is published elsewhere in this issue of the Times.

The question to be voted on, "Shall the sale of liquor be prohibited?" is so phrased that those opposed to the sale of liquor will be required to vote "yes", while those favoring the sale must vote "No". In the event the county votes in favor of the sale of liquor, it will then be up to the various municipalities to decide whether or not liquor shall be sold within their limits, and if so, whether it should be sold by private dispensers or in a municipal liquor store.

Several interesting discussions of the coming election appear in the "Public Opinion" column in this issue.

LIEUT.-GOVERNOR PETERSON GIVES ADDRESS IN CITY

Advocates More Equitable Distribution of National Income

Addressing a gathering in the Auditorium Saturday afternoon, Lieutenant Governor Hjalmar Petersen of Askov advocated the education of the masses to know where their interests lie and thus bring about a more equitable distribution of the national income. No clique, he said, should set itself up as superior to the government, as in the case of Louisiana.

The speaker endorsed the steps taken by the federal government to end unemployment, and stated that the dole should be ended as quickly as practicable since it tends to destroy the morale of the people. He approved the federal old-age pension legislation, and said that in order to remove the stigma of charity the pension should be offered to all persons of eligible age, regardless of the amount of property they own.

C. H. Gaarenstrom, attorney for the department of rural credit, discussed legislation enacted in 1935 affecting rural credit lands, particularly the laws providing for payment of interest with a share of the crop, scaling down top-heavy loans, and giving borrowers who have lost their farms a chance to buy them back on a crop payment plan.

SOO LINE HONORED AT PROGRAM ON FRIDAY

Congressman Theodore Christianson Speaks Saturday, October 12

Sponsored by three local groups, a three-day fall festival will be held in Thief River Falls Thursday, Friday and Saturday, October 10, 11 and 12. The celebration includes a varied program of entertainment, including addresses, band and drum corps music, parades and dances, for residents of Northwestern Minnesota.

The local Legion post is sponsoring the program for Thursday, the opening day, which will take the form of a rally of World War veterans from the northern half of the Ninth district. State Commander Harold Rogers and Mrs. E. E. Vigen, state auxiliary president, will speak at afternoon and evening meetings, while music will be provided by the famous Ninth District band and by the Crookston and Thief River Falls auxiliary drum corps.

Friday, October 11, has been designated as Soo Line day, the program for which will be carried out under the sponsorship of the senior Civic and Commerce association. The program will take the form of an expression of appreciation for the large contribution made by the Soo Line to the material welfare of this community. Speakers at an afternoon program in the Auditorium will include officials of the railroad and of the rail brotherhoods as well as local citizens. Morris Bye, who will preside as chairman, is being assisted in making arrangements by Division Superintendent A. C. Peterson of the Soo Line.

Friday evening a banquet will be held in Trinity Lutheran church, at which it is expected a large number of local Soo Line workers will be present to hear addresses by company officials and brotherhood representatives. The Soo Line orchestra of Minneapolis will supply music for the occasion. Robert J. Lund is in charge of arrangements.

Events Saturday, October 12, will be under the supervision of the Junior Civic and Commerce association, and will include an afternoon address in the Auditorium by Congressman Theodore Christianson, while the program will reach a climax at midnight with the crowning of four queens in a popularity contest, the young women representing Thief River

New Bridge Approach is Big Achievement

Program October 12 to Celebrate Completion of Project

A program in the Auditorium Saturday afternoon, October 12, with the principal address delivered by Congressman Theodore Christianson under the sponsorship of the Junior Civic and Commerce association, will celebrate the completion by the state highway department of the Johnson st. boulevard project and bridge approach beautification, constituting the largest single construction job to be undertaken in Thief River Falls this year.

The project, completed at a total cost of more than $50,000 including the right-of-way, not only adds greatly to the attractiveness of the east side as a residence district, but supplies an important link in Highway 59, which upon completion of pending construction will furnish the shortest route from the Twin Cities thru Detroit Lakes and Thief River Falls to Noyes and Winnipeg.

The contract for the project, involving 1.2 miles of construction, was let early in May to B. P. Lund & Sons of this city, who shortly after commenced operations, completing the work in September. At a distance one block east of the bridge the street has been developed into a double driveway separated by a center parkway that continues east on Johnson st. and around a graceful curve almost as far as the Bridge st. intersection.

To provide room for the widened highway several houses on the north side of Johnson st. were removed and located elsewhere on the east side. Other features of the project include the beautification of the west approach to the bridge, tying it in with the Elks memorial park adjoining on the south, as well as with a parked tract on the north side of the approach. In addition sections of the east bank of the river near the bridge were built up with soil dredged from shallow places in the river.

Thieves Get Clover Seed and Flax in Cloverleaf

Following receipt of a report early this week that sometime after last Saturday thieves entered a granary in Cloverleaf township and stole 250 bushels of flax and 1,500 pounds of sweet clover seed, Sheriff Arthur Rambeck issued a warning to county farmers to be on guard against grain thieves. The stolen grain and seed was the property of Sam Haugen and was stored in a granary a mile and one-half from the Haugen home.

CIVIC GROUP PICKS COMMITTEES FOR FALL CELEBRATION

To Cooperate With Two Other Groups In Planning Festival

Frank Rinkel was named chairman of a committee to coordinate the plans of the three groups, other members being O. C. Paulson, A. M. Magnuson, Andrew Anderson, H. M. Olson, Walter Jung and Dr. A. E. Jacobson. The budget committee includes Leon J. Kulliher and Paul Lundgren, while on the publicity committee are W. E. Dahlquist, H. E. Nelson, A. W. Mickelson and H. M. Olson.

Morris Dye and A. C. Peterson were designated to take charge of the Soo Line program in the Auditorium Friday afternoon, October 11, while arrangements for the banquet that evening are in the hands of Robert J. Lund.

Introduced at the meeting was Ola Lee, who last month was appointed to the post of Great Northern agent in this city, succeeding the late W. E. Baker. Mr. Lee, who came here after serving five years at Rugby, N. D., has been in the employ of the Great Northern railway the past thirty years.

To Inaugurate

Nash Coffee Week

Your grocer is cooperating in this sale by featuring NASH'S TOASTED COFFEE at special prices

TRY A POUND TODAY. . ENTIRELY AT OUR RISK! . . YOUR MONEY BACK . . IF DISSATISFIED

IN order to acquaint every family in this community with the superior flavor, the tempting deliciousness, of Nash's Toasted Coffee, local grocers, co-operating with the Nash Coffee Company, are this week featuring Nash's Toasted Coffee at special prices. A solid carload of Nash's Toasted Coffee has arrived in town, to take care of the demand, and you'll find large displays of it in every grocery store.

And, every pound of Nash's Toasted Coffee is sold under this guarantee: if, after using the entire pound, you do not believe that Nash's Toasted Coffee is the finest, richest flavored coffee you ever served, merely return the empty container and your full purchase price will be refunded without question.

Nash's Toasted Coffee is utterly different from any coffee you have ever tasted, because it is toasted by an exclusive process. The remarkable flavor of Nash's Toasted Coffee...a flavor immediately noticeable at the first sip...is due to the toasting process which seals the surface of the coffee bean, thus preserving intact the original flavor placed there by nature. Old-fashioned roasting, with its fierce heat, "roasts out" a large percentage of the flavor producing oils, resulting in coffee that is weak and flat in flavor.

If you have never served Nash's Toasted Coffee in your home...if you are unacquainted with its satisfaction of flavor, its economy...do try it this week under the unequivocal guarantee, "your money back if not entirely satisfied."

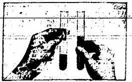
Nash's
Nash's Coffee

Nash's Toasted Coffee is packed in vacuum tin cans and the vacuum glass jar...two types of flavor-conserving containers to suit your particular needs.

Why we say: "NASH'S TOASTED COFFEE is the richest flavored coffee you ever tasted."

1 The flavor of coffee comes from an aromatic oil known as caffeol, which can be extracted from coffee and weighed. This scientific measure tells you without question the flavor value of your coffee.

2 The aromatic oil, caffeol, after extraction, may be placed on a scale and weighed. Thus, the amount of caffeol contained in a pound of coffee gives you its flavor value...a scientific fact independent of advertising claims.



3 The Van Cleve Laboratories, in flavor examination of popular brands of coffee, report that Nash's Toasted Coffee contains 35.7% more caffeol than any of the seven leading brands, scientific proof that in Nash's Toasted Coffee you receive the ultimate in coffee flavor.

ENROLLMENT AT UNIVERSITY WILL REVEAL GOOD GAIN

Officials Predict Gain of Fully 11 Per Cent Over Preceding Year

Not yet on the scale of the rush to college that followed the world war, but in many ways comparable, is the influx of students into colleges and universities this fall, including not only the University of Minnesota and state colleges, but institutions throughout the country, and especially the west.

Final tabulation of the enrollment at the University of Minnesota will be made this week, but barring possession of actual figures there is evidence that a gain of between 11 and 14 per cent will be shown over a year ago. Those are the figures that measure the gains of most western state institutions. The gain, if it manifests itself, will be more significant than that of a year ago, as at that time 1,000 federal aid students were included. This year there will be 1100 federal aid students, the difference representing a small part of the growth.

One of the most difficult problems of recent years was presented to the university this fall when more than 5,000 applications for federal aid student appointments were received, with only 1100 openings. Dean Malcolm M. Willey, chairman of the committee in charge has clung strictly to the two main points in selecting young men and women for appointment. These have been, need of assistance, and scholastic standing. Those with high marks had to be given preference, and, of course, all had to be in need of aid.

Appointments have been made so that students could earn either $15 or $20 a month. The appointments at $20 a month have gone only to students from outside the twin cities, on the assumption that their cash outlay must be greater than that of students living at home.

The state has recognized the same situation. It is adding to the federal aid $5 a month of state aid, but only for those students at the university who have been placed on the $20 basis, namely, those from outside the twin cities.

Fire in Grate for 133 Years

For 133 years a fire has burned in a grate in the isolated Saltersgate Inn near Pickering, England, and it probably will burn for another 100. The blaze was lighted in the days of the stage coach and never has gone out. In the olden times passengers arrived at all hours of the day and night and always demanded a fire at which they could get warm. The inn keeper decided it was better to keep the fire always burning than to start it afresh when he heard the coach-horn. When railways succeeded coaches, no one thought of extinguishing it.

Feeding Civilians Instead of Armies

More Profitable Than Waging Wars

WHEN you have read "Paths of Glory", probably the most talked-of book on the Great War since "All Quiet on the Western Front", it seems rather incongruous to discuss foods that keep armies fit. You find yourself asking—fit for what?

It is well, however, to consider the use of some of those foods which military authorities have found sustaining for soldiers, to make for a race of better civilians.

Foremost, among army rations, probably, is canned meat. "Bully Beef" has gone down in war songs and stories with as many versions as there are verses to "Mademoiselle from Armentieres". And for the housewife, who is keeping her family fit and with sufficient energy for "the last long mile", canned meat has a distinct use.

To Keep Them Fit

Suppose, for example, that there are lunches to be prepared—lunches for hikes, lunches after swimming, after tennis, or some heavy exertion. The steak in the refrigerator is reserved for dinner, yet a vegetable luncheon is not sustaining enough. It is simple to go to the pantry, and choose at will between canned corned beef, veal loaf, ham loaf, tongue or any of the many canned meats.

It is important to know delicious ways to prepare these meats to vary them. Ham loaf is particularly good with pineapple; veal loaf sautéed and served with fresh asparagus is tempting; canned sliced tongue with macaroni and cheese is a very sustaining meal; and canned steak and onions can be made into a steak sandwich served on toasted rolls and garnished with sliced mushrooms if you like.

Growing With Your Child

Learning to be Truthful

Truthfulness is a concept that must be built up gradually in the child's mind. Parents who are shocked when they realize that no children are entirely truthful, have not observed the extent to which deceit is practised in nature.

Protective coloration in birds, animals, and fishes is one of the obvious methods by which the self-preservative tendency is manifested. When man conquers his impulse to get out of a tight place by deceit, a big advance over natural inclination is made. The girl of two who hides her bread crusts under her plate is protecting herself from the unpleasantness of having to eat them. The little boy who, on being put to bed, constantly requires a drink or to be taken to the toilet, while not of course consciously lying, is building up a protective plan. He enjoys the pleasant results of being taken up; hence if his plea is yielded to, he resorts to the same or a like suggestion—anything that brings results—and subterfuge and false excuse are gradually built up.

Adults often provoke in children exactly the behavior they deplore. Puzzled or scandalized parents often react to the harmless, imaginative tales of their children in such a way that the child begins to wonder what this "lie" is that he has been accused of telling. Once interest is centered on the lie, the child may take delight in drawing fine distinctions, analyzing and sternly criticizing his own statements as did Stern's boy, who remarked, "I said once I meant to be a doctor. But now I don't mean to at all, so that's a lie."

Care must be taken not to treat casual slips as lies. Branding a chance misstatement or lapse of memory as "lying" fixes the event in a child's mind. The mother who over-urges her children to eat vegetables is the one whose children refuse them; so in the realm of truth telling, we must keep in mind the possibility of urging the child into lying by overinsistence on the truth.

Imagination is an invaluable asset, both to children and adults. Only the person who has imagination can enter into the joys and sorrows of others. He is an understanding and sympathetic companion. Imagination has a use very practical to parents, for the imaginative child may be more easily guided toward acceptable behavior. Many a parent has made use of the child's delight in playing soldier to secure prompt and delighted obedience to orders that might otherwise have proved irksome. The child who has been taught to make play of putting away his toys, cleaning up after a "wreck," or pretending that he is packing up to go on a journey, is the child who later on, when asked to rake the lawn, sees in the grass and leaves an important "crop" which he is harvesting.

By being stimulated to careful observation and encouraged in accurate reports of what he sees, a child learns to make discriminations, to see and appreciate fine points of difference. And if we are to develop ideals of honor and truth in the child, honesty in the adults surrounding him is imperative.

All men are born free and equal but grow up into a graduated income-tax world.—Cincinnati Times Star.

FIRE PREVENTION WEEK SCHEDULED OCTOBER 6 TO 12

State Fire Marshal Calls for Widespread Observance of Week

National Fire Prevention Week, October 6 to 12 inclusive, takes on new interest this year with everyone interested in learning sure ways and means of never having to call the fire department, says Dewey W. Johnson, state fire marshall. The reason that the week is designated from October 6 to 12, is that it is the anniversary on October 9, of the greatest cow kick in the history, when Mrs. O'Leary's cow kicked over the lantern and started the Great Chicago Fire, but great as was the Chicago fire loss many years ago, it is a fact that human carelessness today, causes a greater annual fire loss in the United States caused by the carelessness of you and I, is fifteen-thousand lives and one-half billion dollars in property loss.

In educating the public to prevent fires, the Minnesota fire marshal's department, local fire departments, both paid and volunteer, numbering fourteen-thousand men and officers, civic organizations and individuals are cooperating to spread a state-wide program of fire prevention education. Through the pulpit, radio, newspapers, schools and homes, will be disseminated the facts and causes of fire and the loss resulting therefrom.

A study of the figures compiled by the Fire Marshal's Office shows that carelessness with match and cigarettes are the cause of one fire out of every three; sparks from chimneys cause one fire in every eight; defective wiring cause one fire in every seven, gasoline, kerosene and illuminating gas explosions cause one fire in every twelve and spontaneous ignition causes one fire in every sixteen. These figures are taken from the compilation of fires made for the month of July, 1935. The logical deduction is that 90% of the fires in Minnesota are preventable with the exercise of ordinary reasonable care of the citizens of the state.

Two Local Men Catch Pike in River Below Dam

John Ward, fishing enthusiast who this year angled in numerous Northern Minnesota lakes in quest of the finny tribe, had to come back home to make his best catch of the season. Fishing for two hours Tuesday in a pool in Red Lake river below the city dam he caught seven nice specimens of northern pike and one good-sized wall-eyed pike. Now more than ever John is convinced that this community should advertise its advantages as a summer resort.

Another catch almost equally good was made Wednesday afternoon by Stanley Michalsky, who caught a wall-eyed pike weighing four pounds three ounces in addition to five pickerel of smaller size, all in the space of an hour and a half.

VOTE FOR AN ENCLOSED RINK

At a special election to be held Monday, Thief River Falls citizens will be asked to decide whether or not the city should build an enclosed skating rink this winter as a work relief project. The total cost of the structure is estimated at $25,000. Of this amount the city will be expected to furnish material at an estimated cost of $12,000. The proposed $15,000 bond issue will take care of this item and the cost of a site.

The proposition has merit from the standpoint of providing a much needed winter recreational center and also as a project that will provide relief labor during the coming winter months. Experience with an outdoor rink during the past several years has demonstrated the need for better skating facilities. The rink has been a popular playground for both young and old. Chief of Police Stenberg states that during the skating season the youngsters are less of a problem around town. This consideration alone justifies the project as a worth while community investment.

As an unemployment relief project that will provide work thruout most of the winter, the building will make it possible for the city to reduce its direct relief expenditures. Now that the city is directly responsible for relief, the expenditure of approximately $13,000 for labor by the federal government thruout the winter months is in itself an important item.

Winters are long up here in Thief River Falls. One way to shorten them is to make them more pleasant. In providing proper skating facilities we are encouraging a form of recreation for which this climate is well adapted. Vote for an enclosed rink at the special election Monday.

REVISION BY SUBTERFUGE

Minnesota has been adversely effected by several of the reciprocal trade treaties already entered into by the Roosevelt administration under the authority given it by Congress to revise tariff schedules. Reduced sugar acreage is the result of a special concession given to Cuban growers. Reduction of the tariff on low grade iron and steel certainly is not beneficial to Minnesota's iron industry. And reducing the rates on Swedish and Russian matches will undoubtedly retard development of Minnesota's match factory at Cloquet.

During the campaign preceding the last national election we heard much talk about the iniquitous tariff. As a matter of fact we were given definitely to understand that that tariff was the direct cause of all of our difficulties. Considering everything that was said about it before the election, it was rather strange that no direct action was taken by the administration after it came into power. It is now apparent however that the plan of the administration is to reduce the tariff by subterfuge through the so-called trade treaties rather than by usual procedure. It is another example of Congress yielding one of its most important powers to the executive and the result is that the college professors now have a free hand in executing their internationalist plans.

A world war checked the downward decline in American business that started following the low tariff schedules adopted by the Wilson administration. It may be that another war will temporarily save the face of the present administration. But American industry, which for instance maintains an avearge hour wage of more than sixty cents among steel workers, cannot long maintain that standard in free competition with Belgium where the average hour wage among steel workers is only seventeen cents. The inevitable result of lower tariff schedules will be a leveling off of the American standard of living to the world average. Under its present policy our government is auctioning off American economic independence to a group of bidders who have nothing with which to pay.

Wheat seems to be scheduled for higher world prices again, according to recent surveys of available supplies and crop prospects down below the equator where the crop season is now far enough along to justify estimates. Three successive short crops within the United States have washed out the surpluses we worried so much about a few years ago. Before another crop is harvested we are likely to be on an import basis. In the meantime drouth conditions in the Argentine are expected to reduce the South American crop to a point where there will be no available exports. Production in other countries that have helped glut world markets is also off. Canada seems to be the only country in a position to take advantage of this situation in a big way and those who are supposed to know all about such things seem to think our neighbors to the north of us are due for a little prosperity.

Lieutenant Governor Hjalmer Peterson is a personable fellow and is making many friends in this section of the state. The Farmer-Labor party could do much worse than select Mr. Peterson as its standard bearer to head the state ticket next year. Through his service in the legislature and as the presiding officer of the Senate he has won the respect even of those who do not agree with him politically.

Dr. Gustav Ekstrom, the Minneapolis astrologer, predicts there will be snow storms in northern Minnesota during the month of October. But astrology means little to us up here in this section of the state. We govern ourselves by more accurate indications. We know that when the snow drifts are hub deep in October it is a sign of an early winter.

We hear many comments on the fine corn being displayed in our front window. Even our own people do not seem to realize we have several farmers in this community who have matured corn consistently year after year. And this is a crop that has good possibilities. Northern grown seed commands a substantial premium. The corn belt is gradually moving northward. One of these days we will discover that it has already arrived.

Another world's series under way—my oh my—it must be getting near the end of the summer season again.

TO THINE OWN SELF BE TRUE
(Lake Crystal Tribune)

Among all the philosophers of the ancient and modern worlds, there is none who has put more in less words than did Confuscious, great teacher of the Chinese about 2,500 years ago, when he said:

"The ancients who wished to illustrate the highest virtues throughout the empire first ordered well their own states. Wishing to order well their states, they first regulated their families. Wishing to regulate their families, they first cultivated their own selves. Wishing to cultivate their own selves, they first rectified their hearts. Wishing to rectify their hearts, they first sought to be sincere in their thoughts. Wishing to be sincere in their thoughts, they extended to the utmost their knowledge. Such extension of knowledge lay in the investigation of things. Things being investigated, knowledge became complete. Their knowledge being complete, their thoughts were sincere. Their thoughts being sincere, their hearts wer then rectified. Their hearts being rectified, their own selves were cultivated. Their own selves being cultivated, their families were regulated. Their families being regulated, their states were richly governed. Their states being richly governed, the whole empire was made tranquil and happy."

THE RELIEF PROBLEM
(Bemidji Sentinel)

With the announcement that on November 1st the counties will be obliged to take care of relief cases not provided for under the WPA causes increasing interest in the handling of this important part of governmental activity. It is difficult to estimate how many cases there will be in this county. Much depends on the projects that will be approved by the state and government following the influx of requests during the past few days.

The situation in other counties seems to be equally acute and the newspapers contain varied comments on what might or might not be done.

For instance the Heron Lake News brings up one point of action that was formerly considered out of the question but is now being generally approved—the publication of the names of those on relief rolls and the amount received. The News says:

> The county commissioners of Blue Earth county have announced that the names of all persons receiving relief will be published some time next week and at regular intervals thereafter, which is a good move. The amount each person receives each month should also be published, as was done by the Heron Lake village council until the SERA took over the relief work here. Taxpayers then have a chance to check up on those receiving relief and the amounts they are given and can quickly weed out those receiving relief who are not entitled to it.

Another action taken by the Martin County commissioners is also being considered throughout the state in an effort to reduce the relief aid that is not warranted.

In this connection the Heron Lake News says:

> County boards of at least two counties in the state have voted to refuse relief to any person who drives an automobile of his own—Blue Earth and Martin. "Nothing makes the taxpayers madder than to see persons driving around on the streets while accepting relief from the county," said County Commissioner Milow of Martin county as the board voted unanimously to require persons receiving relief to turn in their license plates to the county auditor. The board took the viewpoint that if persons are driving cars they are in most cases spending money which they could just as well use in providing for their families. One Martin county man, on relief last winter, bought himself a new car this summer. "If that man comes back for more relief this winter he's going to have a hard job getting it," said one of the commissioners. The Jackson county commissioners would be wise to pass a similar resolution.

HOW DID IT START?
(Canby Press)

A gruesomely fascinating tale has been going the rounds of this section of the state for two or three weeks, horrifying weak-nerved people with bloody details of an accident in which a tiny child was run through a threshing machine.

At first the community around Granite Falls was credited with being the locale of the mishap, then a week later, after it had been disproved in the Granite Falls Tribune, it moved westward to Clarkfield, and some rumors had it St. Leo. Then a Canby girl returning from a visit in South Dakota had a fresh version of the accident from Elkton, S. D. In all instances, the details were luridly clear except when it came to names and places, when the story wandered off into suppositions and ended only to spring to life in the next group of talkers.

How the horrible story ever got started is a mystery, as usually there is some foundation to a report of that kind. But no such accident has been found to occur in the last few weeks in spite of persistent questioning and inquiry.

It is time that the hoax come to an end, as there can be no benefit in mulling over the ghastly details of an accident which never did, and probably never could, happen.

Campaigns for safety measures in motor driving, such as those sponsored in Minnesota this month, deserve respect. Judging by statistics there was never greater need for safety education. Unless there is a marked improvement in the highway accident record during the very worst months of the year—September, October and November—the number of automobile deaths and injuries for 1935 may break all records. Thus the task facing us this year is much greater, and the duty of citizens, drivers and pedestrians more pressing than ever before. Highway deaths represent a shocking and needless toll.—Northfield News.

In the recent French Army manoeuvres, where the problem of air attack upon motorized armies was studied, the autogiro or flying windmill developed by the Spaniard, De Cierva, seems to have played an important part. A machine that can scurry along the ground like a frightened cockroach, hop over obstructions like a grasshopper, then soar away in the air like a dragonfly has a versatility that no airplane can equal.—The Chicago News.

The irony of it is that the body that opened the prairie chicken hunting season is called the conservation commission.

What this country really needs, in the opinion of the Minneota Mascot, is not so much a breathing spell as an oxygen tank.

It was a sapient commentator who observed that the Republicans are looking for a perfect '36.

News and Comment
By R. W. Hitchcock

The fellow who first said that chickens come home to roost had looked at life through wise and philosophic eyes and the experience of humanity has made his saying a world saying.

Governor Olson regarded with great complacency his position as Santa Claus in the 1934 campaign. In dispensing the federal millions then available for Minnesota he must have felt the glow which comes from doing a good deed, and besides, the fact that he was the source from which all these blessings flowed was not doing him any harm so far as the Ides of November were concerned. From the Governor's point of view the whole thing was highly satisfactory all around.

Now that Washington has taken away the Governor's Santa Claus suit of clothes and dressed another up in it, the thing, gossips say, does not look so good to the Governor. If, incidentally, playing Santa Claus helped Floyd Olson to be reelected Governor, that was as it should be, but to have Victor Christgau play Santa Claus and thereby build himself up as a federal administration candidate for United States Senator in opposition to the Governor is a horse of a different color.

Mr. Christgau, as federal relief administrator in Minnesota, will have $75,000,000 to $100,000,000 to spend in the state and it will all be spent before November 1936. If Mr. Christgau nourishes an ambition to be United States Senator from Minnesota he certainly will be in a favorable position to file.

Vic Christgau is not only chuck full of ambition but it is suspected that somewhere about his person he conceals a rabbit foot.

Hardly had Vic warmed his seat in the Minnesota State Senate than he filed for and was elected Congressman from Minnesota, and was, in the very adolescence of his political experience, both state Senator and Congressman at the same time. Hardly had he lost his new Congressional seat in the Minnesota congressional free-for-all in 1932 than the New Deal picked him up and made him a Something-or-Other in the upper brackets. Hardly had he, with juvenile political impudence, kicked this high position back into the faces of his political superiors, than he astonished the natives in Minnesota by catapulting to the top of the heap with a hundred millions of bounty in one pocket and a potential seat in the United States Senate in the other.

You gotta give it to Vic; he has a sudden way of going places.

The hospital site commission was a most harmonious body and decided unanimously upon Moose Lake, but the play seldom looks just the same behind the scenes, and gossip at the capitol has it that the commission was divided—two for Mora, two for Carlton and one for neither of these places; the commissioners, being sensible people of sound judgment, compromised, and Moose Lake and Representative Dick Hart were the beneficiaries.

Labor troubles in Minneapolis, apparently fomented by Communist and ultra-radicals who seem to feel secure against any interference with their activities on the part of the state, have again resulted in some destruction and in the death of two innocent persons.

The outside world looks somewhat askance at Minneapolis in this matter. The Chicago Tribune in a recent editorial said in part: "The city (Minneapolis) has reverted again to the law of the club and the fang, as it did a year ago during the truck strike. The proposal of Governor Olson to call out the militia, in view of the conduct of that body in the previous strike, can be interpreted not as a move to suppress disorder but to foster it by military protection. The extent to which Minneapolis subscribes to the un-American gospel of class warfare, the irresponsible utterances and violent acts of Governor Olson in supporting civic disorder, and the continual campaign of that official and his party to destroy freedom of the press are sufficient to refute the claim of the city to a place among civilized communities."

In its strictures against Governor Olson the Chicago Tribune overlooks one extenuating circumstance. The event seems to prove the wisdom of the Governor's actions, for did he not carry every labor ward overwhelmingly, and the city itself by a substantial vote, at the election which followed his interference in Minneapolis?

The taxpayer, who is principally responsible for the kind of government he has, has already paid out $421,260.00 for calling out the militia last year in the Minneapolis truck strike and the bills are not all in yet.

This year a total of 147 men were summoned, held in readiness for five days and then disbanded.

State Treasurer Julius Schmahl will leave September 29th for California there to deliver the principal address on Minnesota Day at the San Diego Exposition. Although Julius is a host in himself, he will not go alone. The Redwood Falls city band of 40 pieces will go along to help its fellow-townsman and doughty State Treasurer make himself heard in Southern California.

Congressman Harold Knutson, who is here, there and everywhere, will be out there too and will doubtless, as usual, be putting in a weighty word in season.

Another member of the State Executive Council is out of the state this week—State Auditor Staff King who, with several thousand Minnesota Legionnaires, is making a strong effort to elect Pat Cliff of Ortonville national commander of the American Legion at St. Louis.

There is no politics in this, of course—that is, not more than there is in any election. Members of the Legion from Minnesota, no matter what their partisanship, are united and enthusiastic in this campaign, but it is difficult not to suspect that national politics may influence the vote of some state delegations and may have a decided bearing on the result.

Minnesota has an outstanding candidate and a preliminary survey of the field indicates that he has strong backing.

The Governor and the Farmer-Labor Association reached complete accord last week on the patronage troubles which have so disturbed the Farmer-Labor peace of mind for some weeks.

The accord with which the Farmer Labor Association comes out of the dispute seems to smack of the compromise made by the man and his wife. "We have agreed to compromise our differences," he said, "by accepting my wife's position."

The Governor flatly told the Farmer-Labor Association at a three hour conference that legislation was more important than jobs, and that they could and should cooperate with him as to legislation but that he would attend to the jobs or words to that effect. There did not seem to be much for the Farmer-Labor Association to do but to like it or lump it.

So they came out of the conferences swallowing hard and smiling wryly but declaring that they liked it.

Governor Olson announced that he will ask Dr. John G. Rockwell, commissioner of education, to make safety education a part of the program of the Minnesota public schools. The Governor is now speaking to some purpose. The children of Minnesota, and the state itself, will certainly be much better served by such a program than by the untried socialistic theories which Dr. Rockwell is endeavoring to implant into the minds of the boys and girls of the state.

Mike Holm, registrar of motor vehicles, has certified to the clerks of court in the 87 counties of the state 10,000 delinquent car owners. The district court and the sheriff will do the rest. Delinquencies have increased this year from the 14,000 mark of last year but are about the same as in 1933.

More motor cars had been registered in Minnesota up to September 1st this year than in all 1934 when the total registration reached 724,110. The registration for 1935 to September 1st was 726,880, or 28,268 more than at the same time a year ago.

Mike Holm still holds the blue ribbon for the lowest cost of issuing motor vehicle licenses in the United States. In addition, the genial Secretary of State has organized the most varied and most complete service to motor car owners in the way of information and protection that exists anywhere in the country. One of these is the day and night information service, 24 hours of the day, which has proved of great value to motor car owners.

The calling of three special elections for October 21st to fill vacancies in the Legislature makes the talked of special session fairly certain. The Banco prosecutions in which the state has thus far sensationally achieved a zero record and widely charged to be solely for political purposes, are again threatening a new outbreak. The Olson ouster suit for alleged violation of the corrupt practices act has been carried to the supreme court. Another break for the Governor. The Governor got a substantial plurality of the votes of Minnesota last year; he was the choice of the voters and no good citizen wants to see him ousted on a technicality. A quo warranto action before the supreme court will decide whether the Governor or the legislature has the power and right of appointing University regents. Former Representative Ray Quinlivan of St. Cloud, it is said, will bear the brunt of the action.

The Emeritus Status

Finally the emeritus status implies retirement from all active participation in matters pertaining to the work of an organization or institution, and acceptance of the honor and distinction obligates the recipient to observe the custom. In the absence of definite action by the organization to the contrary, it is assumed that the force of this custom would act as a rule.

Why They Are Kisses

The small crosses or x's were at one time more important than as symbols indicative of youthful romance, writes G. R. Turner in the Kansas City Times. Their origin dates back to a time when few people could read and an even fewer number could write. Nevertheless, wills and other public documents had to be signed somehow, so those who were unable to write merely made their mark. The solemnity of affixing one's signature to such binding agreements led, in a highly religious age, to making such marks in the form of a cross that the signer would kiss as a pledge of good faith and as an act of reverence. Thus the cross on paper became associated with the kiss.

Meaning of Name Taj Mahal

The meaning of the name Taj Mahal as translated from the Persian, is "distinguished one of the palace." The contraction from the Arabic "Mumtaz mahal" gives the meaning "distinguished abode." Either will apply since the Taj Mahal is the tomb of the wife of Shah-Jehan.

Stockers and feeders were little changed, good to choice stocker and feeder steers making $6.75-7.75, plainer grades down to $5.00 or less.

Hogs were mostly 15-25c lower, better 170-250 lb. $10.50-10.75, medium grades $10.00-10.50, good to choice 250-350 lb. $10.00-10.50, 140-170 lb. $10.00-10.65, most sows $9.25-9.35, heavies down to $9.10. Pigs were extremely scarce.

QUIRK SENTENCED ON MANSLAUGHTER CHARGE SATURDAY

Pleads Guilty to Charge of Causing Death of Stepfather June 23

On the eve of his trial in the October term of district court on a second degree manslaughter charge arising from the death, June 23 of his stepfather William H. Quirk Highlanding township, Mike Quirk appeared before District Judge M. A. Brattland in this city Saturday and entered a plea of guilty to the charge.

Judge Brattland sentenced him to serve an indeterminate sentence of from one to fifteen years in a state penal institution, and Sheriff Arthur Rambeck Sunday took Quirk to St. Cloud to begin serving out his sentence. He had been in the county jail for more than three months, having been taken into custody the night of June 22.

A coroner's jury that was summoned following the death of William Quirk rendered a verdict that his death resulted from blows inflicted by his stepson, testimony being submitted to the effect that the young man was under the influence of liquor the night of the attack.

3-DAY CELEBRATION WILL OPEN IN THIEF RIVER FALLS OCT. 10

Falls, Pennington county, Red Lake county and Marshall county, each winner to receive a $50 cash prize.

The afternoon program will include brief exercises at the new bridge in this city to celebrate the completion of a project for the beautification of the approaches to the bridge, the improvement representing an investment by the state of more than $50,000. Representing the state highway department at the exercises will be O. L. Kipp, construction engineer, and M. J. Hoffman, bridge engineer, both of St. Paul.

A feature of each of the three evenings of the celebration will be a gala dance at the Auditorium with music provided by Wayne Stuts and his Band of Bands, one of the country's outstanding musical organizations. The organization, which carries its own amplifying equipment, will provide a varied array of entertainment including soloists, duos, trios and ensemble singing. The band has played at many of the leading dance places in the larger cities, including Detroit, Pittsburg, Boston and Baltimore.

ENCLOSED SKATING RINK BOND ISSUE TO BE VOTED ON MONDAY

"From a recreational standpoint: the open air rink which has been operated for the last four winters has proven that a winter playground is a real social asset to the city. The growing popularity of skating and hockey indicates that sooner or later an enclosed rink will be built here and it is reasonable to think that it will never again be built at the present low cost to the city.

"The use of the building is not confined to winter activities. The possibilities of such a building are numerous in an active community such as ours. A certain amount of revenue can be derived from the activities, which should materially reduce the cost to the city over a period of years.

"We respectfully urge your careful consideration of this question and that you indicate your wishes by voting on October 7th."

There is some doubt at Washington as to who will administer the alcohol control act. How about the secretary of the Interior?

NOW is the time to let us give your car a Winter Check-up

Soo Line Rails Laid to This City in 1904

Pennington County Named After Long-Time Head of Soo Line

The program planned in this city for Friday, October 11, as a tribute to the Soo Line for its contributions to the welfare of the Thief River Falls community will serve to remind the older local residents that it was in 1904, 31 years ago, that the laying of the rails from Glenwood to this city and north to the border was completed.

The part played by the railroad in the development of this section was acknowledged in 1910 when the new county formed from part of Red Lake county was given the name of Pennington in tribute to Edmund Pennington, for many years president of the Soo Line.

Construction of the Wheat Line portion of the Soo system, extending from this city far into North Dakota, was begun in 1905 and was completed the following year. In 1910 the Duluth line was completed to Plummer to connect with this city. The local depot, with one exception the finest on the system, was completed in 1913.

Included in the local division operated from this city is a total mileage of 719.5, comprising lines from Glenwood to Noyes, Thief River Falls to Kenmare, Fordville to Drake, N. D., and Egeland to Armourdale, N. D.

J. H. Michaels was the first division superintendent here, serving from 1904 to 1912. He was succeeded in turn by W. A. Barnard, serving from 1912 to 1928; and W. H. Mann, 1928 to 1933. Following an interval during which Supt. E. D. Jones of Superior had charge of the Winnipeg division, A. C. Peterson came to this city from Superior August 1 of this year to assume charge of the division.

The personnel of the local offices include W. H. Mann, assistant superintendent; Philip Bryant, chief train dispatcher; A. J. Oden, Tom Rowan, G. P. Hinton, F. L. Koblieska and L. W. Kitcher, dispatchers; L. D. Moulds, chief clerk; H. M. Krogstad and D. M. Conners, roadmasters; and H. A. Pratt, local agent.

E. G. CLARK
Freight Traffic Manager

Mr. Clark occupied various positions with the Soo Line until his appointment as General Freight Agent in 1916. He was promoted to his present position, Freight Traffic Manager, in 1928.

Bang Test is Resumed; Farmers Are Advised to Ask at Once for Test

Bang's disease testing of Minnesota cattle, discontinued since June 15 while the government was drawing up a new agreement to offer herd owners, is now being resumed, announces Dr. W. J. Fretz, federal veterinarian in charge of the disease eradication program in Minnesota. He urges Minnesota cattle owners to send in their applications for such testing at once.

"Congress has supplied the Bureau of Animal Industry with plenty of funds to conduct this program between now and June 30, 1936, but has made no provision beyond that period," he says. "It behooves cattle owners, therefore, to take full advantage of the aid offered in ridding their herds of Bang's disease while this aid is available.

The revised contract, according to Dr. Fretz, obligates the government to make up to four successive tests, free of charge for the owners of herds in which there is infection, and to pay indemnities on all cattle reacting to such tests and disposed of in accordance with the agreement. The original contract provided for only two such tests and the payment of indemnities on cattle reacting to them. Tests made under the original agreement will count toward the total number of tests provided, Dr. Fretz says.

LAND O'LAKES IN ARTICLE OPPOSES BUYERS' STRIKES

Says Farmers Are Not Getting Rich at Expense of Consumers

The nation's largest co-operative creamery interests last week laid down cold figures and cool logic to refute widespread reports that farmers have reentered an era of prosperity.

In an attempt to prevent further spread of consumer strikes, the Land O'Lakes Creameries' official publication presented the analysis.

A special compilation of the federal department of agriculture was quoted to show American farmers receiving less than half as much for produce as do farmers in England, France, Germany or Italy, while American laborers individually earn twice as much as European workers.

Fear was expressed that newspaper reports and political statements would convince consumers "farmers are getting rich at their expense."

It was pointed out that estimated farm income from 1935 is $6,700,000,000 or $4,400,000,000 less than in 1929.

"With these figures," the article read, "it is hard to see where agriculture has made much advance during this year."

Even a return to the 1929 level the paper noted would not mean prosperity for the farmer, who never, it recalled, recovered from the depression of 1920 and rode precariously throughout the industrial boom years.

FIND RINGS LOST 45 AND 73 YEARS AGO

Jordan.—Elliott Varner has a sixth sense for finding lost rings. Two years ago he found a ring that his mother had lost 73 years before. Last week he found another ring that his mother had lost just 45 years ago. The find two years ago was made when Varner was doing some remodeling on his home. The ring was discovered in the bottom of a window sill, presumably being dropped there before the house was plastered. It was while Varner was putting in a new window that the piece was found. The ring he found last week was a solid gold band about a quarter of an inch wide. He found it while digging a hole out in his yard to transplant some grape vines. He was spading when something shiny attracted his eye. The ring was slightly tarnished after its 45 years, and it had come apart where it was fastened together, but some slight repairs fixed it up as good as ever. The design on the ring is plainly visible.

Farm Bureau Opening Membership Campaign Thruout Minnesota

The annual farm bureau membership drive opened in most Minnesota counties this week with members pledged to try to sign up not less than 20 per cent of the county's farmers. Although the starting date depends on local conditions, most of the county farm bureaus are now set to go. Each county campaign will be carried on under the direction of a county manager, who will spend a day or so in each township, helping local teams of volunteers to get their farm-to-farm canvass under way.

The value of organization has been proved during the past two or three years by the accomplishments of organized farmers. The farm bureau and allied organizations brought about passage of the Agricultural Adjustment act which is increasing farm income. The farm credit act, which reduced interest rates, granted mortgage moratoriums and extended payment over a 30-year period, follows closely the 1932 recommendations of the American Farm Bureau federation. In many ways, within the past three years, farmers have received very directly the fruits of organized effort.

During the next few months the farm bureau will give much of its time to the rural electrification program, in addition to its support of 4-H club and extension work and other community building activities. Local units will continue their AAA activities.

Huge Tree Planting Program Under Way

Approximately four and a half million young forest trees will be planted in Minnesota this fall, according to G. M. Conzet, Director of Forestry. The majority of the trees will be planted on state lands in Beltrami, Itasca, and St. Louis counties. The plantings include 1,680,000 Norway pine, 1,800,000 jack pine, and smaller quantities of white spruce and white pine seedlings.

Reforestation work in Minnesota is being carried on by the Forest Service in cooperation with the federal Emergency Conservation Work program. Seedlings for state use are grown at the Badoura Nursery from cones gathered by CCC enrollees and Forest Service.

SEASON OPEN ON HUNTERS AS SNIPE LODGE CONVENES

International Falls.—The secret, gruesome fraternity of the Seekers of the Mystic Snipe has a new member in Erpie Wold, International Falls. Newly married, Wold was anxious to show his mastery of the family by providing for the table. As a guest of the M. & O. laboratory force, he willingly consented to be a member of the party which later in the evening embarked on a hunt for the elusive animal. With thoughts of the juicy fare soon to await him, he settled himself with open sack and lighted lantern in a gully west of town. Silently slithering through the slippery sloughs, his hosts scurried snipe-like to their car, and returned to town. Wold arrived on foot, sack and lantern in hand, and still hungry, some hours later.

JOB REGULATIONS GIVEN IN DETAIL BY WPA DIRECTOR

Workers Will Not be Barred If They Take Temporary Private Jobs

Two important announcements came from Victor Christgau, state WPA administrator, during the week, the first in which he assured workers that temporary private employment which took them off relief rolls will not prevent them from securing WPA jobs.

He said the status of persons on relief rolls as of May, regardless of whether they have had private employment since or will have in the future, is not changed insofar as the Works Progress administration is concerned.

Mr. Christgau said the regulation regarding new applicants for relief remains unchanged. Relief needs since the May rolls were compiled require that the person must be certified by the county as being eligible for aid 30 days before assignment to a WPA job.

In his second announcement, Mr. Christgau stated that workmen in the employ of the Works Progress administration will be available for hire by private employers at any time.

In answer to inquiries as to the possibility of a shortage of certain kinds of labor when the state-wide program gets fully under way, he said, "the services of any WPA worker are available to private employers merely by placing a request for such services with the National Reemployment service which will negotiate with the WPA for an immediate transfer."

He declared that "WPA was set up to cooperate with private industry by employing men and women only until there are places for them in private industry. We intend to see that those on our rolls are given every opportunity to accept private employment, even if it is only a few days' work."

"It will be to the individual's advantage to accept private work, even if it is only temporary, he explained, because the worker can be reinstated with WPA immediately and without formalities as soon as the private job ends."

Assured of immediate reinstatement, no worker is going to refuse a job with private industry paying the prevailing wage because WPA wages will remain on the lower security basis as defined by the act of Congress," he said.

ROBBED OF CLOTHING LEFT TIED TO TREE

Ortonville.—Minus all clothing but a shirt, Carl Gustafson, young farmer near Ortonville, was found tied to a tree in the state highway park six miles north of Appleton at one o'clock in the afternoon. He had been tied to the trunk early the previous afternoon. Gustafson is now in the Appleton hospital suffering from exposure, mosquito bites and from bruises resulting from trying to free himself. Returning home via the hitch-hiking route from Iowa, Gustafson was picked up outside of Benson by two men, who told him they would take him to Ortonville. Arriving at the Pomme de Terre state park, they drove in, drew guns, forced Gustafson to disrobe, and tied him to a tree. They then took his watch, clothes and money and departed. Gustafson's frantic calls for help went unheeded until almost 24 hours later, when Frank Suckow, residing in the park vicinity was showing some visitors the park development.

NEIGHBORS BUY FOR WOMAN WITH POISONED HERD

Blue Earth.—Neighbors of Mrs. William Thorton, near Blue Earth, presented her with a herd of five milch cows and a purse of money, after news had been received that she had lost 12 head of her cattle from corn stalk poisoning the previous day. Mrs. Thornton's cattle died suddenly on a Friday from the poisoning, and the next day a delegation of neighbors presented her with a new herd and a purse of money to go along with it. The money was solicited from a number of nearby neighbors, with everyone chipping in to partly recompense her for the loss which she felt so keenly.

Garlic differs from most plants in that it makes most of its growth during the cool weather. The old plants die each year and the new generation starts growth during late fall or early winter and in turn produces underground bulbs in early spring.

The leaves of Turkish tobacco are strung one by one like beads (see how it is done in the picture). After the leaves are strung they are packed in bales (see picture) —sometimes as many as 80,000 leaves to the bale.

We have on hand at all times for CHESTERFIELD cigarettes upwards of 350,000 bales of Turkish tobacco . . .

The pleasing aroma and flavor of Turkish tobacco is almost necessary if you want a good cigarette.

Turkish tobacco is more costly when you take into account that you have to pay 35c a pound duty, but we have to have it to blend with our mild ripe home-grown tobaccos.

It helps make Chesterfields milder, it helps give them better taste. Just try them.

Outstanding .. for mildness .. for better taste

WILL SELL STATE TRUST FUND LANDS IN N. W. COUNTIES

No Pennington Co. Tracts Included in Sales This Fall

State trust fund lands in 12 northern Minnesota counties, including Marshall, Kittson and Roseau, will be offered for sale by the division of lands and minerals of the department of conservation, F. R. Wildes, division director, announced. Pennington county lands are not included. The first sale is scheduled in Kittson county on October 7. Sales will continue until the final date which is October 25, in Cass county. Lands will be sold at the court house in each county where lands are included in the sales.

"All lands are sold at auction to the highest bidder but may not be sold for less than the appraised price," Director Wildes said.

"An unusual effort has been made to offer only lands well adapted to agricultural purposes in line with the policy outlined by the Minnesota conservation commission. In several counties, good lists have been prepared.

"Many of the tracts offered are now under cultivation. Some have buildings on them; all are accessible to good roads and markets.

"Some of the best farm lands in the Red river valley are included. Many good tracts in timber districts in northern and northeastern Minnesota will also be sold.

"Lists of lands to be sold can be obtained from the county auditor, in the county in which the land is located, or upon application will be mailed from the office of the Division of Lands and Minerals, St. Paul."

Ten Ducks Per Week May be Returned From Canada, Game Commission Reports

Ten wild ducks legally taken in Canada may be taken back by Minnesota sportsmen hunting across the border in any one calendar week, Erling Swenson, Director of the Minnesota State Division of Game and Fish, announced. Director Swenson said that "considerable confusion" seems to be evident on the part of Minnesota hunters who plan Canadian hunting trips for wild ducks.

"The daily bag limit of 10 wild ducks per day as in store for hunters in this country must be observed in Canadian wild fowl hunting rather than the Canadian daily bag limit," he stated. "This regulation pertains only to wild ducks brought back home to Minnesota in any one calendar week.

"A second hunting trip across into Canada would mean that the hunter would be permitted in any calendar week to bring back wild ducks in number to equal in all ten ducks counting also those he still retained in his possession from the previous hunting expedition."

50,487 Automobiles Are Sold to Date This Year in State; New High Mark

Every tenth family in Minnesota bought a new car during the first eight months of this year, records in St. Paul indicated last week.

About to present the 1936 models, dealers are finding themselves better off financially than for several years with receipts from sales of 50,487 automobiles, compared to 28,205 last year.

They predicted that 1935 will be the biggest year for car sales in the history of the state. Dealers also pointed out that while stocks of used cars almost equal those of last year, less money is tied up in them.

Sales for cash have far outnumbered any recorded for a similar period in previous years, most dealers reported.

The secretary of state's office reported that 599,728 passenger cars have been registered this year, figures on a basis of four and one-half persons to a family, Minnesota has 570,000 families who operate 599,728 passenger automobiles.

Crisscross System of Breeding Hogs Urged by Experiment Station

Having proved in 6 years of investigation that two breeds of hogs are better than one, the Minnesota Agricultural Experiment Station now advises market hog producers to adopt a "crisscross" system of breeding.

Owing to hybrid vigor, crossbred pigs are thriftier and make faster, more economical gains than purebreds, and cross-bred sows are superior mothers, giving their pigs a better start in life than do purebred pigs as feeders has been known for a long time, but the discovery that crossbred sows make better mothers than purebreds completely upsets previous beliefs. For decades, the doctrine has been extant that crossing purebreds was all right, but that the crossbred pigs should not be used for further breeding. Thus, very few farmers tried to raise crossbreds even for market because they felt it would be necessary to buy purebred sows to start over again.

Admitting that swine herds have generally "gone to pot" when farmers have tried continuous crossbreeding, the Minnesota animal breeders say failure to follow an orderly system was to blame. Under such conditions, hogs quickly became mongrels and not true crossbreds. The Minnesota crisscross plan is a definite system, simple but rigid, which not only limits the mixture to two breeds, but also keeps the balance of blood between the two breeds alternating between fairly constant levels. Thus a farmer can go on saving his own sows and following the system indefinitely.

Any farmers wanting to know more about the crisscross breeding system should obtain a copy of Minnesota Bulletin 20, "A Six Years' Study of Cross-breeding Swine," by L. M. Winters, O. M. Kiser, P. S. Jordan and W. H. Peters.

FEDERAL DEBT IS NEAR 30 BILLION, MARK THIS WEEK

Nearly Third of Total Is Added in Past Two and One-Half Years

The government's debt rapidly approached the $30,000,000,000 mark last week, a figure surpassed only by Great Britain and France. The federal debt reached $29,471,781,754. At the present rate of increase, borrowings were expected late this year to cross the 30,000,000,000 line for the first time.

Figures supplied by the treasury department and the department of commerce showed only two debts in history higher than that of the United States. Neither of these are likely ever to be paid in full, as they include billions in defaulted war debts owed the United States.

Shortly after the World war, Great Britain's total debt was $38,143,835,473, since reduced to around $29,000,000,000, France is estimated to owe slightly more than $30,000,000,000 at the present time.

The nearest approach to these huge obligations of the United States, Great Britain and France, was the reparations bill of 132,000,000,000 marks presented to Germany after the war. This bill in American dollars was estimated at more than $30,000,000,000. But it was not recognized by Germany.

Nearly a third of the huge $29,471,781,754 present federal debt has been piled up by the Roosevelt administration which has been in office only two and a half years. Huge relief costs and use of billions of dollars for lending agencies necessitated the heavy borrowings.

Included in a list of contracts, aggregating $2,261,588, awarded last week by the state highway department in St. Paul, were a paving project on Highway 59 and a grading job on Highway 11. The paving contract, covering 11.2 miles from Ogema to a point two miles south of Calloway, was awarded to Nelson, Mullen and Webster of Minneapolis on their bid of $340,223. The contract for seven-tenths of a mile of grading and excavation in connection with a bridge project at Pelan was awarded to M. E. Souther, Inc., of St. Paul, on a bid of $20,572.

SEVEN APPLES GROW ON SINGLE STEM

Mankato—Seven apples on a single stem, with one of the fruit more than three inches in diameter, each perfectly formed and ripe, was some sort of record set by Peter Hornness, North Mankato. They are of the Wealthy variety. Hornness brought the apples into the Free Press office, where the artist sketched them for a picture in the paper. The cluster measures about ten inches in length, with the apples all very closely growing together, though separately formed.

Fall of Meteors

Despite the estimate that 25,000 tons of meteors fall on the earth's surface annually, it would require some 20,000,000,000 years at this rate for meteor "rains" to increase the radius of the earth as much as an inch, according to Dr. C. C. Wylie of the University of Iowa.

PROWLERS LOSE SECOND STRAIGHT FOOTBALL GAME

East Grand Forks Hands Prowlers 20-7 Defeat Monday Night

The Prowlers lost their second game of the season Monday night to East Grand Fork's Little Green Wave. The Prowlers did not play up to the standard they set at Grafton. A great deal of the tackling was done by the backs after the line had been outcharged, and the big hard-charging, red-headed fullback Kimblin had torn it to shreds.

After the kickoff and an exchange of punts the Prowlers got the ball on their own forty-yard line and on a run by Hill went up to the Wave's 30. Here they lost the ball after two line plunges were stoped offside. A penalty was inflicted. After taking M. Nesse's kick on their own 20 yard line the East Siders marched right up the field on line bucks and finally scored on a pass to Peterson. Peterson caught the ball while surrounded by three Thief River players with a long diving catch. Near the end of the half Kimblin, after charging over left guard, got away for 50 yards. East Side then completed two passes but the half ended with the score 7 to 0.

Shortly after the second half started the Waves opened another drive from their own 20 yard line and after another series of line plunges, they went around right end for 20 yards and a touchdown.

The Prowlers scored when Art Nelson blocked and recovered a Wave punt, and Hill made the score after two line bucks had failed. Adkins added the extra point. After another drive, this time a shorter one, Kimblin went over to score the East Side's final touchdown.

Outstanding among East Grand Forks' husky team was "Butch" Kimblin while for the Prowlers Mickleson, M. Nesse, and Lorentson played good ball.

CHEER LEADERS CHOSEN FRIDAY

Wessling, Lee, and Engen Are Elected at Pep Fest

The big news that all Lincoln High School has been wondering and speculating about is ready to be given out.

For the past few weeks the "Progress" has been sponsoring the contest to get more and better cheer leaders and succeeded in getting sixteen ambitious students to try out. This number being entirely too large, preliminary tryouts were given Thursday, Sept. 26, after school. Seven of the best were chosen by Miss Helquist, Miss Lunder and Mr. Hauge. The following seven were chosen: Elizabeth Dahlen, Lois Engen, Harriet Simonson, Oscar Bickley, Marjorie Matheson, Robert Wessling, and Edna Lee.

On Friday morning the usual pep fest for the East Grand Fork's game was held in the assembly. Marjorie Matheson, cheer leader contest editor, acted as mistress of ceremonies. The band made its initial appearance. Directed by Mr. Orwoll, the band played the school song and "Steppin Out". Each of the prospective cheer leaders then led two yells. The student body enthusiastically received all of them.

Using the ballots distributed previously by the "Progress" staff the student body then voted and these ballots were counted and tabulated by the Staff.

The dark mystery which has surrounded those chosen is now exposed. The student body voted for a boy rooter king and two girl assistants. Robert Wessling was chosen Rooter King with 312 votes, Edna Lee, with 301 votes, and Lois Engen with 225 votes, were chosen as assistants. These will comprise our year's cheer leaders. Elizabeth Dahlen and Oscar Bickley were runners-up.

The "Progress" staff wishes to thank the student body for the cooperation they have shown, for a great measure of the success is due to them.

New Teacher Graduate of Gustavus Adolphus College

The Board of Education has appointed Mr. Kyle Montague of Willmar, to fill the position vacated by the resignation of Mr. G. S. Hauge as instructor of English IV, coach of debate, and "Progress" staff advisor.

Mr. Montague was graduated from Gustavus Adolphus. He was a member of the college debate squad and was on the team that won the National Championship held in Lexington, Kentucky, in 1934 in which 120 colleges and universities competed. Mr. Montague was also a finalist in the National Extemporaneous Speaking Contest held in Tulsa, Oklahoma in 1932, with 78 speakers competing.

Mr. Montague taught in the high school at Wakefield Nebraska prior to coming here.

Mr. Hauge has accepted a position at Concordia College where he will be Assistant Dean of Men, coach of oratory and debate, and director of college publicity.

The "Progress" staff joins Lincoln High School in wishing both Mr. Hauge and Mr. Montague success in their new positions.

MAKING THE ROUNDS

The English I classes are doing composition work and will continue to do so for about a week.

The English II classes are studying short stories and will soon finish that unit.

SHOP NEWS

Thirty-two feet of concrete sidewalk have been completed between the Washington and Lincoln schools. The seventh graders are responsible for the construction of this sidewalk. We also have some young artists in Lincoln High, who have been doing a wonderful job on marking up this sidewalk. They had better find the next fast freight that is leaving town and jump on. (All this information received direct from Mr. Johnson, supervisor of the sidewalk.)

The Shop I students are receiving the drawing desks. An intensive study of electric current and current flow is being taught to the Shop II boys.

FUTURE

Consulting the "Old Man with the Whiskers," the Patron Saint of so few, we find that he defines future as having "reference to prospective state or condition, and with a favorable implication."

Lincoln High has a future of the very best description! Five hundred and fifty students can't be wrong! The school year at hand seems to be very successful. Of course, it is not without its dark moments! Our football team has suffered two defeats, losing the two hardest games of the schedule. One was lost to bad breaks; the other, to a power-house.

Stepping slightly into the future; that is, to next fall, we have another good football team coming up. These boys have had a taste of night football. They like it! The many students who saw last Monday's game enjoyed it.

We believe that Lincoln High School should have a lighted gridiron!

Did you notice the wind Monday afternoon? It would have led to a very erratic game. But by 8:00 o'clock the wind had subsided and playing conditions were perfect.

Thief River Falls should boost a playing field with lights!

Usually when we play Bemidji, the last game of the season, the Northland is sending down its first wintry blasts. But about six o'clock (after the game is over) they have let up.

It will be the purpose of the "Progress" to work toward lights for our football field! We will try to present both sides of the case through members of the faculty and school board.

Night football for Thief River Falls!

It has been the custom for several years for the seniors to stage a masquerade for the juniors. This year the date is set for November 15, thus starting the school social program earlier than usual.

All of the attending students will be charged twenty-five cents. This will take care of the expense connected with the orchestra. By the arrangement little, if any, class funds will be used.

Plans are under way at the present time for the orchestra and the ball.

Lincoln High Times

Well, that green color around high school which has made upper classmen wonder if they weren't in good old Ireland is finally beginning to wear off. (Don't worry, they'll learn, for remember when we were freshmen? Impossible!) Keen rooter king that Robert Wessling, eh what? Haven't had such a reception for a cheer leader since Paul Furuseth. Remember? High school lost one swell guy in Mr. Hauge. Good luck at your new school, you deserve the best. Band showed many new faces at the pep fest. Sounded swell, didn't it? Chorus is also large this year. Another timely note is there's only 7[illegible] days 'til Thanksgiving, 108 days 'til Christmas vacation, and only 2[illegible] days 'til school's out. Something to look forward to, huh? And Lincoln High School, not outdone by Atlantic City etc., has a Venus. Who? June Wilson. Makes a keen one, doesn't she? By the by, in our midst this week we have a new English teacher, debate coach and staff advisor. Let's everybody give Mr. Montague a big welcome!

The Hall of Fame

The Hall of Fame was the conception of Dr. Henry Mitchell MacCracken, then chancellor of the New York university, the council of which, on March 5, 1900, accepted a gift of $100,000, afterward increased to $250,000, from Mrs. F. J. Shepard (Helen Gould) for the erection and completion on University Heights New York city, of a building to be called "The Hall of Fame for Great Americans."

PROWLER SECOND SQUAD LOSE TO CENTRAL HIGH

Cathedral High School Wins Fast Game With Prowler Seconds

Last Thursday night the Prowler second team motored to Crookston where they engaged in a football game with the Cathedral High School football eleven.

Although football is comparatively new to Cathedral, they sent a team on the field that had shifts to each side of the line that worked to perfection on almost every play. This seemed to confuse the locals a little in the first half, but they came out of the fog a little in the second half.

The opponents made twelve of their eighteen points in the first half of the game. The first score was made on end runs and plunges, and the second when they intercepted a pass on their own thirty-yard line and ran seventy yards for six points. The remaining six points were made on the last play of the game, when they skirted left end.

All of Cathedral's large gains were made on end runs. They could not make yardage through the line, and they also failed on all extra points after touchdowns.

Most of the injuries were on the Crookston side of the line. Four boys were taken out of the game from their side while only one was taken from the locals.

The score at the final gun was 18-0 with Cathedral on top.

Miss Dahlen's eighth grade Home Economic classes are just about ready to start their sewing projects.

HEFTY ENOUGH

"What made them give up that trip to California?"

"His wife happened to hear some one say that travel broadened one."

GYM GEMS

Who will our "Lincolnite Goddess" be? She will be and is June Wilson. She is a junior, is 5 feet, 3 inches tall, and weighs 109 pounds. She has perfect posture!

Second came Marjorie Lane, sophomore; and third, Helen Anderson, junior.

How was "Venus" chosen? After taking posture tests, Miss Helquist had the girls that rated B plus or above posture grades march across the gym. Three girls from each class were chosen in this manner. Then on the following days, the classes observed each girl's posture. The next week the girls chose one out of the three for each class. These girls were observed by all the gym classes. On Friday of last week the final voting was held by means of balloting.

"Venus de Milo" was the girl with perfect posture. June has it. Congratulations, June!

Boys Make Clean Sweep in Frosh, Sophomore Elections

The first sophomore class meeting of the year was held in the rear of the assembly last Tuesday, Sept. 24.

The meeting was called together by Gordon Hulte, the president of the last year's freshman class. Election of the officers for the class was then held. Those elected are Milfred Haughom, president; Wallee Tunberg, vice-president; Pomeroy Hill, secretary; and Robert Hanson, treasurer. The advisors are Mr. Orwoll and Mr. Chalmers. The election of Pomeroy Hill proves than it is possible for new students to hold office. It is rather unusual to have boys hold all four offices.

The freshmen held their first class meeting in the rear of the assembly last Wednesday. Mr. Claffy, who conducted the meeting gave the freshmen a few pointers on how to behave in high school and some rules they are supposed to obey. He also congratulated them on being ahead of all the other classes in buying football and assembly tickets. Those elected as officers for the freshman class this year are Fred Kavanaugh, president; Milton Poppenhagen, vice-president; Clifford Lunkee, secretary; and Richard Korstad, treasurer. The advisors are Miss Olson, Coach Lee, and Mrs. Korstad.

The English III classes have been giving oral speeches.

Reverend Jacobson Speaks to Students in Assembly

On Friday, September 27, the Lincoln High School students listened to an address by Rev. Jacobson in honor of Frances Willard, the well-known temperance reformer. This program was sponsored by the W. C. T. U.

Frances Willard was born September 28, 1839, in Churchville, New York. He attended and was graduated from Northwestern Woman's College at Evanston, Ill. Miss Willard was brave, modest, winsome, good, gentle, and dainty.

At the age of nineteen she became converted Rev. Jacobson stated, and from that time on she became very interested in temperance work. In 1874 she organized the W. C. T. U. In 1899 she became President and held this office until she died. Miss Frances E. Willard was elected to the Hall of Fame in 1910.

Rev. Jacobsen said if we wished to be like her we should read the Bible and give our lives to God.

VOCAL GROUPS ARE REHEARSING

All Members of Small Groups Are Not Chosen

Miss Sprigen has not, as yet, completed the selection of members for all of the small vocal groups. However, certain groups are rehearsing, weekly, the following selections:

The boys' double quartette, which will appear October 17 and 18 for the Northern Minnesota Teachers' Convention at the municipal auditorium, has practically memorized "There is a Tavern in the Town," a college song; "La Cucarach," a Mexican folk song; and "Drink to Me Only With Thine Eyes," an old English air.

The junior and senior girls' small group is working on a sixteenth century madrigal, "Down in a Flowery Vale," and "Come Love of Mine" by Nadsen.

The sophomore girls' small vocal group is rehearsing "Bonnie Doon," an old Scotch folk song, and Hayden's "My Mother Bids Me Bind My Hair."

The Personnel of all of the various smaller vocal groups will be announced as soon as the selection of members is completed.

Constant Watching for Rabies is Advised in Early Months of Fall

Late summer and early fall months are especially likely to see epidemics of rabies among dogs. This fact prompts the public health education committee of the Minnesota State Medical association to outline briefly in today's bulletin the procedure that should be followed in every case where a dog has bitten a human being.

There are several excellent reasons, according to the doctors why everybody keep cool in handling the dog.

If the dog is immediately killed, a valuable though temporarily excited animal that is really free from disease may be destroyed unnecessarily. Furthermore, it will be impossible to watch the dog for symptoms of rabies.

In every case, therefore, the safe procedure is to deliver the dog immediately to the health authorities. If the dog is apparently healthy and the attack was probably accidental the dog will be returned to the owner after inspection by the veterinarian and then re-inspected seven days later.

Infective material is not usually found until three or four days before the dog actually becomes rabid. But suspected dogs are examined every day and as soon as microscopic evidence of rabies appears in the saliva the Pasteur treatment is begun on the person who was bitten. In case where the bite is on the face or neck where many nerves and the proximity to the brain make the bites particularly dangerous, the treatment should be started right away even without microscopic evidence of disease in the dog.

In cases where the dog escapes, the treatment should be given anyway, particularly if the bite is a vicious one, just to be on the safe side.

Treatment consists, usually, of injections given one each day. To be of any use they must be given before symptoms of the disease appear.

Dear Editor:

The petition for an election to legalize the sale of hard liquor within our county has no doubt come as a great disappointment to many of our people. Some of us had been hoping that the legalising of the sale of beer would have been sufficient to satisfy those who crave a drink with alcoholic content without asking for anything stronger. We were also told by those who worked for the repeal of the 18th Amendment that there was no desire to seek the return of hard liquor. We see now that those promises were not meant to be taken seriously. If the election before us, costing our county hundreds if not thousands of dollars, will serve no other useful purpose, it will at least have made clear to everyone the insincerity of much of this talk prior to the repeal of the 18th Amendment.

What will be some of the possible advantages to our county from legalizing the sale of hard liquor? This is a question which should receive sober consideration by all our citizens before voting on this matter. The undersigned does not pretend to know all the reasons advanced by those who favor such action. However, the chief arguments are pretty well known. They may conveniently be grouped under three main heads, namely, Convenience, Control and Revenue. Let us look at each of them briefly.

There evidently are some persons within our county who feel that an occasional drink of hard liquor is necessary to their happiness and well-being. They object to the expense and inconvenience of having to drive outside of their county to secure their supply of liquor and may be equally opposed to having to make their purchases from bootleggers. They want to have the privilege of buying their liquor near at home where they buy their other necessities.

Not much need be said on this point. We may recognize and to a certain extent even respect the desire of such persons to have the source of their liquor supply convenient and near at hand, but the mere convenience of these persons cannot be given a great deal of weight in considering this important question.

A much weightier argument is that of wishing to have the sale of hard liquor legalized in order to have its sale under control. Hard liquor is being dispensed in large quantities within our county right now, they tell us, and there is no control of it whatsoever. Why not have the sale of it legalized so as to have it under control and put a stop to all this bootlegging? This is not a new argument in favor of permitting the sale of liquor. It was repeated over and over again in the days before the repeal of the 18th Amendment. Evidently the predictions made then that the legalising of the sale of beer would do away with the bootlegger have not been fulfilled. Is there any reason to believe illegal sale of hard liquor would be done away with now if the sale of it were legalized? It is a matter or record that during the days prior to National Prohibition, saloonkeepers protested to city councils that bootleggers were robbing them of their profits. Does it not seem more reasonable that removing of restraint from the sale of liquor will tend to complicate the matter of control rather than to simplify it?

The chief argument advanced in favor of legalizing the sale of hard liquor is no doubt the possibility of revenue. There is some basis for this claim. The sale of liquor soon runs into money. It would be a fruitful source of income to individuals, if handled through the granting of license to individuals, and to municipalities, if publicly owned and operated. It is possible that it would slightly reduce taxes at a time when our people have become tax-conscious. Why permit this fruitful source of income to go to other cities and counties when we might enjoy the benefits of it right here at home?

Space will not permit the discussion of this argument that it would deserve. However, to those who are inclined to give much weight to such reasoning we would like to submit the following facts for your consideration: The fruits from a legalized sale of hard liquor will not be only profit. There will be a number of other fruits which are not so pleasant to contemplate. There will, in the first place, be the necessity of enlarged machinery of enforcement, requiring additional expense; there will, in the next place, be the turning away of money from useful channels of trade into the wastefulness of liquor consumption, since a dollar spent for liquor invariably means a dollar less spent for food, clothing, education of children, etc.; then there is, finally, the inescapable fruit of a larger number of persons becoming liquor addicts and being robbed of house and home and thus increasing the number of persons dependent upon charity for their livelihood. While a few individuals would line their pockets from liquor sales, others would be reduced to starvation and want. In this way the added revenue from liquor would to a very large extent be eliminated. Even if it should be found that there would be a net balance in favor of the legalized sale of liquor, are we willing to surrender our weaker citizens and our growing children to the temptations and ravages of King Alcohol merely to satisfy the greed of a few individuals—for money or in the hope of attaining a slight reduction in our taxes? No more than increased consumption of liquor can be of material benefit to an individual can it be of benefit to a county or community when taken as a whole. And, surely, we do not want to consider this matter from any other point of view than the welfare of all.

Many other reasons could be advanced why every public-spirited citizen should hesitate to yield to the liquor interests in this effort, but this will have to be sufficient for the public press.

Let all who have the true welfare of our community at heart consider these matters soberly and do their duty as public-spirited citizens in the coming election in this matter. Read the ballot carefully. Unfortunately the ballot is worded in such a way that those who are opposed to the legalized sale of hard liquor will have to vote "Yes" instead of "No" in the coming election. Care will have to be taken to avoid a mistake.

We feel confident the voters of Pennington County who have a fine record of temperance legislation in the past will not fail to register a convincing vote for sobriety in the coming election, Monday, October the 14th.

On behalf of the Pennington County Dry League,
R. M. Fjelstad, Vice-President.

Thief River Falls, Minn.
September 30, 1935

Editor:

With the Special Election set for October 14th to determine whether the sale of intoxicating liquors shall be permitted in Pennington County many farmers with whom I have talked would like to have certain questions answered by someone thru the Press before that date. Some questions follow. If the wets win this election will the city of Thief River Falls and the villages of St. Hilaire and Goodridge be permitted to establish Municipal Liquor Stores? Can the county establish one Liquor store and monopolize the trade in the county with the net revenues going to reduce taxes over the entire county both city and country? If the county has that right, would the present County Board take such steps?

Many farmers feel that the country Districts will furnish their share of the revenues derived from any Liquor Store and don't feel that the city and villages should be given an opportunity to levy an indirect tax on the country to carry on their municipal affairs.

Yours,
Alfred Longren

In a recent address, Governor Olson ridiculed press statements that he had broken with President Roosevelt because he saw fit to criticize some of the New Deal policies. Said Governor Olson: "As an individual, I reserve the right to disagree with any New Deal policy in which I do not believe.

Certain phases of the New Deal program, especially those dealing with taxation and social security, I heartily approve. But when some of our economic problems are attempted to be solved through an economy of scarcity, I will be among the dissenters. I criticised the economy of scarcity program of the Department of Agriculture from its very inception, and I shall continue to criticize any economy based on scarcity rather than abundance."

State income tax collections this year (for the calendar year 1934) are expected to reach $3,000,000. If this predicted total is attained it will be larger by 20 per cent than the gross collections in 1934 for the calendar year 1933.

Strengthening of the Minnesota drivers' license law was urged in several resolutions adopted at the recent Northwest Traffic Safety conference held in St. Paul. It seemed the almost unanimous feeling of delegates to the conference that the licensing of drivers is one of the best means of controlling the reckless and irresponsible motorist for the protection of the public.

Start Now to Prepare for Farm Windbreak, Says U Farm Forester

Good windbreaks afford wonderful farmstead protection, says Parker O. Anderson, extension forester, University Farm, St. Paul. By using trees to break the force of the wind, farmers protect their crops, homes and livestock, check the drifting surface soil, materially reduce dust storms, and decrease the evaporation of soil moisture.

For the greatest protection against storm winds, windbreaks should be planted squarely across the path of such winds, which, in Minnesota means along the north and west sides of the farmstead. An area 132 feet wide, and running 400 feet on the north and 400 feet on the west will give the best results for the average farmstead. When possible the area to be planted should be prepared one year ahead of time. Spring plowing and summer working of the land the year before planting will prevent weeds and grass and will build up a sufficient supply of soil moisture. If a cultivated crop such as corn or potatoes is planted, the windbreak may be put in the following fall or spring.

Species of the poplar or willow family are desirable in parts of the windbreak and grow very rapidly. Cuttings may be made this fall and planted in the garden to form roots, and transplanted into the shelter area in the spring. No cash outlay is necessary. Such trees as elm, ash, hackberry, and maple, are long-lived and will give permanent results.

It is well to remember that windbreaks cannot be completed in a year, but may take as long as 10 years, depending upon individual circumstances.

Stocker, Feeder Cattle Purchases on Increase

The widespread demand for stocker and feeder cattle this season is manifested in the large number of cattle that have been shipped from the leading livestock markets to country points, says the market bulletin issued by the Central Co-operative Association at So. St. Paul. During the month of August more stocker and feeder cattle and calves were purchased to go to corn belt feed lots and pastures than for any previous August in over six years.

Factors contributing to this active buying of this stock include the generally increased amount of hay and feed on farms this year and the fact that cattle fed last winter have made better returns to the feeder than for several years. Also money is easier, and prospective feeders can get credit without much delay.

During August 245,519, stocker and feeder cattle and calves were shipped from fourteen of the large markets of the country. The total was the largest for August in over six years.

First Baseball "Diamond"

Open Letters From the Women

Referring to the "Open Letter" recently displayed in the advertisement of a certain liquor corporation, inviting the mothers and daughters of America to drink whisky, and the rebuke promptly administered by the FACA director, the Christian Science Monitor reminds the readers of that paper that:

"The saloon in the United States has always had its back door. So the beer barons, artfully sidestepping, do not, at the moment, specifically invite feminine drinkers—and non-drinkers — to drain the beer mug. In place of the 'Open Letter' the power of example is employed. Pictorially graceful young women reclining in hammocks in country gardens find sultriness magically dispelled by tall glasses of somebody's famous beer. Girls radiantly emerging from a cool dip ecstatically declare that there's nothing like a glass of foaming beer to top off a swim.

"Millions of decent-minded persons frankly deplore the unscrupulous commercial greed back of this demoralizing booze campaign," asserts the Monitor editor, and then he suggests "Open Letters" from the women of America as a most appropriate answer to the dastardly attempt to entrap the womanhood of the race.

"'Open Letters,' for instance, to legislators demanding their support, say, for the Capper bill, which would prohibit altogether interstate transmission of all advertising of any alcoholic beverage by newspapers, radio, or any other means."

In conclusion he insists: "The issue is largely in the hands of the Women of America. We believe that seeing this, they will meet it."

If Congress is still in session, such a letter to each legislator from the women of his state should be sent immediately. But even if Congress has adjourned, it is not too late to organize the sentiment which is being everywhere aroused against such advertising, and none too early to begin to see that this sentiment makes itself felt early in the next session.

A text for our day: The love of money is a root of all evil.

Do Christians need to face this fact today more than in other days?

They do.

Although we spend billions to keep people alive (with a weather eye on elections,) this is a time of cold-blooded and conscienceless grasping after money and the power it holds. A time of hard money-getting and soft principles—soft to the stage of decay.

Our reading tables shriek forth the claimant demands which once-scrupulous periodicals print, asking our patronage for liquor, cigarets, cosmetics, and the rest; much of the urging is based on faked and deceptive claims—for revenue.

We are urged by public men, from the President down, to support in affluence that perpetual Public Enemy No. 1, the liquor trade—for revenue.

RAKING CITY DUMP MAKES GOOD LIVING FOR SEEKERS

Winona.—Salvaging in a city dump yard may sound like poor pickings, but Winonans do it every day, summer and winter, and think it worth while, according to L. K. Dudley, caretaker of the Winona city dump. Five or six men, and often a woman, rummage through the rubbish. The salvagers hunt mostly for metal and rubber which can be sold to junk dealers, but occasionally a real find is made. Three years ago, a hysterical woman arrived at the dump with her father-in-law and other relatives and recovered a diamond and platinum ring, valued at $600, which she had left in the toe of a bedroom slipper hauled away as rubbish from her home. Her joy, however, was not equal to that of a youth who found a $5 bill recently. Down on his luck, the bill gave him a new lease on life.

Tests for Tuberculosis Held Common Knowledge Among Pupils in Schools

That practically every school child in Minnesota has been informed about the value of the tuberculin test and X-ray in the early discovery of tuberculosis and has been given information on how to protect himself from the disease is pointed out in an article in the current issue of EVERYBODY'S HEALTH, Christmas Seal magazine published by the Minnesota Public Health association.

The article takes issue with statements made in a recent issue of a popular magazine by a young editor and author, himself a victim of tuberculosis, who declares that he had had the disease for years without knowing it and even after symptoms appeared it took him another year to find out what was wrong. By that time his case had so far advanced he had to spend years regaining his health.

"Fortunately", Everybody's Health states, "there are not many people in Minnesota who need to find themselves in the plight of this young man. Practically every school child in the state knows about the methods for early discovery of the disease, the Mantoux test to find if the germs have entered the body and the X-ray to tell if they are active."

Rubber

The sap of the rubber tree, known as latex, looks like rubber, suspended in the form of microscopic particles, much as is the butterfat in cream. Like milk, the latex will spoil on standing and so must be worked into rubber as soon as possible. This process is no longer carried out by the tedious method of evaporating the latex over a smoky fire. Instead, acetic acid is added to the latex, throwing out the rubber as a white, sticky clot. The rubber is then pressed into slabs and dried and is ready for shipment to the manufacturer. —Chicago Tribune.

LARGE CROWD AT NINTH DISTRICT G. O. P. MEETING

Many From This City Attend Outing Held Sunday Near Pelican Rapids

Calling President Roosevelt a "modern Houdini," Representative Dewey Short of Galena, Mo., lashed administration tactics as "socialistic regimentation" before a crowd of 5,000 at the ninth congressional district Republican rally Sunday at Dunvilla lodge, north of Pelican Rapids. A large delegation was present from Thief River Falls.

"Thomas Jefferson founded the Democratic party, and Franklin Roosevelt dumfounded it," Short, a central figure at the Springfield "grass roots" convention, shouted. The crowd roared its approval.

The Missouri congressman said 20,000,000 persons were on relief rolls and warned "Santa Claus will turn Shylock."

"They keep two budgets," Short asserted, "an ordinary and an extraordinary—and neither of them are balanced. The Democrats are giving away all of your money."

Martin Nelson, Republican gubernatorial nominee at the last election, said the "supposedly inert Republican corpse is very much alive." He spoke optimistically of the party's future in Minnesota.

Representative Roy E. Dunn, chairman of the house rules committee, presided and introduced party notables. Among them were Mike Holm, secretary of state; George Frankberg, of Fergus Falls, vice chairman of the party's state central committee and Congressman Harold Knutson, Wadena.

Authors of Books in Library to Speak Here

The novels of Lloyd Douglas, always popular, are becoming even more so at the present time. Mr. Douglas will be one of the speakers at the Northern Division of the Minnesota Educational Association meeting here next month. The library has the following books written by Mr. Douglas: "Magnificent Obsession", "Forgive us our Trespasses", and "Green Light." Arthur Kallet, author of "Counterfeit" and co-author with F. J. Schlink of "100,000,000 Guinea Pigs" will also address the convention. These books are being read constantly.

ACQUIRES HOMESTEAD

Tharald Tharaldson of Erie last Friday proved up on an 80-acre homestead in Section 23, Star township, in the office of Adolf Eklund, clerk of court.

Highway Department Urges Beautification of Roadside Property

Recognizing the growing interest in roadside beautification in Minnesota, the state highway department is offering the services of its roadside development division to civic groups and individuals interested in improving the appearance of property fronting on trunk highways, according to a department bulletin.

"Experts in the department will be glad to offer suggestions for the screening or elimination of eyesores along the highways, or for other types of beautification," N. W. Elsberg, highway commissioner, announced.

"As a great tourist state, Minnesota wishes to make the best possible impression on visitors. Our natural scenic advantages are great, but often an otherwise beautiful bit of country is spoiled by some man-made eyesore which could easily be blotted out at little or no cost by proper plantings. The highway department itself has, of course, been an offender against beauty, but it is now erasing construction scars and is giving serious attention to the preservation of natural attractions. Private individuals and groups can be of great assistance in this effort to make our highways avenues of beauty as well as utility.

"Country school houses, farmsteads and village or city residential properties facing on the highway lend themselves particularly well to beautification by individual or co-operative effort."

Parent-Teacher Conference Will be Held at Warroad

A number of parents from this vicinity have been invited to attend the Moorhead State Teachers College celebration of Dad's and Mother's Day, to be held on the M. S. T. C. campus Saturday, October 12. According to Dr. C. P. CAR DROPS OVER 7 FOOT EMBANKMENT—NO DAMAGE

Belle Plaine.—Cars occasionally get cracked up from trivial causes, but one went over a seven or eight foot embankment at Belle Plaine without a scratch. The vehicle a pick-up truck, had been left in gear in the rear of a lot. A five year old child got in, pressed the starter, and it was off for a zig-zag ride through the orchard. The frightened child jumped out as the truck headed for the street. The truck nose-dived over an embankment and landed on all fours. The driver hurried out, got in the car and it drove away without a single mark on it to show the run-away.

DISASTROUS FIRES LAST WEEK IN TWO NEARBY VILLAGES

Heavy Losses Result From Blazes in Lancaster and Mentor

A disastrous blaze wiped out a large portion of the Lancaster business section Saturday, high winds carrying the burning embers from building to building.

The fire, starting in an oil shed in the rear of a hardware store, raced through that building and spread to an implement company, the postoffice and the Murray hotel.

Lancaster firemen and a crew summoned from Hallock battled for hours to subdue the spreading blaze, but dawn found the main street of the northern Minnesota town a mass of charred embers. No one was injured.

Fire broke out in the Joe LaCombe Garage at Mentor last Wednesday night, it being too late to save anything in the building which was of tile construction. All the tools, materials, oils, tires, and accessories including eight cars which were there for storage are a total loss. The fire spread to the adjoining buildings, and the Oen building on the north and the Thorlen building on the south side are a total loss although some of the contents were saved. The loss was estimated at more than $10,000.

SKUNK HIDES IN STORE, SHOPPERS ARE ROUTED

Rochester.—An animal of the weasel family—Mr. Skunk to you—met its Waterloo in the basement of a Rochester store last week when Rex Robinson, game warden, shot it. Mr. Skunk announced his odorous presence to many passersby and shoppers in the vicinity. Employees of the store could see the animal in the basement for several days, altho identification was uncertain. It is believed the skunk entered thru the grating leading to the basement of the store from the alley. The animal finally took offense at efforts to disturb him, and it was necessary for clerks in one or two nearby stores to take rapid defense measures with perfume atomizers.

COLLECT MUCH SEED AT CASS LAKE

Nearly 17,000 bushels of tree seed were produced from the extractory at Cass Lake from cones collected during the fall of 1934. The extractory has been running day and night. The species consist mainly of Norway, white and jack pine, white and black spruce, and hemlock. The plant has been cleaned up, the machinery put in proper shape, and the Chippewa crews are now starting on the extraction of 12,000 bushels of jack pine.

Red River Valley History

By Wm V. Working

The Riel Rebellion

This year marks the golden jubilee of a war in which Canada and the United States were involved, although not as enemies. The war was the Riel rebellion, or rather the second Riel rebellion, the first having occurred in 1869-70. In the story of this conflict we note the impact of a rough civilization on the hybrid society of the frontier mixed bloods. These mixed bloods were chiefly of Cree, Chippewa, Canadian-French and British strains.

The story of the Riel rebellions is pertinent because its results influenced to some extent developments in this region and also for the reason that the sinister forces that were factors in the conflict were felt here.

The first chapter was written at the time of the first gestures toward transfer of Prince Rupert's Land, embracing roughly the area in Canada between the province of Ontario and British Columbia, from the confederation. The official steps for the change were taken in 1869, but before the Canadian parliament had acted, the first rumblings of the rebellion were heard.

In the period of 200 years (since 1670) that the Hudson's Bay company had reigned over Prince Rupert's Land a new race had sprung up. This was a race of mixed bloods, in whose veins the blood of white men, chiefly French trappers and voyageurs mingled with that of the coppery hued Crees and Chippewas. The French-Canadians had migrated from Quebec principally to the Red river valley country in Manitoba. Reared in the wooded districts of the province of Quebec, they were well adapted to the rigorous frontier life. They mated extensively with the women of the Cree and Chippewa camps and their children were known as Metis.

These Metis soon became numerous in the valley and to a large extent transplanted customs of their male forbears, although these customs were adulterated and vitiated by the influence of Indian life. These major activities were centered about trapping, hunting and service to the Hudson's Bay and other fur companies.

They had been permitted to settle on small tracts during the reign of the Hudson's Bay company and had lived for many decades in comparative peace. The company ruled with a firm hand, maintained its own justice courts, coined its own money and, in short, governed its domain with little interference on the part of the British government. But when the transfer of control was arranged, the Metis did not welcome the new state of affairs. In the first place, surveyors who were by no means diplomats aroused the enmity of the Metis by ruthlessly running their lines through their farm tracts regardless of their "squatters' rights" and previously recognized boundary lines. The change of administration, too, connoted radical changes in the government of the region. It meant that the country would be opened to settlement and that the whites soon would be dominant and would introduce the restrictions and regulations of civilization.

The Metis grumbled and sought to block the change. A leader was needed and he appeared. This leader, the "Messiah of the Metis" was Louis Reil, who first stalks across the pages of history in the early part of 1869. Riel, whose gloomy mein and oblique ideas were to become familiar, was the son of a French-Canadian and a mixed blood woman. He lived at St. Vital, not far from Winnipeg, where his father operated a mill. The father had been something of a community leader and the son early gave promise of marked ability. He was sent to school in the east to study for the priesthood, returning instead to the Red river valley, where his nervous temperment and brooding eyes gave hint of his exotic nature and set him apart from his fellows.

Riel was a radical by nature. He is said to have been insane and was for a time confined in an asylum, and yet he was brilliant in many ways and even possessed a spark of genius, in the opinion of some historians. The surveyors had gained little headway in their work in the valley when the Metis rallied under Riel and halted operations. Barricades were set up at Scratching River in the valley some distance north of the border and surveyors, Dominion government officials and others were ordered back across the line. While the discomforted whites chafed at the border, more portentous developments were taking place at Winnipeg. Most of the handful of whites there, were imprisoned by Riel, some being placed in the Fort Garry stockade. One of those whose liberty was restricted by Riel was Dr. John Shultz, later lieut.-governor of Manitoba. (Continued next week.)

ONE LOOK AT THESE PHENOMENAL FOUR AND YOU'LL SAY

"BUICK'S THE BUY!"

TWO years ago Buick deliberately leveled its sights on 1936.

It coolly set its aim on bringing to market for that year a line of motor cars that would startle the world.

It purposed to do that, not by freak or superficial design, not by skimping quality to make a price, but by sheer merit as expressed in automobile beauty, value, ability.

It submits to you now the eminently satisfying results of that fruitful two years of concentrated endeavor.

Here are four separate series of sensational new Buick cars — cars called phenomenal by experts in the trade who previewed them.

Each is a feast to the eye schooled in mature modern styling, as you can see.

Each has under the smooth flowing planes and surfaces of its smart exterior, the solid, tough, durable, beautifully engineered chassis that underwrites Buick dependability.

And each offers you from the stepped-up power of its big thrifty valve-in-head eight-cylinder engine such safe, thrilling performance as you have never known.

These cars are big cars every one — built to almost lavish dimensions of body room and head clearance — yet they handle with the fingertip lightness of small cars.

They are literally breath-taking in power and speed and take-off, yet under their new tiptoe hydraulics and easy-steering knee-action they are almost as manageable as a telephone.

They are thewed and sinewed by that quality which springs from Buick's third of a century of manufacturing experience, advantaged by $14,500,000 worth of new tools, dies and factory re-equipment devised for these cars alone.

These things are so true and so obvious that everywhere you will soon hear the motor-wise saying, "BUICK'S THE BUY!"

VOTERS MONDAY TO EXPRESS OPINIONS ON SALE OF LIQUOR

To Decide Whether or Not Liquor May be Sold in Pennington Co.

Pennington county voters will go to the polls next Monday, October 14, to register their opinions on the question of opening Pennington county to the sale of intoxicating liquor. The question to be voted on is "Shall the sale of liquor be prohibited?" requiring a vote of "Yes" by those opposing the sale and a "No" vote by those favoring it, the phrasing of the question being fixed by state law.

While not a great deal of interest has been revealed by the general public in the forthcoming election, the outcome of the vote in the county September 12, 1933, on the question of repealing the prohibition amendment to the federal constitution indicates that the result next Monday will not be one-sided unless there has been a decided change of opinion in the meantime.

In the 1933 balloting the county as a whole voted dry 1,399 to 1,114, only four of the 21 townships being in the wet column. The city of Thief River Falls voted in favor of repeal 587 to 499, the close division of sentiment being indicated by the fact that the second ward voted wet by four votes while the fourth ward registered a majority of two votes for the dry side.

An interesting discussion of some of the points at issue in the election next Monday, presented from the viewpoint of the drys by Rev. E. L. Tungseth, is published elsewhere in this issue.

COUNCIL FIXES $34,400 TAX LEVY FOR NEXT YEAR

CURRENT EXPENSE LEVY ELIMINATED

Vote to Call for Bids on $15,000 Skating Rink Bond Issue

Reducing the total $1,100 below last year and $4,950 below 1933, the city council Wednesday evening fixed the tax levy for city purposes at $34,400, to which the state will add an estimated $2,600 for Auditorium bond retirement and interest. The fact that a poor fund levy had to be made this year was more than offset by the elimination of a levy for current expense, there being a large credit balance in this fund.

The budgets for this year and last are made up as follows:

	1935	1934
Poor fund	$ 7,400
Current expense		$12,500
Auditorium maint.	5,000	4,000
Cemetery fund	400	400
Library fund	4,000	3,500
Band fund	600	600
Park fund	4,000	2,500
Paving Impr. No. 1	7,000	6,000
Permanent Impr.	6,000	6,000
	$34,400	$35,500
	$37,000	$38,000

The council voted to advertise for bids on the $15,000 bond issue authorized by the voters Monday to apply on the cost of an enclosed skating rink, the bids to be opened Monday, November 4. The bonds will be offered to the public in units of $500, payable in three to eight years from the date of issue and bearing not to exceed four per cent interest.

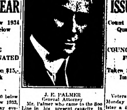
At the regular meeting of the council Tuesday evening the low bid of the O'Hara Fuel & Ice company was accepted for the winter's supply of coal for municipal buildings. The bid was on the basis of $9.35 a ton for 110 tons of Pocahontas plus 15 cents for treatment, and $8.10 a ton for 135 tons of Miller Creek screenings plus 15 cents a ton for treating.

Bids on remodeling the library roof were submitted by Albert Larson for $1,125 and Johnson & Hetland in the amount of $1,150, action on the proposals being deferred until Wednesday evening when both bids were rejected.

Supt. Morris Bye was present in behalf of the board of education to arrange for the use of the Auditorium for school activities during the coming year. The council fixed the rental at $350, the same figure as last year.

S. R. Dahlen, acting for the Sheldon company, was granted a permit to lower the floor and modernize the front of the building at 218 Main av. N. at a cost of $1,000.

Several applications for reduction of assessments on property in the business district were read and referred to the tax committee. Mayor Frank Rinkel, speaking in reference to the applications, volunteered the information that the county board gave the Northern Chevrolet company no reduction in the assessed valuation of its property on Main av. N., and that the 1934 taxes were paid in full, while the company was given an adjustment on its 1932 and 1933 taxes.



J. E. PALMER
General Attorney
Mr. Palmer who came to the Soo Line in his present capacity in 1920, will deliver an address at the program in the auditorium Friday afternoon arranged as a tribute to the Soo Line.

VOTERS OF CITY APPROVE BOND ISSUE FOR RINK

Count is 4 to 1 in Favor of Qualifying for $13,118 Federal Grant

COUNCIL APPROVES FOUNDATION PLANS

Takes Steps to Arrange for Immediate Start on Project

Voters of Thief River Falls Monday went to the polls to register a 4 to 1 verdict in favor of issuing $15,000 in bonds to qualify for a federal WPA grant of $13,118 to be applied on the construction of a $25,000 enclosed skating rink. A total of 775 ballots were cast, compared to 910 in the vote May 28 on the issuance of $60,000 in Diesel engine bonds.

The vote by wards follows:

	Yes	No
First ward	145	49
Second ward	179	46
Third ward	128	20
Fourth ward	167	41
	619	156

Election officials all volunteered their services, so that the vote was taken at a nominal cost to the city treasury.

—The city council at its regular meeting Tuesday evening approved plans for the foundation and basement as submitted by Architect Henry C. Eckland, who announced that the dimensions of the building had been changed slightly to provide a skating area 170 by 80 feet.

When Mr. Eckland informed the council that approximately four weeks time would be required to complete the plans for the structure, steps were taken to ask the state WPA office to waive its requirement that detailed plans must be submitted before work can be instituted on the project. District Supervisor Donald Whitmore was consulted by telephone at Detroit Lakes and he said he would ask St. Paul headquarters for authority to proceed at once, so that the excavation may be completed before the fall freeze-up.

The council also adopted a resolution approving payment for four parcels of lots included in the site west of the Auditorium, the payments aggregating $2,620.

Mass Meeting Minutes Tell of Decision to Give Right-of-Way

An interesting relic resurrected during the past week by Robert J. Lund from the files of the late Daniel Shaw, local leader in civic affairs, is particularly timely in connection with the program arranged for Friday afternoon and evening as a tribute to the Soo Line.

The material consists of a handbill signed by Mayor F. H. Kratka announcing that a public meeting would be held October 14, 1903, for the purpose of considering the matter of giving the Soo Line a right-of-way thru the city limits, together with the minutes of the meeting written by W. C. Smiley as secretary.

As a climax to the meeting a resolution was adopted stating, "Be it resolved, by the citizens of Thief River Falls in mass meeting assembled, that we do desire and do hereby instruct the aldermen and other officials of the city of Thief River Falls to proceed at once to purchase and convey to said Soo Line railway the right-of-way required by them as a condition upon which they will build their railway thru said city; and we do further instruct said city officers to appropriate moneys from the city treasury and to issue certificates of indebtedness payable from city funds in sufficient amount to secure said right-of-way."

COUNTY FARMERS VOTE ON CORN-HOG PROGRAM OCT. 26

To Express Views on Continuing Control Plan Next Year

Pennington county farmers who produced corn or hogs in 1935 will have an opportunity, October 26, to vote on the question, "Do you favor a corn-hog adjustment program to follow the 1935 program which expires November 30, 1935?"

A new corn hog program will be offered to farmers next year if they show clearly that they wish for it, according to word received at University Farm, St. Paul, from the Agricultural Adjustment Administration. However, unless the results of the referendum indicate a strong desire for continuing the cooperative control of corn-hog production, no adjustment program will be offered. Every corn-hog farmer will be urged to vote, therefore, in this important referendum.

County Agent R. M. Douglass and members of the county allotment committee attended a conference at Detroit Lakes Monday at which plans were laid for conducting the referendum and a series of local meetings in which the facts about the corn hog situation will be presented.

A schedule of these meetings and a list of the places at which farmers may cast their ballots will be announced next week.

TOTAL OF 15,332 MEN ARE AT WORK ON WPA PROJECTS

$15,000,000 in State Projects Are Approved In Washington

Work for 4,504 needy unemployed was authorized this week to bring the total reduction in the state's relief rolls through the program of the Works Progress administration to 15,332, Victor Christgau, state WPA administrator, announced as the campaign to end direct relief with jobs entered its third week.

Funds for the 231 projects in Minnesota on which work had been authorized this week, totaled $8,017,229 of which the federal government has provided $7,037,-567 while sponsoring agencies will contribute $979,662.

Mr. Christgau said that 148 projects for a total of $15,055,200 had been approved by Washington thus far indicating that the additional funds were in the process of being released to the state WPA to carry out the plan of adding about 5,000 workers to the payrolls every week until WPA's quota of the Minnesota relief load has been absorbed by the public improvement program.

The administrator explained that selection of projects to come first on the program was made not only on the basis of benefits to be derived by the community but also as to what extent the projects will provide jobs for local relief labor. Serving human needs is the primary function of WPA, he said.

Part-Time Jobs Sought by Reemployment Office

The local office of the National Reemployment service this week offered its facilities to home owners in need of men for odd jobs such as putting on storm windows. The office, it was announced, will provide a man to do any kind of work desired, and the pay will be whatever the employer and the worker agree on. Cooks, waitresses, seamstresses and nursegirls are also available to local housewives at the office. Those interested are asked to telephone No. 411.

Ask Rural Mail Route Patrons to Cut Weeds

An appeal to rural residents to cut tall weeds along the rural mail routes was made today by Postmaster Andrew Anderson. He pointed out that the cooperation of patrons in this regard will do much to insure regularity of mail deliveries during winter months by preventing the roads from becoming drifted with snow. Mail carriers report that practically no weeds have been cut up to the present time, and they stress the need of prompt action.

WOODPECKERS RUIN FROST BOX ON TOWN WATER TANK

Hills.—Woodpeckers have ruined the frost box on the village water tower at Hills, in Aitkin county, by their supposed innocent pecking. The frost box encloses the pipe which carries the water from the supply tank to the settling tank, and was literally peppered with holes. The village council was compelled to secure the services of a Mr. Kendall of Mankato to repair the box and cover it with rubberized paper. While working about 65 feet from the ground, Kendall narrowly escaped death when his hook came loose and he started to drop. Fortunately he managed to catch one of the guide wires and slide safely to the ground.

STATE ASKS BIDS ON HIGHWAY JOBS COSTING $600 000

Improvement of Highway 75 From Hallock to Noyes is Included

Bids on highway construction projects in ten counties have been called for October 25 by the state highway department. The estimated cost of the work is approximately $600,000. Six of the projects consist of grading, followed by the placing of several inches of sand, gravel or crushed stone on the road. This surface is in turn mixed with soil binder and calcium chloride to form a firm, dustless, "stabilized" road.

When a road surface has been stabilized in this manner it is satisfactory under moderate traffic conditions, and forms a good base for added surfacing of other types if it should be required, according to highway department engineers. The department has been doing stabilizing experimentally for the last year.

The October 25 letting includes work in the following counties: Beltrami, Dodge, Grant, Goodhue, Houston, Kittson, Koochiching, Lincoln, Lyon and Stearns. The individual projects include:

Grading and Stabilized Base—T. H. No. 75 between Hallock and Noyes, length 10.1 miles, 12,-[illegible] cubic yards of excavation, 71,-[illegible] tons of sand and gravel, 15,-[illegible] cubic yards of binder soil and [illegible] tons of calcium chloride.

NEW CREAMERY IS DEDICATED

Saturday, October 5, 1935 marks another important day in the history of Grygla, that of dedicating the new creamery.

Watch your image in the shop windows as you pass. If you don't walk as gracefully as you might, suspect your shoes. We feature a shoe that fits so perfectly and gives such glove like support as to actually make you feel younger, smarter on your feet.

Fire completely destroyed the barn on the O. N. SOO LINE DAY

In dedicating one day of the Fall Celebration to the Soo Line, the Civic & Commerce Association gives due recognition to an organization that has contributed much to the development of Thief River Falls. While, in the nature of things, agriculture is the foundation of all business activity in this territory, it is due largely to its advantages as a railroad center that Thief River Falls has become the principal concentration point for the farm products of this section of the state, and a leading distributing point, both wholesale and retail, for a large territory.

Another important contribution this organization has made to the city has been in the form of a substantial payroll. And while this payroll fluctuates to some extent with the company's volume of business, it has been maintained at a higher average level thruout the recent lean years than most industrial payrolls during this same period. At the present time it totals approximately $350,000 a year. During normal crop years it averages about a half a million a year. This money is distributed thru local channels of trade by the some over two hundred employees who, in other ways, individually and thru churches and other organizations, contribute to the welfare and progress of the community. As a group these employees are solid and substantial citizens, many of them home owners, and nearly all of them long time residents of the city. Nearly one-fifth of the population of the city is directly dependent on the Soo Line payroll for a livelihood, and, adding to this number those who are maintained indirectly by that payroll it is reasonable to estimate that from twelve to fifteen hundred of our population live off what the Soo Line pays to its employees in this city.

These considerations in themselves are sufficient to justify such a tribute as is being planned for one day of the Fall Celebration. But the occasion will fall short of its mark if as a result of the meeting there does not develop a broader understanding of each other's problems among company managers, employees and business men. The Soo Line, its employees and local business men have several interests in common, and for the advancement of these common interests there should be closer contacts and greater harmony. All three groups have a common interest in the development of this section of the state as a farming community. All three groups have a common interest in the development of this city as the commercial capitol of this section of the state. And all three groups have a common interest in the success of the company which, from the local point of view, has been and will continue to be so important a factor in providing employment and incidentally in the development of the city.

The Soo Line and its employees have a right to expect loyal support from the business interests of Thief River Falls. And the business men of Thief River Falls have a right to expect the co-operation of the Soo Line and its employees in the development of the city as a commercial center. And if bringing these various groups together will result in more intelligent cooperation toward the advancement of these common interests, then Soo Line Day will have accomplished something really worth while for the community. If it fails to accomplish this—well it still will serve a useful purpose as a proper recognition by the city of its largest industry.

ANOTHER DISAGREEABLE EXPERIENCE

Because Harry Fowler, former county auditor, pleaded guilty to the misappropriation of less than $200, there evidently is some misunderstanding as to the extent of his defalcations. In the public examiner's statement, Fowler was charged with a total shortage of $13,755.79. Of this shortage Fowler was able to give a satisfactory accounting for only $269.96, leaving a total of $13,485.83 which it still must be assumed he pocketed personally.

The shortages can be classified in three general groups. $1,837.12 of county money was paid out by him for interest and principal on a warrant that he had illegally issued and sold in 1931. Through the sale of delinquent tax certificates he had collected $3,419.02 which he had failed to turn over to the county treasurer. And of attached rents that had been paid to him by the sheriff he had failed to turn over to the treasurer some over eight thousand dollars.

There seems to be some question now as to whether these misappropriated funds are a legal liability of the county or of the individual involved in each transaction. In a letter to County Attorney Berve the state public examiner expresses the opinion that taxes are not legally paid until a tax receipt has been issued by the county treasurer. Until court decisions are obtained the county will also be forced to hold that delinquent tax certificates improperly issued are not a county liability, according to Mr. Berve who states that it will also be necessary for the county to attempt to recover the money issued in payment of the illegal warrant. So it seems that until test cases have been submitted to the courts it will not be possible to determine what the county's loss will be as a result of these defalcations. While these questions will have to be determined from the standpoint of the law, it does seem that the county and other tax units should stand this loss rather than the individuals who, innocently and in good faith, have transacted business with a crooked public official.

One of the unfortunate results of such a situation is the tendency among people to question the integrity of other county officials. County Attorney Berve states that there is no reason to believe that any other officials have been a party to the defalcations. Apparently Fowler was a lone wolf in all of his double dealing. The public examiners have complimented Ole Ihle for the completeness of the records he had kept of money turned over to Fowler. Without these records it would have been practically impossible to make an accurate check of the money collected on attached rents.

And so ends another disagreeable experience. Fowler will serve a short term in the penitentiary. If he escapes charges still pending against him in Wisconsin he will soon be at large again with new opportunities to either go straight or continue a career of swindling that seems already to have extended over a considerable period of time.

Of course Grygla is to be congratulated upon the completion of its fine new creamery but the real reason for rejoicing in the Grygla community is the fact that it has the type of citizens that makes such an achievement possible. Not until sufficient cash had been accumulated to meet at least half of the cost of the new building did the stockholders authorize construction. Which is typical of the way the people of that community do business, and probably the reason why Grygla is recognized as a community of substantial citizens.

It seems a long time ago since "More Ted and Less Taxes" was a campaign slogan in Minnesota. Perhaps that is because the idea of economy in the administration of public affairs has been repudiated as false doctrine by present political leaders. For the time being, at least, economy is an old fashioned idea. But it will be rather pleasant to have an opportunity to hear Ted Christianson expound some of his old fashioned ideas again. Maybe one of these days we will begin to suspect that as governor he was about three-fourths right nine-tenths of the time.

Thief River Falls is honored today by the visit to our city of Harold F. Rogers, state commander of the American Legion and Mrs. E. E. Vigen, state president of the Legion Auxiliary. Legion and Auxiliary members of Northwestern Minnesota welcome this opportunity to get acquainted with the officials who will direct the activities of their organizations during the coming year.

The special election held Monday left no room for doubt as to the attitude of Thief River Falls people on the skating rink question. The ayes had it by a very one-sided majority and now the city officials have authority to proceed with the project. Just how soon construction will start will depend on those agencies that handle the government funds. As soon as the necessary o. k. comes through, the city will be ready to do its part.

These are rather tense moments for remaining candidates in the queen contests. Four young ladies will be fifty dollars richer Saturday night and, after all, fifty dollars is a lot of dollars in these panicky times.

Mark Twain once observed that while there is a lot of talk about the weather, nothing is ever done about it. Not so, however, with the liquor problem. Not only is there a lot of talk about it but something is always being done about it too. It's always too wet for some people and it's always too dry for others. Considering the great diversity of tastes in this matter, the liquor question is one that probably never will be satisfactorily settled. When the country as a whole turned thumbs down on prohibition a couple of years ago, Pennington County remained legally dry. And now on Monday again the voters of the county are going to be asked to decide whether or not the sale of liquor shall be prohibited. A lot of people would say that as long as it never has been prohibited why start now. But the real question involved in the election is whether or not the sale legally shall be prohibited—and that is what will be decided Monday. So, guided by conscience, conviction, principle and prejudice, the voters will go to the polls and another chapter of the record of a long and apparently endless war on King Alcohol will be written.

Total gate receipts for six world's series baseball games totaled a little more than a million dollars, approximately the same amount as was paid in by fans for the Louis-Baer fight. Not much chance for an argument now as to which was the best value.

In last week's issue Alfred Longren raised the question as to whether or not it would be possible for the county to operate a liquor store in the event legal sale is authorized by the voters in the special election Monday. According to what free information on the subject we have been able to dig out of local attorneys (if they send us a bill we'll deny ever having mentioned it) there is no way under the present laws that a county can conduct such a business.

Now that the world's series is out and over the good people of America can settle down to a full enjoyment of their righteous indignation over Mussolini's Ethiopian crime.

Topics of the Times

By N. A. H.

It's too bad the money won locally on the World's series couldn't be applied on reducing the federal deficit.

Utah has the distinction of being the only state in the Union with a higher tax levy than Minnesota's.

Better prepare to give that smile and glad hand some exercise. There's going to be a teachers' convention in town next week.

The only big-scale federal construction project now under way that promises to be wholly self-supporting is Boulder dam, which was dedicated last week by the President. Unfortunately it was started under a Republican administration.

Apropos of nothing, it occurs to us that there is quite a difference in the significance of a milestone and a millstone.

Among the things that sell better when they're broke are a horse and a tract of land.

If Mussolini craves publicity, he made a mistake to start a war while the world's series was in progress.

President Roosevelt recently assured the country that federal taxes will not be increased. In view of the mounting debt, that sounds like wishful thinking.

See you at the coronation ceremonies Saturday night.

Dr. Lotus D. Coffman Addresses U Freshmen at Meeting on Campus

The boy or girl in college makes three distinct records, each of prime importance to success in life and to personal happiness, Dr. L. D. Coffman, president of the University of Minnesota, told students at the Freshman Convocation that began the year.

First, said he, the student has a record of grades, which shows how well he has done in work assigned him to do. These measure his intellectual ability, his achievement, and his growth.

Next, Dr. Coffman, said, the student makes a record in the form of the opinion held of him by his teachers, his fellows and his friends.

"No matter what class grades are entered on the books, if he is known to be unstable, loose in conduct, shoddy in his manners and deceptive in his relations, he will lose steadily in the esteem of those whose confidence he should covet."

The third record every college student makes is one he registers upon himself, the speaker said.

"The reflex of one's actions upon himself is the most important record of all. This record he must live with always; the grades on the books may be lost, and that which he makes on his friends may fade from memory; but wherever he goes and whatever he does, what he has done to himself remains with him. It is him. He has become it and it becomes him."

Dr. Coffman warned students not to listen too much to discussions of the new leisure. In college, he said, hard work, not leisure, will be expected. Men want work more than they want leisure, he declared.

Control of Suez Canal

Although the British government holds about seven-sixteenths of the shares, the Suez Canal Co. is, as a matter of fact, predominantly French for purposes of administration. On the board of management there are one Dutch, ten British and twenty-one French directors, who work in closest harmony. Of the ten British directors, three represent the British government in respect to their large holding of shares and seven represent the shipping and commercial interests of Great Britain, which supplies about 57 per cent of the total traffic through the canal.—Washington Star.

PUBLIC OPINION

Expressions of opinion on timely subjects are invited and welcomed to this department of The Times. Letters should be of reasonable length, and the name should be signed, not necessarily for publication, but as a guarantee of good faith. Letters duplicated to other local newspapers are not desired.

Dear Editor:

I have appreciated the letters recently published relative to the sale of hard liquor in our county. Being that our county will soon vote on the issue of whether or not the sale of hard liquor shall be permitted within its boundaries, I wish to have a word with our citizens also. I am not writing this letter under the shelter of any League, nor in the name of any organization. I simply wish to express some of my personal convictions.

Pennington county has fortunately remained in the dry column so far. Anyone who is familiar with the liquor traffic, and who is not in sympathy with it, will appreciate this fact. I believe that it will continue in the ranks of the dry counties, and when our good citizens will carefully and conscientiously consider the facts involved, they will again register an emphatic note to the sale of hard liquor.

I will vote against the sale of hard liquor in our county because the more accomodations we give it the more it will spite us. One of the most foolish and hypocritical arguments ever advanced in favor of the sale of hard liquor is that of better control of the traffic. Whatever causes exist now for laxity in control will be greatly increased when local sale is permitted. If we cannot control a brook, how can we expect to control a larger stream? Remember that we have now all the control which our State permits and which our local officials will enforce. Local sale of hard liquor can not offer more control, but can only offer a bigger control problem.

I will vote against the sale of hard liquor in our county because of the financial problems which it will bring on. This problem is plenty acute now, without making it worse. Hard liquor is not a cheap article. "Good" whisky usually retails for about $4.00 per quart. And a quart will not go very far toward satisfying the thirst of those who drink it. Even several gallons, when it is divided among several, will not last very long. It will not require much drinking before the monthly grocery bill, or the monthly clothing bill, or the monthly rent, or all of them together, is duplicated. There are few if any, in our county but that they need all their money for constructive living. True, there is some drinking now, but, the nearer the sales come to home; the more convenient it is to "get a drink", the more will be consumed.

I will vote against the sale of hard liquor in our county because of the moral welfare involved for the present as well as for succeeding generations. The supporters of the traffic of course claim that "we can make money on it". And some will stoop to anything, just so they "can make money". Some people can see nothing but the dollar sign on their own nose. They can become enthusiastic over "bargains" where pennies are saved though dollars be lost. We can not vote for the traffic without staining our hands in the blood of those who will suffer. Though many may be superior to such temptations as drink affords, let us remember that we who are strong are expected to be our brother's keeper. No individual, no community, no nation, will ever drink itself to prosperity. Liquor does not create manhood, does not respect womanhood, does not build character. It can only destroy that which is noble, sacred and valuable.

Then, may I answer the questions raised by one of our citizens last week. The first question was: "If the wets win in this election will the city of Thief River Falls and the villages of St. Hilaire and Goodridge be permitted to establish municipal stores?" Each one of these places may remain dry even though the county votes wet. Before the sale of liquor is permitted an election must be held on the question of granting license. If such an election shows a majority in favor of license, then the governing body may arrange for the granting of such license and establish ordinances relative thereto without the jurisdiction granted by the State Liquor Laws. Whether or not municipal stores will be established will no doubt depend largely upon will of the voters. In my opinion, if liquor is to be sold, the municipal store is much to be prefered to granting license to private parties.

The second question was: "Can the county establish one liquor store and monopolize the trade in the county with the revenues going to the entire county, both city and country?—and if so, would the County Board take such steps?" Leaving the last part of the question out, the answer can only be no. No county and no township can go into the liquor business so as to conduct municipal stores or grant licenses for the sale of intoxicating liquor. Only the cities and villages can do that. All revenues therefore from the sale of intoxicating liquors will necessarily flow into the treasuries of the villages and cities where such sale is conducted and will not benefit township or county treasuries.

Much criticism is heard over the wording of the ballot. However our ballot is worded strictly according to law. Those who vote against the sale of liquor in the county must vote "yes" on the ballot. And now by all means, get out and vote.

Sincerely yours,
E. L. TUNGSETH.

By A. I. Harris

Highway commissioner Elsberg's suggestion that citizens cooperate in the elimination of eye sores on private property facing state trunk highways is worth consideration by local organizations and individuals. Every county has a few spots along well traveled highways where a little well directed effort would improve appearances wonderfully. Inexpensive screen plantings offer one easy way of hiding ugly spots. The highway department's roadside development experts are available for advice on all such matters.

Students of business and economics point to the fact that while consumption of capital goods has increased in the past few years, that if consumptive goods has decreased, despite the hundreds of millions of dollars the government has expended to relieve business and distress among the masses. That fact is important in determining how much vitality there is in industry in putting the business gears in position and restoring normalcy, as the President says it must now do.

Dividend checks are being mailed out this month by Elmer A. Benson, state commissioner of banks, to depositors in 18 state banks which are being liquidated by the State Banking division.

These include 5 per cent dividends to depositors in the following institutions: Mankato Savings bank, whose depositors will have received a total of 65 per cent of their deposits; Mizpah State, total 80 per cent; and Racine State, total 75 per cent. Still further payments are to be made to these depositors.

Other banks whose depositors will receive checks are: Trommald State, Elko State, Farmers State of Hillman, Liberty State of Minneapolis, Tabor State, First State of Porter, First State of Comfrey, Crookston State, First State of Danube, First State of Glenville, First State of Grandy, Hazel Run State, Farmers and Merchants bank of Silver Lake, Farmers and Merchants bank of Sleepy Eye and the Sauk Rapids State. The final dividend being paid by the Elko State bank will bring the total of dividends to its depositors to 71 per cent.

Dividends paid in September brought the total so far paid to depositors in the First State bank of Judson to 85 per cent; that paid to depositors in the Ottertail State bank to 80 per cent. These banks are still to pay additional dividends.

Speaking before the annual meeting of the Minnesota Independent Bankers association in St. Paul, Banking Commissioner Benson urged association support of the Frazier-Lemke farm mortgage refinancing plan, which, he said, would be of distinct aid to agriculture in this state. He asked that bankers adopt an attitude more in conformity with modern views, problems and necessities, declaring that many in that business still have concepts belonging to the "horse and buggy" era.

Oscar F. Youngdahl, former State American Legion commander, asks investigation of the University as a "communist stamping ground." Investigations from now until doomsday are not going to prevent students from thinking and from studying modern movements. Students ask questions about communism as they do about fascism, and rightly so. Procedure such as Youngdahl recommends will strengthen communism rather than weaken it. But why doesn't Youngdahl ask that an investigation be conducted of fascist activities, which are known to have the support of powerful business interests? While communists may not value the Constitution as an instrumentality for justice, individual rights, and liberty as most of us do, fascists would obliterate every vestige of democracy, which is the cornerstone of the entire American system and the very essence of Americanism. If there is to be an investigation of subversive activities, it should go all down the line.

PWA grants received by the State Board of Control for the construction of buildings and improvements at state institutions total $298,638, as follows: Hospital building, School for Feeble-Minded, Faribault, appropriation by state $260,000, P. A. grant $212,585; sewage disposal system and power plant improvements, Willmar State Asylum, appropriation by state $75,000, PWA grant, $59,203; porch for tuberculous women, Fergus Falls State Hospital, appropriation by state $17,000, P. A. grant $13,600; shop building, addition to porches and sewage disposal system, Anoka State Asylum, appropriation by state $14,900, PWA grant $12,160; addition to power plant and laundry, State Public School, Owatonna, appropriation by state 32,000; PWA grant $17,400.

Highway 59 Rerouted Thursday Over Third Street and Johnson St.

The route of Trunk Highway 59 coming into this city from the south was changed last Thursday to bring it over the Johnson st. boulevard on the east side and over Third st. and Main av. on the west side of the river. Stop signs were placed at the intersections of all streets with the new trunk route, and Police Chief A. B. Stenberg asked that local motorists be careful to observe them so that needless accidents may be avoided. At the same time stop signs were placed along Eight st. of Main av., which is part of Trunk Highway No. 1.

BENSON TOUGH SPOT FOR CARNIVAL RING HOMBRES

Benson.—It's like putting one's head in a wild lion's maw for a carnival fighter to offer to take on all comers for a percentage of the gate in Benson. Last June Johnny Maras, local glove tosser, knocked a carnival fighter into several hours of twittering birdies, and just to prove it wasn't a fluke, he kayoed "Cyclone Pete," another presumptuous carnival boxer, in about 50 seconds last week. "Cyclone Pete" whirled for about 15 minutes, but it was all in his head while he was out—cold. Then, to make it an all-around bad night for the show boys, Billy Gustafson stayed the required five minutes with their wrestler to get his cut of the gate. And that isn't all. The following night "Cyclone Pete", considerably deflated, was outclassed by Vern Krohn, Danvers, who won the decision, and Art Knutson, Montevideo, tossed the carnival wrestler all over the ring to win his percentage.

The nation with a bent for war frequently goes broke on it.

Cooke extended a welcome to the teachers on behalf of the parents, pupils and churches, and Harold F. Harrison, head of the agriculture department in the high school, responded briefly.

Mrs. H. F. Harrison presented two piano solos, following which Miss Ruth Mickelson discussed the value of a kindergarten. She described the classroom routine, and said the aim is to make the atmosphere as homelike as possible.

20 FROM COUNTY ENROLL IN N. W. SCHOOL THIS FALL

All Previous Attendance Records Are Broken at Crookston School

All previous attendance records were shattered at the Northwest School of Agriculture when 330 students from all parts of the Northwest including twenty from Pennington county, registered during the opening week of the fall term. Most marked increase took place in the Freshman class with 130 students enrolled in this group to date. The juniors followed with 74; seniors, 67, and 59 special and advanced. The unexpected increase in enrollment added greatly to administrative problems and emphasized the need for additional dormitory and class room space in addition to class and laboratory equipment.

Dean W. C. Coffey and Dr. Andrew Boss of University Farm addressed the student body during the opening week of the term. Dr. Boss, who was one of the earliest graduates of the Central School of Agriculture, and who has spent his entire life in Minnesota, described the school of agriculture during its early period of growth. Dean Coffey stated that the object of the school of agriculture was not to guarantee success but to provide the individual student with a background which will enable him to think clearly and effectively.

The following students from Pennington county enrolled during the opening week of the term: Marian Augustine, Martin Hanson, Laura Hanson, Raymond Oen, Gladys Ose, and LeRoy Peterson of Thief River Falls; Olaf Dahlen, Sylvia Fort, Glennie Iverson, Orlsa Prestegaard, Harry Solberg of Erie; Albin Hanson, Helen and Truman Hemmestvedt, Marvin Nabben, Harold Nabben, and Victor Sund of Goodridge; Stella Omundson, Iola Solberg and James Weckworth of Hazel.

Representatives of the Soo Line, employes and businessmen will speak, and a group of musical selections will be presented. Tickets are available at Mr. Lund's office. A dance at the Auditorium will close the day's program.

Events Saturday will be under the supervision of the Junior Civic and Commerce association, features of which will be an address in the Auditorium at 2:30 by Congressman Theodore Christianson, the dedication of the bridge approach by state highway officials and the crowning of four popularity queens at a gala dance in the evening.

Representatives of the state highway department, which recently completed an elaborate beautification project in this city, will participate in the afternoon program, the number including O. L. Kipp, construction engineer, and M. J. Hoffman, bridge engineer, both of St. Paul; Division Engineer A. O. Torgerson of Detroit Lakes; and Maintenance Engineer Al Graves of Crookston.

At the queen crowning ceremonies in the Auditorium at midnight Saturday Gorman Thompson, president of the Junior Civic and Commerce association, will speak in behalf of his group, while Chester Myrom will have charge of the announcement of the winners, the crowning of the four queens and the award of a $50 cash prize to each of the young ladies.

Music for the dances each of the three evenings of the festival will be provided by Wayne Stute and His Band of Bands, an outstanding traveling organization of musicians.

ALASKA COLONIST TELLS OF STEADY PROGRESS MADE

Mrs. Carl Erickson, Former Local Woman, Writes Friends Here

Writing from Palmer, Alaska, headquarters of the Matanuska colony of which she and her family are members, Mrs. Carl Erickson, formerly of Thief River Falls, states in a letter to Mrs. N. C. Lindberg of this city that steady progress is being made in establishing the federally-sponsored project, and that she feels certain it is going to be a success.

"If, however," she writes, "the venture turns out to be a failure, I am sure that our family will not go back, and I think many with us will stay regardless of what happens. It will take lots of hard work, but we all enjoy that, for we are working for ourselves, not for wages."

Mrs. Erickson says that after a series of delays, many of them apparently unavoidable, matters relating to the colony are now progressing without interruption, and that her family was about to move into its new home which was just being completed.

SHIPS TON OF TURTLES EACH WEEK TO MARKETS

Fergus Falls—The turtle shipping business, started on a small scale three years ago by Herman Erhard, has reached such proportions that this gentleman ships a ton of turtles each week to eastern markets. Turtle meat is a delicacy much in demand, tasting something like chicken. One of the best methods of catching turtles is the use of a bright light at night while rowing slowly in a boat. The reptiles can be quickly spotted in the water. A net made from chicken wire and fastened to a long pole is used to land the turtles. The easiest time to catch them is in the fall, when they lie in shallow water, chilling their bodies before sinking into the mud to hibernate for the winter. As many as a ton will be found at one particular spot in the soft mud of a shallow lake on a fall day.

Nearly Eight Million Quarts of Vegetables Canned by ERA Clients

Sufficient vegetables to feed 26,393 families have been raised and canned by Minnesota's SERA relief clients this year. With the canning season virtually completed L. P. Zimmerman, administrator, estimated that approximately 7,915,000 quarts of vegetables raised in SERA gardens have been canned.

"Figuring 300 quarts per family this would provide vegetables for 26,393 families," he said. "Experts have estimated that this garden activity means an average saving of $60 on each family's grocery bill. In other words, the SERA garden program has netted the state relief clients $1,582,980.

The program started in the spring, required that every rural relief client should be provided with garden seed. It was estimated that 52,000 gardens were raised under this program. In addition to seed distribution the SERA during the summer sent out trained experts giving canning lessons throughout the state. Miss Zimmerman estimated that about 20,000 persons made use of this "course" in canning.

Local Bankers Attend District Meeting at Detroit Lakes Oct. 3

Local people in attendance Thursday, October 3, in Detroit Lakes at a joint meeting of Districts 6 and 9 of the Minnesota Bankers association included George Werstlein, cashier of the Northern State bank, and E. O. Peterson, cashier of the Union State bank, the latter being accompanied by Mrs. Peterson and Mrs. Leon Kaliher. A banquet in the evening at the Greystone hotel featured the meeting, speakers at which included Charles F. Collison of the Minneapolis Tribune and J. O. Christenson of University Farm, St. Paul.

COWS DIE AFTER DRINKING PAINT

Sleepy Eye.—Two heifers belonging to Clem Braulick, southeast of Sleepy Eye, died last week, the result of drinking paint. The bridge over the little Cottonwood river on the Braulick farm, is being painted, and the cows obtained the paint from several open pails standing nearby. The cows drank the paint on Friday, and one yearling died Sunday night and the other, two years old, died Monday morning. Braulick estimated his loss at $60.

PHEASANT SEASON TO OPEN IN STATE SATURDAY, OCT. 19

Male Birds May be Taken in Polk, Red Lake and Clearwater

Minnesota's hunters are counting the days yet remaining before the start of the open season October 19 on Minnesota's most numerous game bird—the pheasant.

Frank Blair, superintendent of game propagation for the state department of conservation, has announced there are 40,000,000 pheasant in Minnesota, indicating that hunters will have much better luck than when they were in quest of prairie chicken in northern Minnesota recently.

The open season on ducks and quail start soon too, the former on the 21st day of October and the latter October 28.

The heaviest concentration of pheasants, according to the state conservation department is in the southwestern section of Minnesota.

In a large number of counties a split season is to be held, hunting to be allowed from noon to sunset each day commencing October 19 and lasting to October 27, and then to be resumed from November 9 to November 19, both dates inclusive.

Counties included in this classification are Wilkin, Otter Tail, Wadena, Todd, Morrison, Benton, Mille Lacs, Isanti, Chisago, Scott, Washington, Anoka, Sherburne, Stearns, Pope, Douglas, Grant, Stevens, Traverse, Dakota, Big Stone, Swift, Kandiyohi, Meeker, Wright, Hennepin, Carver, McLeod, Renville, Goodhue, Chippewa, Lac Qui Parle, Yellow Medicine, Lincoln, Lyon, Redwood, Brown, Nicollet, Sibley, Rice, LeSueur, Blue Earth, Watonwan, Cottonwood, Murray, Pipestone, Rock, Nobles, Jackson, Martin and Faribault.

Counties in which shooting of male pheasants only may take place from noon to sunset each day from October 19 to October 27, inclusive, are Houston, Fillmore, Mower, Freeborn, Winona, Olmsted Dodge, Steele, Wabasha, Kanabec, Pine, Carlton, Aitkin, Crow Wing, Cass, Hubbard, Clearwater, Becker Mahnomen, Clay, Norman, Polk and Red Lake.

The daily bag limit of pheasants in the counties having a split season has been set at three birds, which may be all males, or two males and one female. No more than one female bird may be shot in any one day. The possession limit is six males or four males and two females. Eighteen birds may be taken during a season.

Highway Department Safety Contest Won by Willmar District

Highway Commissioner N. W. Elsberg will award the Willmar maintenance district first honors this week in the state highway department's yearly safety contest.

The official presentation ceremonies in connection with the award will be held at Willmar Wednesday afternoon. A silver loving cup will be given the district as a symbol of its successful battle against accidents among employes.

The record of the Willmar district for the year shows less than one accident per 100 employes—nine-tenths of an accident per 100 men to be exact. D. H. Gilchrist is maintenance engineer in charge of the winning district. Second honors in the contest were won by the Marshall district, with a record of 1.6 accidents per 100 employes. The Crookston district won third place with 1.9 accidents per 100 men.

RECOVERS MONEY AFTER YEAR IN LAKE

Pelican Rapids—Paper money in an ordinary billfold, lost over a year ago in the deep section of a lake, was recovered and redeemed last week by M. Sorenson, manager of the creamery at Pelican Rapids. As a result, Sorenson is $42 better off than he thought. Last year, while fishing in Silent Lake, he lost his billfold containing $60 in currency in the lake. He hunted for the billfold, and found some papers that were in it floating on the water, but there was no sign of the wallet or the money. This past summer the billfold was found by some children residing along the lake shore. The currency was in the billfold but so badly decomposed that it was feared it could not be identified. The money was sent to the United States Redemption division and just recently Sorenson received a check for $42. The rest of the money could not be identified. The denominations were four ten dollar bills and two one dollar bills.

HIGHWAY PATROL WINS STATE SHOOT

For the second consecutive year, the Minnesota state highway patrol has won the state police pistol championship. The team scored 1040 out of a possible 1200 points as compared to 1031 scored by the First National bank team of Minneapolis which finished second. Members of the winning team were Patrolmen L. O. Thrun, G. E. Hall, S. J. Porter, R. H. Pursley and H. E. Sorby. Thrun and Pursley were awarded qualifying medals for scoring 96 or better out of a possible 100. In the individual shoot, Thrun was second with 276 out of a possible 300, Porter fourth with 267 and Pursley sixth with 265. The shoot was conducted at Fort Snelling.

Red River Valley History

By Wm V. Werking

Sawmill Industry Here in 1905

For those who regret the shortcomings of the past and are committed to the theory that only modern thought and enterprise are really worth while there is contradictory evidence. Occasionally one encounters examples of the results of mental processes in the earlier years that place the earlier residents in an enviable light. The writer has before him a book published by the Soo Line 30 years ago. Obviously it was compiled for publicity purposes, but for its historical value and numerous interesting facts it contains the writer considers it a valuable contribution to the historical record of this region. The following article on Thief River Falls from the book supports, the writer believes, his contention as to the relative merits of the people of the past and the present:

"Situated upon a beautiful piece of land, adapted by nature for a town site, at the junction of the Red Lake and Thief Rivers, and surrounded on all sides with farm land as good as any in the Red River Valley, of which it is a part, lies the enterprising city of Thief River Falls, which already has a population of 4,000 happy, healthy, industrious and prosperous people.

"Through this city flows the Red Lake River, a broad, deep, navigable stream into which empties, a short distance north of the business center, the Thief River, from which the city derives its name.

"In this magnificent region, amid the broad outlaying areas of woodland and prairie, redundant with luscious grasses, and ready for the plow, much of it already being farmed, is this city, and being so located and environed it cannot but be an excellent one for business and manufacturing enterprises.

"The city owns and operates its electric light and water works system, has a splendid system of sewers, many blocks of cement walks in the business part, and plans are being made to pave some of the business streets.

"There is no factor more important in determining where one should locate, than the educational facilities which a community possesses. Education is recognized everywhere as the one essential qualification necessary for success. Minnesota stands second to no state in the Union in its public school system, and Thief River Falls is well up to the standard set by the state. The high school building is a credit to the city, as are also the two other large school buildings. Sixteen teachers are employed, and parents can rest assured their children will enjoy the same school advantages they have in other and larger places.

"What the sawmill enterprise has been to Thief River Falls few people can realize. From the first roar of the immense whistles in the spring to the last blast in the fall the large building reminds one of an enormous bee hive.

"The plant was started here in the fall of 1891, by Messrs. P. & J. Meehan, of Wisconsin, who commenced the erection of a saw mill on the present mill site and by the next spring had the mill completed ready for sawing as soon as logs could be secured from the lake. It had a daily capacity of about 40,000 and consisted of a large circular saw, edger, trimmer, shingle and lath mill, besides a planning mill situated on south Main avenue. The coming of this mill to the city gave its growth quite an impetus, both in population and business.

"In March 1899, they sold out to the Thief River Falls Lumber Company, who immediately took possession and started the erection of the present large mill by taking out the old mill entirely, enlarging the foundation greatly and putting in of a two-band saw mill complete. The work took a greater part of the summer to accomplish, but some sawing was done in the fall. As soon as possible the planning mill was moved to the present site and in 1900 a good season's work was done and the benefits to the city were very great.

"Each year has marked an advance in the amount cut, men employed and the wages paid, until today it has a capacity of, and does cut one and one-half million feet of lumber a week, running twenty hours out of every twenty-four employing over 300 men and paying out about $16,000 each a month in wages. Most of the logs are brought across the lake and down the river a distance of nearly 200 miles, about five million are shipped in by rail.

"The planning mill, in connection, is one of the most complete in the state, making it possible to fill any order that may come in; and for this reason from six to ten carloads of lumber, in orders, are shipped every day, besides an immense quantity retailed direct to consumers from the yard.

The officers of the institution are Chas. J. Winton, president; Walter Alexander, vice president; John D. Ross, treasurer; D. N. Winton, general manager.

PROWLERS TO PLAY PIRATES OCTOBER 11TH

Local Eleven to Oppose Crookston's Strong Offensive Team

Tomorrow afternoon at three-thirty the Prowlers engage in their second home game of the season. The opposition will be the strong Crookston Pirates. This year, Crookston has a husky fast team made up of several lettermen and some reserves from the team which held the Prowlers to a seven to seven tie last year. In Panser, whom many of you will remember as a basketball star, they have a fleet-footed halfback who, behind the proper blocking, will try to show the Prowlers how an open field should be run. In one of their previous games the Pirates beat Red Lake Falls 53-0. This indicates somewhat the strength of the Pirate offense.

The Prowlers are expected to play better ball then they did at East Grand Forks, and if they play up to the standard they set at [illegible], their chances should be very good. The local team has put in two weeks of hard work and is prepared to put up a real battle. Coach Lee is expected to start Jung, Adkins, Peterson, Hetland, Anderson, Mickleson, Al Nelson, Hill, Art Nelson, J and M Nesse. Be sure and come out to see the Prowlers and Pirates do royal battle tomorrow in one of the feature games of the season.

COLUMBUS DAY

Columbus Day, celebrating the anniversary of the arrival of Columbus in America in 1492, will be observed next Saturday, October 12. This day is set aside to commemoration of a man who had the imagination and boldness to think of such a plan (sailing to the East by going West), who knew enough about mathematics, astronomy, and the art of navigation to want to carry it out, and the bull-doggedness to hold to his one idea.

He could not start on such an expedition as planned without very substantial aid, and this it seemed impossible to secure. Men laughed at him—men who afterward would have given their fortunes to have posed as his patrons. First he went to Genoa for aid, then King John of Portugal, and others, but everywhere help was refused. Finally he received aid from Spain. On August 3, 1492 Columbus sailed from Palos with his three little sailing vessels, the Nina, the Pinta and the Santa Maria. Early in the morning of October 12th, they landed on an island which Columbus called San Salvador.

Italy, Spain, ten nations of South America, and the United States observe it in memory of a man of faith, courage, and perseverance.

FIRST P. T. A. MEETING HELD MONDAY NIGHT

Songs, Piano Selections, Reports and Speeches Comprise Program

The opening meeting of the Thief River Falls Parent Teacher's Association was held Monday evening at eight o'clock in the Lincoln High School Assembly. The meeting was held with the purpose of acquainting the parents and teachers.

The meeting was called to order by Mr. A. M. Senstad, president of the P. T. A. The high school chorus, directed by Miss Erma Springen opened the program with two selections entitled "At Pierrot's Door" and "The Lorrelli". A report on the Convention held at Warroad was given by Mrs. Korstad. During the business meeting Mrs. Gaston Ward was elected delegate to the convention which is being held in Detroit Lakes, Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday of this week. At this time Mr. Bye gave a short talk on the coming Teacher's Convention. An address of welcome was given by Rev. E. A. Cooke to which Mr. H. Harrison of the high school faculty replied. A talk was given by Miss Mickelson on "The Values of Kindergarten". The program was concluded by two piano selections by Mrs. Harold Harrison. Lunch was served following the program by a committee composed of Mesdames Nesse-chairman, Booren, Ozeid, Carlisle, G. Ward, H. E. Nelson, Quale, Douglas, R. Lund, and Hess.

BALLY-WHO

Anette S. should get the prize for the heighth of imagination. In English IV the other day she said "One Chink invited twenty other pig tails to a dinner and during the dinner he stabbed all twenty of them." He must have been a tough gentleman like the boys on the second team who were so nicely cleaned by the Crookston Cathedrals.

Seems as though the football boys are getting quite scrappy. At least, their faces show it even after practice.

The social science classes ought to know a few jokes pretty soon. (If they ever will) Wonder where the Coach gets them. Or has he a [illegible] imagination? [illegible] clarinet [illegible] practice the last period [illegible] that Lee referred to them as "[illegible] hall" they might quit. And while we are still on the subject: Mr. Lee ought to have known what the time was Monday, with a clock on the wall, a watch in his vest and a watch on his wrist. Maybe they were all wrong.

Seems as though Vic J. ripped his pants one night crawling thru fences. Why would he crawl thru fences?

After those speeches last week, everybody in the 4th period English IV class ought to know why Lincoln High School needs a lighted fotball field.

If you saw a few students scratching themselves last Wednesday morning, they'd just been on a hay ride the night before.

Bob Oden informs us he came back over the week-end because he got lonesome for that sweet little "Oke Doak". To bad we can't say "Tootsie" It came back because she was lonesome for Art.

The boys on the football seem to have formed the "Whiskers Club." Maybe it's a modified version of "the skin you love to touch." They'll probably need those hairy chins to keep warm in some of the games.

The junior party last Friday night at which the girls were supposed to bring blankets should create more scandal than the hay ride of the sophomore upstarts.

LINCOLN HIGH TIMES

What sophomore boy created great attention one morning by his method of ejecting a member of the feline tribe from the assembly?

What junior girl is never seen without gum? (Doesn't she chew it in a fascinating manner?)

Crookston football game here tomorrow. With three swell cheer leaders the team oughta have plenty of support. How about it? Will you help them?

By the by, your inquiring reporter happens to know confidentially that one of the new members of the faculty, Mr. Harrison, is a swell piano player and me thinks he oughta play for us sometime. How about it?

The Harpsichord

The harpsichord, a popular instrument of the Seventeenth and Eighteenth centuries, produces a tone entirely different from that of the clavichord because strings of the latter are struck by tangents instead of being plucked or twanged by quills.

STAFF CHOSEN FOR PROWLER

Large Groups Selected to Produce Next Prowler

The "Prowler" committee met last Thursday in room 108 for the purpose of electing the 1936 "Prowler" staff. Mr. Claffy presided at the meeting.

The staff which was chosen includes the following: Editor-in-chief, Alice Ann Severson; Business manager, Jack Booren; Assistant business managers, Adrian Lorentson and Stanley Mortenson; Athletic Editor, Victor Jung; Assistant athletic editor, James Nesse; Girls' Sports, Edna Lee; Activity Editor, Lois Engen; Activities, Frances Engel; Art Editor, June Rolland; Assistant art editors, Ardella Gjernes and Rochelle Kielty; Feature Editor, Oscar Bickley; Assistant feature editors, Philip Prichard and Flora Schroeder. The typists have not yet been selected.

The "Prowler" Staff will soon begin work in preparation for the school annual. The senior class has decided that a regular ninety-six page annual will be published this year.

What do you think of the L. H. S. Football squad? All they lack is hustle.

Has the L. H. S. student enough pep to support the team? Passing, but you never get too much pep.

How many cheer leaders do you think we should have? Rooter King and two assistants.

What is your advice to the L. H. S. football player? A player will get from a game what he puts into it. Remember 75% of the game is played above the ears.

Do you think any more subjects should be included in the high school curriculum? It seems to me to be complete, unless a course of how to study be added for seniors.

Do you believe in giving much home work? My assignments can be handled in school.

Did the L. H. S. students fulfill your expectations? Yes, with a few exceptions.

It this your first year of teaching? No I have had four years experience at Park River, N. Dak.

What did you think of Thief River Falls the first time you entered it? I was bewildered. I got lost and had a hard time getting out.

Nickname: "General"

What do you think of the public address system? Fine. It cuts out the hustle and bustle of meeting in an assembly.

What is your advice to the L. H. S. students? Have your fun in the right place. Be serious at the proper time. Remember there is a time and place for everything.

PROWLER

A week ago the "Prowler" staff was selected. Early? Yes, but for the kind of annual expected this year, an early start will not only be helpful, but necessary.

The graduating class of 1936 is determined to put out a better "Prowler" than has been issued since 1929. To this end the staff will begin work immediately. In the sports' department, football accounts are in order. The Junior-Senior Masquerade now is foremost in the social whirl. Debate work is about to begin.

Each item will be worked out as it comes up, and, when spring rolls around, we won't be staring a lot of work in the face.

ITALO-ETHIOPIA CLASH

The eyes of the world are on Ethiopia and Mussolini (otherwise known as Italy). What does their WAR mean to us, as students in a secondary school? It means nothing except history, let us hope! As soon as it acquires a wider meaning; as soon as it means leaving home to go and shoot somebody you haven't seen before, then it is something more than a headline! It is a thing to be dreaded and avoided!

When the World War was raging, we knew little of it. Now, should Europe tangle again, we will be aware of it; Very much so! Frankly, we don't want to experience it!

Of course, if the United States finds cause to fight; that is, were a REAL cause to come up, then by all means, should we support it. A defensive war in its correct terms is the only just war. And how can you have a war with only defensive fighting?

If they want to fight, let them keep it over there!

ETIQUETTE

Here are some of the most important rules which should be regarded when a person is in some public place, such as the movies, a program, a concert, or any other such place.

At a movie don't read anything aloud from the screen. Take it for granted that everyone around can read and that they do not need your assistance. Don't repeat after the speakers in a movie, a joke, or any other remark. Everyone else has heard as well as you and your speaking only disturbs others. Don't whistle, ring, hum, or tap the tunes familiar to you. Above all, don't talk in the movies as this annoys people more than anything else you may do.

Some of the rules which govern our behavior at the movies also apply to our high school assembly programs. The most important of these is the one about talking to the person sitting next to you while the speaker is talking. This is not only being very rude to the speaker but it is annoying to others who may be sitting near you and who wish to listen to the speaker. Rattling papers of various kinds is also very annoying. Passing gum and candy to everyone sitting near you; moving the seats back and forth, and annoying in various ways the people seated near you give other people the impression that you have no manners or that you never use those which you have.

Don't talk, don't chew gum and candy, don't rattle papers, and don't do anything which may annoy other people are the rules which apply in general to your behavior in any public place.

Overlooks Palestine

Haifa is the principal port of Palestine, and is a modern city, being little more than a century old. From Mount Carmel, above the city, the view embraces half of Palestine. Mount Carmel was one of the resorts of the Prophet Elijah.

OR SOMETHING

"That little boy of yours is a great talker."

"Yes, indeed. He ought to make a great insurance agent when he grows up."

KNOWLEDGE

"What's the matter, old man, broke?"

"I'm worse than broke. I'm overdrawn with all the people I know who have money to lend."

SECOND ASSEMBLY PROGRAM TUESDAY

The Lombards, Well Known Stars, to Appear in Auditorium

Those nationally popular entertainers, the Lombards, Harry and Lela, will be here for your enjoyment at the next assembly program on Tuesday, Oct. 15. The Lombards are radio, opera, and vaudeville stars as well as artist musicians.

This extraordinary company will present one of its picturesque and entertaining programs of costumed musical sketches from both opera and recent musical comedy successes. The entire production is elaborately costumed and staged. The program is varied with piano and whistling solos and humorous selections.

Some of the selections to be heard are "Old Refrain", "Sweet Mystery of Life", and "The Armorer's Song" from Robin Hood. Those on the humorous division are "Grand Opera Before Breakfast," "If Washington Should Come to Life Today," and "His Home Town Girl."

This program with its beautiful music promises to be a comedy that you'll recall for years.

We quote the following from the platform world:—"The ever popular and always dependable Harry and Lea Lombard closed the evening with one of their delightful and informal programs of music and humor. Here are two of the really great entertainers of the day—two royal entertainers, The Lombards."

MEET THE PROWLERS

Adrian Lorentson, 131 pounds, 5 feet 7 inches, senior, guard. "Ade" is one of the 1935 editions of the miniature guards. Even though he is the lightest regular on the team, he is perhaps the toughest. He can take a lot of punishment and be right there to give some, too, if a play comes anywhere near him. In addition to his regular guard position, he is Jung's understudy at center.

Pomeroy Hill, 140 pounds, 5 foot 7 inches, sophomore, back. "Pom" is a newcomer to Prowler football. Last year he attended school at Fargo, N. D. He has been doing a large percentage of the ball carrying this year and is perhaps the shiftiest man on the team. His specialty is long returns on punts. He has often evaded men who were right on top of him as he received a kick to return the ball for 20 or 30 yards.

Alfred Nelson—140 pounds, 5 feet 9 inches—junior, back. "Bud", in his first year on the eleven, has made a name for himself as a great tackler. His work at halfback on defense is very good, and he is fast enough to play a wingback position where speed is needed for running reverses. In addition to football he held down a forward position on the second team in basketball last season and is looked upon as an outstanding varsity candidate this year.

Donald Olson, 148 pounds, 5 feet 11 inches, junior end. "Don" is one of last year's reserves and is playing end on this year's eleven. His best work is on offense in catching passes. He was a member of the second team in basketball and is president of the junior class.

MUSIC NOTES

The competitive examinations for positions in various sections of the band are being given this week. After this week, anyone may challenge someone else on the playing of the scales.

A new double bass B flat horn and an alto clarinet have been purchased by the school board. These instruments will be played respectively by Wesley Burrell and Jack Booren.

From now on, rehearsals will be held twice a week if it is possible to use the auditorium.

SENIOR TELLS OF TRIP TO ITASCA

Iris Ayers, Lincoln Student, Wins Trip in Club Work

(Editor's note—Iris Ayers, a senior in Lincoln High School, was recently awarded a trip to Itasca Park in recognition of her 4H Club work. In the following article she relates some of her experiences.)

In the spring of 1934 the "Conservation of Wild Life" Activity was added to our 4-H Club projects in Minnesota. Since that time, I have been enrolled in this activity. Last week I was awarded a trip to Itasca State Park, given to the winner in each county. This camp was held from September 26-30. We camped at the Forester's Camp and slept in log cabins on the shore of Lake Itasca. We were privileged to hear addresses from some of the best known naturalists in the state.

Itasca Park is one of the best places to study wild life in Minnesota. The park is under the jurisdiction of the Division of Forestry, Department of Agriculture and all wild life is protected therein.

Our field trips included a trip to Cass Lake, and a visit at the nursery there. It is the largest nursery in the world, having produced nearly 17,000 bushels of tree seed in 1934. We also visited several lakes in the park, Douglass Lodge, the Pageant grounds, beaver dam, Preacher's Grove, and climbed the 100 foot Lookout Tower in the park.

On the way home we stopped in Bemidji, and I visited the college there. I talked to both Dorothy Traver and Dorothy Rau, who are attending school there.

We returned home with the realization that we had been nearer to the Giver of every good and perfect gift.

Iris Ayers.

SENIOR CLASS RINGS CHOSEN LAST WEDNESDAY

Seniors Choose This Year's Rings at Special Class Meeting

The members of the senior class ring committee met last Wednesday afternoon for the purpose of selecting a few rings from which the senior class would make the final decision as to what their class ring would be. The ring committee includes the following: Arthur Nelson, James Nesse, Audrey Anderson, Annette Simonson, Violet Anderson, Victor Jung, Thomas Magnuson, and Jack Booren.

The ring that the senior class chose is one that all seniors will be proud to wear. The head of the ring has a black shield on which T. R. F. is printed. Below this shield Lincoln is printed in gold letters. Extending up on both sides of the shield are two gold bars, representing portals of knowledge. The background of the head is of white gold. On both sides of the ring 1936 is set in a modernistic design.

The ring will cost seven dollars. It will be received by the student ten days after he has placed his order. The senior will be allowed to have his three initials engraved on the underside of the band of the ring.

On the same afternoon a general senior class meeting was held in the rear of the assembly to decide on a ring of which all students would approve. The students voted almost unanimously in favor of the ring finally selected.

WOLF LOSES FAST RACE WITH CAR AT NIGHT

Ada.—W. C. Ripley, of Ada, has an experience which he might well send in to his namesake of Believe It or Not fame, and incidently has an extra $15 in his pocket as a result of that occurrence. Ripley was driving east of Ada at night when an animal came out of the ditch. He at first believed it to be a dog, but as his headlights played on the animal running ahead, he discovered that it was a wolf. As the wolf ran from one side of the road to the other, Ripley followed, with his lights turned on the fleeing animal at all times. After a chase of possibly half a mile, during which the car had to be speeded up to nearly 63 miles an hour, the wolf was struck and killed. Ripley loaded up his game and brought it to Ada, where he collected a bounty of $15 for the hide.

DISCOVERS FIVE KITTENS IN SMALL JELLY GLASS

Chaska.—Quintuplets that have it all over the famous Dionne babies in one respect are boasted in Chaska. When Mrs. Louis Winkelman heard a mewing in her basement recently she investigated and found that a quart fruit jar was no longer filled with jelly but with kittens. When the little felines were extricated from the jar, it was found that there were five of them packed into the small space. They had just been born a day or two before and were all alive. How they got into the jar and kept alive no one knows.

A Supreme Achievement in Gasoline Chemistry

An Amazing Stride Forward in Gasoline Quality

THIS is the story of a new . . . decidedly different . . . decisively superior gasoline.

A gasoline made by a process utterly novel in the petroleum industry.

A process developed, proved, and perfected in the Phillips laboratories and refineries. A process which not only gives you a vastly improved motor fuel, but also plays an important part in conserving our country's valuable petroleum reserves.

Pioneered by Phillips, this miracle of modern chemistry rearranges the atoms of high-explosive vapors and transforms them into stable, high-octane, outstandingly active gasoline.

This is the superlative product which will now enrich and fortify every gallon of Phillips 66.

The result is a gasoline more obedient to your wishes than ever before . . . a gasoline which actually steps up pick-up and peps up power still further . . . a gasoline which yields more mileage because it gives up more of its energy to each piston stroke . . . a gasoline so lively that it sets new records for fast starting.

Note well the name of the process: Polymerization—or POLY, for short. Mark the word well in your memory, because it is acclaimed as today's greatest advance in gasoline manufacture. Never before in the history of refining has any invention excited so much attention and interest. Again, Phillips has blazed a new trail! Again, Phillips leads in lifting the quality of motor fuel to higher levels of performance and value!

Remember, Phillips 66 is everything it has always been, PLUS! That "plus" is POLY. Hence, when you Phill-up with Phillips 66 POLYmerized, at no increase in cost, you can confidently expect that this greater gasoline will set new standards of service and value for your money.

Inevitably, this sensational gasoline will be the talk of motordom. It is now obtainable at all Phillips 66 Stations. Why not be among the first to try a tankful, and benefit from its unrivaled excellence and economy?

AN INVITATION FROM THE PRESIDENT

Polymerization is a scientific revolution in the making of gasoline. This newly invented process produces premium quality motor fuel, not by physical separation of the crude petroleum as heretofore, but by chemical reconstruction of the lighter gases.

Based on my 31 years' experience in the oil business, I can assure you that Phillips Gasoline plus POLYmerization is the finest motor fuel that can be produced by the most modern refinery methods.

I invite you to try a tankful of this unprecedented gasoline. After you do so, I will be glad to have you write me any comments you care to make.

SCHOOL BOARD SETS TAX LEVY SAME AS IN 1934

Total Levy of 39.5 Mills Includes 30 Mills for Maintenance

$32,000 BONDS TO BE RETIRED IN JANUARY

Budget for Coming Year Provides $95,881 for Current Expenses

The board of education of School District 18 embracing the city of Thief River Falls at its October session Monday evening adopted its budget for the coming year and fixed the 1935 tax rate for school purposes at 39.5 mills, the same figure as in 1934.

The rate levied includes 30 mills for maintenance, 8.5 mills for bonds and interest and one mill statutory tax, while last year's levy included 26.2 mills for maintenance, 12.3 mills for bonds and interest and one mill statutory local tax. Supt. Morris Bye explained that the 30-mill maintenance rate is the lowest that can be fixed under a new state law in order to qualify for supplemental state school aid. To avoid an increase in the total rate the levy for bonds and interest was therefore correspondingly reduced.

The budget for the coming year includes a total of $95,881 for current expenses, $4,000 for capital outlay and $38,295 for debt service, this latter item comprising $32,000 for bond retirement and $6,295 for interest. With the retirement of $32,000 in maturing bonds scheduled in January, 1936, the total funded debt of the school district will have been reduced to $108,000.

Included in the item of $95,881 for current expenses are $5,400 for general control, $67,211 for instruction, $13,370 for operation of plant, $2,775 for repairs and replacements of buildings and equipment, $5,110 for transportation and other auxiliary expenses and $1,925 for insurance and other fixed charges.

Mr. Bye informed the board that the local school buildings were inspected October 4 by an inspector for the Minnesota industrial commission, who made recommendations for minor improvements in safety conditions in the Central, Lincoln and Washington buildings. The school health department reported that there have been no contagious diseases among the children this fall and that most of them appear to be in very good physical condition.

MORE CANDIDATES JOIN IN CONTESTS IN CITY ELECTION

Rinkel, Christofferson and Griebstein File for Reelection

With the deadline for filings in the city election November 5 set for next Saturday, numerous candidates apeared during the past week, the only office for which there have been no filings being the post of alderman from the second ward.

Mayor Frank Rinkel, who has been serving since early in the year when he was appointed to succeed Rev. E. L. Tungseth, resigned, was the first to file for that office, and up to this morning there were no other entries.

Carl Christofferson, present alderman-at-large, who is completing his fourth term as member of the council, filed this morning to succeed himself. Henry O. Melby also filed for one of the two posts as alderman-at-large.

Emil Griebstein, present first ward alderman, has filed for that office, and he will be opposed by William J. Douville. John Baker, employed by the Math Barzen company, filed this morning for alderman from the third ward, and Lloyd Aines entered his name Wednesday for the fourth ward aldermanic post.

No additional candidates have appeared for the office of municipal judge, the aspirants being Lars Backe, Lincoln Arnold and F. J. Dudley. Mrs. Thora Nelson is the sole candidate for city treasurer.

FARM SITUATION DISCUSSED HERE BY CHRISTIANSON

Must Recover Foreign Markets, Says Congressman in Address Here

Devoting his address to a discussion of the agricultural situation in this country and to a consideration of the mounting national debt, Congressman Theodore Christianson of Minneapolis was the principal speaker Saturday afternoon in the Auditorium featuring the final day of the fall festival.

Also present was Bridge Engineer M. J. Hoffman of the state highway department, bringing greetings from his organization which recently completed the project for the beautification of the approaches to the new bridge in this city. He was accompanied by Division Engineer A. O. Torgerson of Detroit Lakes and Maintenance Engineer Al Graves of Crookston.

The program, over which Gorman Thompson, president of the Junior Civic and Commerce Association, presided, opened with selections by the St. Hilaire band, followed by welcoming remarks by City Attorney Theodore Quale acting for Mayor Frank Rinkel. After a selection by the Land O' Lakes quartet, W. E. Dahlquist introduced Congressman Christianson.

Asserting that this nation still has some way to go before it emerges from the depression, the speaker stated that American agriculture is built on the basis of export markets and that permanent farm prosperity cannot be restored until foreign markets have been recaptured, adding that crop restriction plans cannot be accepted as a permanent solution.

He expressed the opinion that reclamation projects designed to put more land under cultivation should not be carried on while acreage reduction is being enforced. As a third point in his argument he contended that foreign food products should be kept out of the United States.

Mr. Christianson devoted the remainder of his address to a discussion of the large expenditures now being made by the federal government and their effect on the national debt, which he said amounted to more than 29 billion dollars at the close of the last fiscal year. The burden of public and private debts, he said, is the chief cause of the depression, and there must be retrenchment before there is any lasting recovery.

FOURTH ANNUAL RAM EXCHANGE DAY IS SUCCESS

26 Animals Are Exchanged or Sold at Fair Grounds Saturday

Pennington county held its fourth annual ram exchange day at the fair grounds Saturday. Thirty-four rams were brought in and twenty-six of them were sold or exchanged. This has become an annual event for the sheep breeders in this territory.

The thing most noticeable was that many of the rams were very old and it is going to be necessary in the near future to get in some younger rams to replace them. All purebred rams of any desirable type of conformation were disposed of easily.

A number of purebred lamb rams were sold with the idea of raising them for service next year. The purebred breeders in this county expect that next year they will have a considerable number of yearling rams for sale. It is hoped that at the exchange day next year, twenty to thirty purebred Shropshire and Hampshire rams will be available for sale.

About seventy-five farmers interested in rams were present to look them over and buy or exchange them.

COUNTY STAYS DRY BY NEARLY 2 TO 1 DECISION

Vote Monday Against Permitting Sale of Liquor Was 1,770 to 1,005

ONLY ONE WARD IN CITY VOTES FOR SALE

Dry Margin Is Larger Than Was Registered Two Years Ago

That dry sentiment in Pennington county has gained strength during the two years since the repeal of the prohibition amendment is indicated by the fact that county residents Monday voted down a proposal to permit the sale of intoxicating liquors in the county by a bigger margin than they voted down repeal September 12, 1933.

The vote Monday was 1,770 in favor of prohibiting the sale of liquor and 1,005 in favor of sale. Two years ago the vote was 1,399 against repeal to 1,114 in favor.

All wards in the city but the first registered a majority in opposition to permitting liquor sales. Polk Center was the dryest township in the county, the tabulation of votes revealing 37 votes against the sale of liquor and none in favor.

The official canvass of votes as checked Wednesday at the court house was as follows, the question voted on being "Shall the sale of liquor be prohibited?":

ROCKSBURY GIRL DIES IN MISHAP EAST OF WARREN

Pearl Hanson Killed When Hit by Car; Companion is Injured

Pearl Hanson, 18, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Hanson of Rocksbury, and granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Engelstad, was killed Monday evening when struck by a car as she was walking on Highway 1 three miles east of Warren.

Lorraine Berg, 18, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Selmer Berg who reside east of this city, was injured in the mishap and is recovering in a Warren hospital. The car that hit the girls was driven by Ralph Neegard.

Sheriff Marshall Kays of Marshall county said the boy told him he did not see the girls who were walking along the right side of the road, the highway being oil treated and the girls wearing dark clothes. Miss Hanson sustained a broken neck and was thrown into the ditch by the impact. The girls had been picking potatoes in the Warren vicinity and were on their way home when the accident occurred. No inquest was to be held, it was announced.

Funeral rites for Miss Hanson will be conducted Friday afternoon from the Scandinavian Evangelical Free church in this city, Rev. J. O. Jacobsen officiating.

Born in Rocksbury in 1917, she is survived by her parents, a brother Dennis and three sisters, Florence, Anna and Fern, in addition to a wide circle of more distant relatives including thirteen uncles, four aunts and 31 cousins.

Graduated from the Northwest School of Agriculture in Crookston in 1934, Pearl had been active for a number of years in 4-H club work and had won free trips to the Minnesota state fair in 1932 and 1933 and again this fall.

350 PRESENT AT BANQUET FRIDAY FETING SOO LINE

Company Heads and Leaders of Brotherhoods Are Honored

A group of 350 residents of the city, including a large number of railroad employes, assembled in the Trinity church parlors Friday evening for a banquet arranged by the Civic and Commerce association as a tribute to the Soo Line for its important contribution to the economic life of the Thief River Falls community.

Musical selections were provided by the high school reed quintet under the direction of S. P. Orwoll, after which Dr. A. E. Jacobson, officiating as toastmaster, called on Paul Lundgren, secretary of the civic group, to extend a welcome in behalf of his organization. A. C. Peterson, superintendent of the Winnipeg division of the Soo, gave the response and introduced a group of Minneapolis officials of the Soo Line headed by F. R. Newman, vice president.

O. C. Paulson, local manager of the Railway Express agency, introduced C. A. Mall, superintendent, and C. D. Lynch, traffic supervisor, of the northern division, with headquarters in St. Paul.

G. W. Hawes, who served as the first Soo agent in Thief River Falls, had just begun to discuss his early experiences when he was interrupted by an intruder garbed as a railroad worker who engaged Assistant Superintendent W. H. Mann in a heated argument. Police Chief A. H. Stenberg was about to eject the man when Dr. Jacobson interceded and it developed that the stranger was one of a pair of entertainers provided by the visiting officials, following which the pair provided a group of harmonica selections and other numbers.

Brooks Jones of Minneapolis, general chairman of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen spoke briefly, after which Miss Fern Barnett provided two piano solos. A. M. Senstad, local chairman of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, told of the cordial relations existing between the brotherhoods and the Soo Line, and C. E. Helquist, president of the recently organized Federation of Union Railway Workers, told of the aims of his group in the direction of promoting rail shipments.

The program closed with a series of humorous stories well told by J. E. Palmer, general attorney for the Soo, who said he was somewhat confused by the argument as to whether the Soo Line made Thief River Falls or Thief River Falls made the Soo Line.

The banquet, arrangements for which were in the hands of Robert J. Lund, was efficiently served by members of the Trinity Ladies Aid.

By A. I. Harris

The Division of Women and Children, State Industrial Commission, reports that during the month of September approximately 100 major violations of various labor laws relating to the employment of women and minors were found by the investigators. Of these violations 10 were for paying minors less than the minimum wage, 40 for working women in excess of the legal maximum of 54 hours, or failure to keep required records of working hours, 2 were for illegal employment of minors under 18 years in beer parlors, and 30 represented failure to comply with state sanitation regulations.

Food for hot lunches in rural schools during the winter months was assured with the announcement by L. P. Zimmerman, SERA administrator, that the surplus commodities division will be ready to function within about 60 days.

Already 3,216,000 pounds of canned meat and 420,000 pounds of California prunes have been allotted to Minnesota for distribution and buyers are in the New York, Chicago and San Francisco commodity markets contracting for supplies of dairy products which are expected to be available in 30 or 60 days.

Both food and raw materials will be distributed to relief clients by the SERA surplus commodities division under the same general plan as followed out last winter. More than 278,400 pounds of evaporated milk have been allotted to Minnesota for November.

Mr. Zimmerman urged counties to apply for sewing projects stating that the SERA now has on hand 200,000 yards of material for dresses and a large amount of cotton and wool for comforters.

The food for hot lunches will be distributed to schools and other accredited agencies requesting them Mr. Zimmerman explained.

Now and then there appears some newspaper comment indicating that a few persons still think the only function of the state drivers license bureau is to issue licenses. Actually, the issuing of a drivers license is only the beginning. In fact the issuance of a license in itself means nothing to the cause of public safety unless it is followed by constant checking of the accident record of every driver and the suspension or revocation of licenses where such action is indicated under the law. Even this, of course, would fall of effect except for the cooperation of local police officers and sheriffs in enforcing the act of the license bureau. Safety groups everywhere are urging rigid enforcement of standard drivers license laws as one means of controlling the reckless drivers who every day spatter our highways with the blood of innocent men, women and children.

In line with its "quality" egg program for 1935, the state Department of Agriculture has available interpretations of the egg law. In short, the laws provide that every buyer of uncandled eggs must have an egg buying license conspicuously posted in quarters adequate for candling and grading eggs. In addition, candling certificates shall be placed in and on each case of eggs. All eggs must be candled and graded and a return statement made to the farmer showing the number of ones and twos in the lot. All cold storage eggs must be labeled as such. It is estimated by Lou Broderick of the agriculture department that if Minnesota could command a cent a dozen premium on its eggs it would mean a boost in farm income of more than a million dollars annually.

In matters of peace and social welfare, the Scandinavian countries lead the world. Because Minnesota is perhaps the most advanced of the United States in social thinking and because it is the chosen state of Norwegian immigrants, the visit of Wilhelm Morgenstierne, Norwegian minister to this country, to Minnesota on Leif Ericson day was doubly significant. Mr. Morgenstierne declared that not only do the United States and Norway "have the same colors in their flags, but also the same ideals in their hearts." Further, he said, "never before has democracy had to face a more serious crisis than it faces today. The very meaning, the foundation, of democracy—the right and the duty of the majority of any nation to shape the destinies of that nation—is being challenged." Apparently, Mr. Morgenstierne is well aware of the fascist threat in America."

The Minnesota State Fire Prevention association is attempting to make young students conscious of the fire peril. In line with its educational program it is offering 15 cash prizes for the best essays on fire prevention written by Junior High School students and freshmen in high schools. The first prize will be $25, the second, $20; the third, $15; the fourth, $10; the fifth, $5 and ten prizes of $2.50 each. The topic is: "What I can Do to Prevent Fires." The essay must be confined to 200 words, written in ink or typewritten on one side of the paper. To date hundreds of essays of high quality have been received. All schools have been notified.

Farm fires can be laid to six causes, according to Dewey Johnson, state fire marshal. In order of their importance they are: Lightning, chimney and defective heating apparatus, matches and smoking, spontaneous ignition, gasoline and kerosene, electricity. These fire hazards, Mr. Johnson said, are easily eliminated by protective equipment and by reasonable caution. In particular, he advises that all farm buildings be safe guarded by lightning devices. Wire fences should be grounded to protect human beings and live stock.

Using Lots of Straw for Bedding is Profitable

What to do with surplus straw is a big problem on many farms. Some farmers burn straw; others do not believe this is wise. S. B. Cleland, farm management specialist of the agricultural extension service, University Farm, St. Paul, recommends that farms having surplus straw use it very liberally as bedding for livestock, thereby getting as much of it as possible mixed with the manure.

Such a plan not only gets rid of a lot of straw, but keeps the livestock more comfortable. Moreover, it provides for getting the straw back on the land, when the manure is spread, thereby returning considerable humus and some fertility to replace that removed by the grain crop. Another great advantage of this liberal use of bedding is that it helps save the very valuable animal manure, especially through soaking up the liquids which which are especially rich in nitrogen and phosphorus.

This suggestion is highly endorsed by livestock husbandman and by Geo. H. Nesom, extension soils specialist, who says another good way to convert straw into manure is to allow livestock to run to the stack. In this way a large amount of straw will be trampled underfoot and mixed with manure from the animals.

Growing With Your Child

Do Children Need to Play?
By the Institute of Child Welfare, University of Minnesota

"What difference does it make whether they need to play or not? They're going to play, anyway!"

That is the attitude expressed by a good many people who don't stop to think that anything as universal and all-satisfying as play must have some more meaning than is casually assigned to it. Even today, when children's needs are a great deal better understood than they've ever, been before, there are few enough people who see in play its real significance. To interrupt a child who is "just playing" is a common thing, even tho the interruption may be entirely unnecessary.

Why do children need to play? Well, first of all, they need to play in order that they may grow, both mentally and physically. Most of us would agree that children need exercise if bones and muscles are to develop as they should, but many of us haven't thought of there being any connection between play and brain development. A recently described case makes this connection clear. A boy had his hands swathed while he was still an infant, owing to a skin condition which encouraged his scratching himself. Later on he contracted the thumb-sucking habit and his hands were again wrapped so that his use of them was severely restricted. Up to the age of six his hands were always covered at night, and tied, spread out above his head. When he was seen at this time his mental development was so retarded that it was at first supposed that he was inherently very dull. But when put into a normal situation, and allowed the full use of his hands, he progressed so fast as to make it obvious that his supposedly permanent retardation was the result solely of his crippling environment.

This is of course an unusual case, but the same type of occurence is going on all the time, in a less noticeable way: the baby who is not allowed to move about freely, and who talks late; or the blind baby who does not learn to use his hands because he cannot see what other people are doing.

A second reason why children need to play is that play encourages the use of imagination, initiative, and self-reliance. Imagination, if not harnessed to activity, may lead into a world without solid foundations: hence the desirability of letting children test out their play ideas that otherwise might continue to drift hazily in their heads. The child who has the opportunity to try things out for himself will develop a practical self-criticism that will be of use to him always. No matter how original his ideas may be, how many possible solutions to a problem he may think of, it's the working out of the bright ideas that is valuable. Whether a child is making a sailboat, building a tower of blocks or devising a costume for a puppet, he must translate his ideas into actualities before he can judge as to their value.

Self-reliance comes only from doing for oneself. It can't possibly be built up by having things done for one. The child who is allowed a sufficient amount of freedom in which to revel in the play activities natural to his age is developing habits of planning his own affairs and relying on his own abilities that will be mighty useful to him later on in connection with his work. If on the other hand, he has some one constantly hovering over him, suggesting that he may fall, that this is dangerous, and if he does that he'll get his clothes dirtied, the attitude he is going to feel toward this tyrant who is always interfering may hang over into adult life, and a chip-on-the-shoulder attitude toward his boss be the lamentable result.

Last of all, play, when other children are included, becomes a child's best possible training in how to get along with people—one of the things most necessary to his success in life.
